Last week's SMUSA-sponsored AIDS Awareness activities were marked by a distinct lack of participation from the student body.

At one lecture, with Father Petit, two students attended ten students questioned.

She stated that there is still a stigma attached to the disease, the idea being that it is a "gay disease." "There is a feeling that if one is seen attending any of the activities, people will think that they are homosexual," said Jamie Reid, also of Student Services.

Ferguson added, "the students seem to feel that it is a distant problem, that it won't touch them. It's a 'them not us' mentality." There is a homophobic attitude in a large percentage of the student body.

With other students, the problem is mainly apathy, partially caused by overexposure to AIDS information. A large number of

"It's a 'them not us' mentality."

were present at another lecture, and Heather Ferguson's rap session attracted only three participants, one of which was a professor.

When asked to comment on the lack of interest, Ferguson, of Student Services, noted that there were many reasons. Among them: apathy, peer pressure, involvement in other activities, and ignorance.

est. Ms. Reid said that it would be a "waste of a valuable community resource" to ask someone with such a busy schedule to speak to such a potentially small audience.

STUDENT UNION REPO MEN?

TORONTO (CUP) — The weasel who reposes your car one day might turn out to be your student council president.

The Ontario legislature’s watchdog Standing Committee on Public Accounts is suggesting that student councils across Ontario collect student loan debts and keep a percentage of the cash.

"The committee asked whether the (education) ministry had considered such measures as turning collections over to such bodies as student associations, who would retain some share of the recoveries," states the committee’s report, released September 2.

"It was felt that this might render the debt more personal than if it is owed to the government, thus creating a greater sense of obligation to pay," it continues.

The study addresses methods of recovering defaulted loans on the Ontario Student Assistance Program (OSAP). The Ministry of Colleges and Universities has written-off $3.6 million in bad loans, or 1.56 per cent, since the program began in 1976.

Student leaders are unhappy with the proposal. Duncan Iasion, a researcher with the lobby group the Ontario Federation of Students, said the government should concentrate on the reasons students don’t pay back their loans rather than the logistics of debt collection.

Bill Gardiner, president of the students’ council at the University of Toronto, said council’s role is to represent the interests of students.

"Student councils aren’t set up to be loan collectors. We don’t have the staff or philosophy to do that."

Senior policy officer for OSAP Randy Benta said the committee’s proposal is not necessary: "We’re not sure we’re going to give it a lot of consideration."

Benta said one problem with the proposal is that it will bring more contact with the home institution once they graduate.

Helena Moncrieff, press secretary to Lyn McLeod, minister of colleges and universities, also doubts the ministry will act on the committee’s proposal.

When the auditor’s report came out the first time, he (Douglas Archer, provincial auditor) was quite satisfied with what the ministry was doing," she said.

Other suggestions from the committee, which was conducting a regular review of the provincial auditor’s 1987 report, include ensuring that the processing and distribution of aid cheques be separated, and that periodic reviews be carried out to assess ownership and market value of cars, an asset which loan officials say is often conceded by students.

Peter Adams, the Liberal representative in Peterborough in the provincial legislature and a committee member, said the government should be as “creative” as possible in recovering the $25 million remaining in defaulted loans since 1978.

"If students are involved (in the collection of debts), then the whole student body would be brought into the process," said Adams, adding that peer pressure would act as a strong incentive for students to pay.

In the fiscal year 1988-89, Ontario’s Grit government has budgeted $410 million for loans and grants to 90,000 students.

Stephen Lewis Speaks to the Faithful

by Jerry K. Thomas

Halifax area New Democrats gathered at the Lord Nelson Hotel on Thursday, September 22 to hear former ambassador to Canada to the United Nations, Stephen Lewis, speak at a fundraising event at which Lewis, who currently holds a Distinguished Visitation in Canadian Culture at the University of Toronto, has returned to active participation in partisan politics. The Halifax event was the first “political” speaking engagement since his resignation as Ambassador in which Lewis was able to openly discuss his views about Canadian issues.

Speaking to over 400 NDP supporters, each of which paid $35 - $100 per plate for the dinner, Lewis was introduced by Alexa McDonough, leader of the Nova Scotia New Democrats. McDonough said that “anyone who knows Stephen Lewis will know how glad he is not to have to suffer being referred to as ‘his excellency’.” She also noted that Lewis’ appointment as Ambassador to the U.N. will “undeniably be looked on at Brian Mulroney’s finest political deed.”

Lewis, in reply, noted that Alexa McDonough has “enriched the public life of Nova Scotia forever... for, IAlexa, I would very gladly lay down my life for only all the wants in my vote.” He went on to say that his resignation from his appointment to the U.N. has allowed him to return to “the quest of the left... I have been well behaved these past four years.” He described his nearly four years in the U.N. position as simply “a microscopic dot on the inexorable road to socialism. It is tough, struggle, and the forces of darkness inevitably take their toll.”

Lewis has already made statements that he is “not hard to be a Canadian Diplomat at the U.N.,” and has to be "individually embraced with respect.”

Squatter Gets Donation

TORONTO (CUP) — A squatter in his 40th day protesting Victoria College’s proposed hotel development plan has been given $66 — one week’s rent — by another student.

Fourth year history and classics student Greg Sewell is challenging the college administration’s order that 27 students leave their residence to clear the way for a luxury hotel. He was recently billed by Victoria College for rent during his illicit sit in.

Rick Campbell, a part-time University of Toronto student, donated $66 towards Sewell’s rent last week.

"Well, I’ve got the money, a job. I can afford to pay one week. Maybe that’ll help him. Maybe somebody else will contribute," said Campbell.

He also hopes the gesture will embarrass the U of T student council in supporting Sewell.

The college, affiliated to the University of Toronto, wants to lease the land to developers Huang and Danzey Ltd for $1 million a year. The money from the deal will go toward renovations, a new residence, and funding academic programs, according to administrators.

"I’m not doing this to piss anyone off," said Sewell. "I’m doing this to provoke discussion on the development and to help ensure that Vic College does what’s best for Vic College.

Student councillor Rachel Foulkes, leading the opposition to the land deal, has requested the U of T council give Sewell 10 weeks’ rent. That request is now being reviewed. Victoria College council has already condemned the deal.

No More Pub Nights at U of T For Underaged

TORONTO (CUP) — An experiment which allowed underaged students into pubs by forcing legal drinkers to wear plastic hospital bracelets is over.

Imjin College, affiliated with the University of Toronto, introduced the new system last year. Campus Beverage Services (CBS) cancelled the program this spring.

"People were drinking who shouldn’t have been drinking," said CBS assistant manager Peter Smith.

But Martha MacEachen, president of the University on T’s student council, said the program worked well. And Irniz pub organizer Rick Campbell of Toronto, has no memory of anyone under-age drinking incident last year.

Officials at the Liquor License Board of Ontario also say the university could be violating the Ontario Human Rights Code by denying minors entry to campus pubs and bars.

"The Human Rights Code says that (with a dining lounge licence) you can’t force students to stay away. They’re entitled to be admitted," said LLBO lawyer David Benda.

The dining lounge licences held by most campus cafeterias allow those under 19 to enter, but not to drink. If students would like service for student pub hosts to throw them out.

Campbell said the CBS move is the result of the university administration’s pressure. Lawsuits are making other university administrations liable for alcohol-related accidents.

Volunteer Resource Centre Opens

by Maureen Googoo
HALIFAX — A grand opening of the Metro Volunteer Resource Centre was held on Sept. 28 to officially introduce the Centre to the Halifax - Dartmouth area.

Many of the 150 agencies registered with the centre were in attendance: from well-established organizations like the Canadian Cancer Society to organizations just starting out. His Honour, The Honourable Alan R. Abraham, Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia, officially opened the centre, stating that "volunteers provide the key to the quality of life." In an interview, Martha Shinyei, executive-director of the Metro Volunteer Resource Centre, explained that students are especially needed to fill the estimated 650 different volunteer job opportunities available.

"The resource centre is extremely beneficial to students," explained Ms. Shinyei. "It can help and 'enhance to develop' job skills in chosen career related work. Also, volunteer work can seem to gain you extra employment position for a student. In other words, develop connections." Ms. Shinyei also explained that employers more likely hire a person a model for the centre, researching measures, demonstrating the needs for such a centre, and establishing a permanent, well-funded Volunteer Resource Centre for the community.

The purpose of MVRC is to encourage people to serve the community with previous volunteer work because it reflects that person's positive attitude towards employment.

There are all sorts of volunteer work available: a total of 20 attendances among those chosen, from the like of Counselling Services, Hospital and Health Care, and Sports and Recreation. As one of the co-ordinators at the Metro Volunteer Resource Centre, the idea of a resource centre for the Metro area began about three or four years ago by first forming a working committee. Then the development was put into five formidable stages: of informing the in-house volunteers, organizing other centres established across the country, creating community through volunteer participation and to assist that community in working effectively with volunteers. The centre's program stresses three main themes: the linking of volunteers with charitable agencies, the co-ordination of training within the volunteer sector, and the promotion of the value of volunteer labour.

Faculty Contract Negotiations Mired

by M. DeWolf
PRESS RELEASE:
Negotiations between the Saint Mary's Staff Union (SMSU) and Saint Mary's University are at a near standstill after more than four months of discussions.

The pension iniquity is a primary issue of contention, but reflects many discriminatory practices at the University. Another example is the maternity leave practices to the Faculty Union and to the support staff. Faculty has been offered 95% for a period of 19 weeks PLUS an additional 8 weeks at 95% if these weeks are taken out of the academic year. The Support Staff have been offered 75% for 17 weeks and any additional time will be taken without pay. Even in those first 17 weeks, 60% of the cost would be covered by Unemployment Insurance. Faculty were also offered 50% co-pay for a Blue Cross plan; support staff have been refused this benefit.

Vacation entitlement has been a contentious problem for a number of years. Information on the vacation and holiday entitlements of Atlantic Provinces universities indicates that Saint Mary's support staff get less time than any other comparable unionized group. By proposing that one additional week's vacation be given, provided that current university holidays are considered part of the additional five days, the University administration has offered what amounts to 1/2 to 1 additional day per year, but the issue of restrictions on times when vacations may be taken remains to be agreed upon. Employees with less than 4 years seniority currently receive only 2 weeks vacation, while other universities all receive a third week no later than the second year. The maximum vacation that can be earned is four weeks after 10 years, whereas some universities provide 5 weeks as the maximum.

Last year's salary increase was only 3.9% and the median salary of our members is less than $18,000. This is in an institution which has had an increase in operating grants of 10.1% in 1987/88 and a further increase of 8.7% in 1988/89. In addition, raising enrolments will result in further increases in income from tuition and other fees. Unlike some of our sister institutions, Saint Mary's is financially sound, but many of our members feel that this position has been gained at their expense. Since the inception of the Union, the number of staff has increased by 17% while the student enrollment has almost doubled to the current level of over 4,200 full-time students and over 2,200 part-time students.

Various sources are being approached to provide monetary and other support in the event that a strike is undertaken. If that route is not taken, only options left, students will also be asked to support. However, it will be 5 or 6 weeks before any strike is in sight. Simultaneous problems among other metro universities have led to the recent push by SMSU. So far, no strikes have resulted this year but the fact that Faculty and staff at NSCAD, Dalhousie and Saint Mary's have all had to resort to the services of conciliators suggest a widespread problem in the institutions of higher learning. A strike by TUNS faculty last year lasted only a few weeks after a resolution was found. The SMUSA negotiating team hopes that a strike will not have to be called, but without substantial movement by the university's administration that possibility is looming ever closer.

Pension is one of the most contentious issues. Staff are adamant that pension contributions be increased to provide a reasonable retirement income. Currently, employees contribute 4% and this is matched by the employer for a total of 8% of annual salary; faculty and administration contribute 6% while the university contributes 8% to their respective plans - a difference of 6%.

The contentious issues for this round are seniority, vacations, maternity leave, benefits, pensions and salaries. The union is not satisfied with employer responses to limit excessive overtime, improve scheduling of overtime, improve job evaluation procedures, and to allow job sharing.

The Staff Union represents 120 employees covering clerical, technical and non-professional library support staff. It was organized in 1981 and is the fourth contract to be negotiated; one previous contract (1984) required the assistance of a conciliator to conclude an agreement. In the current negotiations, the union filed a request for the appointment of a conciliator with the Minister of Labour on August 11. They decided to take this action because the parties had reached an impasse on several important issues and the negotiating team had endured several acrimonious meetings in which the employer had demonstrated no apparent flexibility.

A strike was finally anticipated on September 14, but he is not prepared to meet with the parties before October 17. This delay is contrary to the normal practice under the Trade Union Act where meetings usually occur within two weeks of the conciliator's appointment.

The University's negotiators asked the Union to meet while waiting for the assistance of the conciliator. As a result of these meetings, the University Administration has verbally modified some of its proposals but has not materially changed from positions formerly put forth. Indeed, some of the proposals are substantially the same as those made at an earlier stage of the negotiations. The possibility of further movement by the employer appears to be exhausted. After four months at the table, the University Administration has yet to put a monetary package on the table for negotiation and indeed has declined to bring any wage proposal forward before last Monday, October 3.

Library Humidity Causes Death?

MONTREAL (CUP) — The recent death of a John Abbott College employee could have been avoided if administrators had spent money on a dehumidifier, charges a colleague.

Angus Scrimgeour worked through the summer months, during which the temperature in the library once hit 110 degrees. The air conditioning and the humidity was unbearable, said Gary Sims, who works in the college's audio visual department, housed in the same building.

Scrimgeour vomited on his way home from work one day in mid-July, and was taken to hospital. He collapsed and was rushed to a nearby hospital where doctors found that his liver had failed and lungs were filled with water. He died of heart failure a week later.

Co-workers and hospital staff say excessive humidity in the library was a factor in Scrimgeour's death.

Sims said maintenance personnel have told him all necessary equipment exists in place, and all that's needed is the money to put in an actual air conditioning system.

Library staff had sent a memo to college registrar John Watson asking for permission to close down the building if working conditions became unbearable. On June 30, Watson told employees the library could be closed at 2:30 if temperatures hit 90 degrees.

Two more letters concerning humidity and heat problems were sent after Scrimgeour's death. Neither has been replied to.
STUDENTS IN MOTION

by Ian Morrison
SMUSA Vice President (Administration)

"I feel better about myself and stronger than ever before and the opportunity to learn and experience gained are greatly appreciated."

Mike McNell certainly has accomplished a great deal since first enrolling at Saint Mary's in 1978. The 28-year-old Sydney native will graduate in May with a Bachelor of Arts majoring in Economics.

In addition to his studies, Mike is Manager of the Information Desk in the lobby of the Student Centre. "My role is supervision of the functioning, business, and appearance of the desk and this involves inventory, cash, and staffing."

Serving as an employee of SMUSA is not Mike's first involvement with the Students' Association. He served three terms on the Executive of the Students' Representative Council - including an unheralded unprecedented term as President (1980-1982). When asked about his record as President, Mike cites an administrative restructuring process and a strengthened role for SMUSA when negotiating with the university administration as being among his achievements. He also played a vital role in the development of the Canadian Federation of Students (CFS), a national student organization which developed out of a conference hosted at Saint Mary's in 1980. "A more solid business environment began to emerge at the time and I hope that was able to lead to the more organized and influential SMUSA of today."

In 1982, Mike decided to move into the workforce. He spent two years as a field organizer for CPS in the Pacific region before joining the Turner campaign during the 1984 federal election. Working as a Turner volunteer in Vancouver Quadra provided the former President with great opportunity. Mike fondly remembers the campaign as "...a frightening, exhilarating experience. We made a lot of mistakes, but I learned hands-on how to run a campaign."

Turner was elected in his riding and Mike secured employment as the Opposition Leader's constituency assistant. The Sydney native decided to return to school to complete a degree program in September 1987, and he again chose Saint Mary's because of its highly rated Economics department.

Mike is still involved in the Liberal Party and looks forward to pursuing business interests after Convocation. He can often be found and around the Information Desk. Next time you see him, be sure to give him a wave... Mike McNell, student in motion.

Election Fever

Hits SMU

Campaigning is underway for the October 11 and 12 elections on the Students' Representative Council. Ten candidates are bidding for the five available seats on the SRC. The five representatives being elected are the Grad, Mature/Part-Time, Education, Freshman, and Science positions. The race for Grad Rep features two fourth year Commerce students vying for the office. Nancy Duxbury, the Yearbook Editor, and Jim Vickers, Residence Security attendant, have been nominated. Patrick Morand, General Manager of Radio Saint Mary's Association, and Tim Nicholas are running for the Mature/Part-Time position, while Colleen MacDon nel and Kevin MacNeil are seeking the Education portfolio.

Three first year students are running for Freshman Rep. Mark Croft, Chris d'Entremont, and Christian Flynn, all residence students, have filed nomination papers.

Great Furlotte is running unopposed for the Science Rep. According to the Students' Association Constitution, Furlotte must secure the approval of two-thirds of the vote. All other positions require a plurality of the vote.

Any Saint Mary's student can vote in the election, provided they present a valid SMU identification card at any one of the three polling stations on campus. Polls will be open from 10 am - 8 pm both days in the Loyola Colonnade, Student Centre Lobby, and outside the Library.
OPINION

by Hugh Smittlegate

Hey there, this week we’re gonna deal with smoking and smokers. You are probably saying, “not another smoking article.” Well I’m afraid it is another smoking article, except this one is a little different. I don’t believe in attacking people or people who smoke because they have a disgusting habit. After all, it’s no more disgusting than someone who picks their nose in public. However, I dislike smokers just as much as, if not more than, people who pick their nose in public. At least they don’t endanger the health of those around them. I have a radical idea that I would like to propose. Let’s make cigarettes, cigar, and pipe smoking illegal, and those that continue to smoke be arrested at the stake. After all their killing themselves anyway, why not help them along a little.

Think of the money that the Nova Scotia taxpayers could save in ambulance costs to transport the smoker to the hospital, the emer-gency room costs that are needed to prepare the smoker for surgery, surgeons’ salaries to operate on the smoker, the costs of the hospital room and the nurses needed for the smoker while they convalesce; not to mention the costs to businesses in decreased productivity of their workers who smoke, and their greater number of sick days. Surely if you add up all of these costs, and all of the costs I may have forgotten, they will triple or quadruple the amount that the govern-ment brings in from cigarette taxes. This will no doubt result in lower medicine costs, and therefore lower taxes. Yet the only people who will lose from such a plan is the cigarette companies, and they’ve made plenty of money already.

This topic is pertinent to SMU students because of the new designated smoking areas policy that has been implemented this year. Personally, I think the new policy is great, except in the colonade in Loyola. The problem here is that the area with the tables, where most people sit and eat, is the smoking area. The other area with the yellow chairs, where most people just sit and talk, is non-smoking. To me this doesn’t make sense. If I’m eating, I want to sit at a table, but one thing I can’t stand is having someone around me smoking when I’m eating. On the other hand, if I were just going to smoke, it wouldn’t matter where I sat.

Anyone who’s known me for awhile is probably saying, “what a bloody hypocrite!” It’s true that I smoked for nine years. From the ages of thirteen to twenty-two I smoked Players non-filters, perhaps the most racist-smokes available in this country. I loved to smoke. I always had brown stains on my teeth and on my fingers. My breath and my clothes always stunk of smoke, and I was constantly short of breath when doing physical activity. Then on Jan. 3, 1985 I quit smoking cold turkey (a late new years resolution). At first it was pretty bad, I was very tense and hyper, and I blew up at anyone that came near me. This feeling went away soon enough, and after about a month you start to realize that you have it beat. Just don’t go drinking for that first month.

But hey, I’m not here to preach to you, the real reason I wrote this was that I had a job that took me around to the many large supermarkets in the Bedford-Sackville, Snyfield, and Fairview areas. One thing that I saw repeatedly was low-life greasers working in the grocery store, as if there was nothing wrong with it. Fortunately, smoking in grocery stores is illegal here in Halifax, but this pissed me off so badly that I decided to tackle the issue here in the Journal. Anyway, that’s about it for now... see ya.

FILLER

BY SUZANNE MÉHÔT

Okay, after my lapse of last week's column, it is time to return to the column of non-watching. I figured that I would use this column to highlight something that other people have learned to live with, but, of course, just to have to blabber about it. I’m not exactly the most patient of people.

I am an off-campus student, but I spend most of my waking (and non-waking) hours here at the university. It stands to reason that I also partake of the food-services offered here at the university (albeit sometimes against my will). I have to be really hungry. Much to my chagrin, I traveled over the entire campus last Friday, looking for something edible, when it became obvious that not one single food-service operation was open, with the exception of Mar-vor’s Mini-Mart. Now, not only do I never shop in the Mini-Mart due to what I think are inflated prices, but I never buy food there because a person cannot expect to buy what constitutes an entire meal, due to the selection and type of foods offered. And, believe it or not, I like to eat relatively healthy food. Also, the food is not as healthy as something that contains ingredients that I can’t pronounce. So anyway, my quest for a place to eat continued until that at a normal hour when a person would want to eat, no facilities were open for any use. Needless to say, I was a little pissed off, and continued through my day hungry, although I did console myself with some french fries taken on at night.

DEVELOPING NATIONS

Glimmer of hope in Namibia

by Peter L. Twomg

The south-west African nation of Namibia lacks self-determination. It remains a colony, both political and eco-nomic, of South Africa. However, out of this darkness came a glim-mer of light, yet its own representa-tives, the South West African People's Organization (SWAPO), has been reduced to observer status, to refer to the current negotiation for Namibian independence.

Namibia was first visited by Europeans in the fifteenth century. In 1884, it was officially colonized by the Germans and remained a German possession until 1915, when it was 'liberated' by South Africa. South Africa ruled the country on behalf of the Western Allies until 1918. It was then given a legal mandate to govern Namibia by the League of Nations. So began a long period of South African dominance over Namibia.

Namibia means 'country in the Nama language. It is, however, a region rich in natural resources, its reserves of precious metals, gems and fisheries have been ex-ploited by huge multinational cor-porations. The labour is, of course, Namibia’s population. They receive low wages and dan-gerous work, for they neither choose nor legally reject their job.

The people, chiefly Herero and Nama, live under South Africa's racist system of apartheid. South Africa has been ruthless in its treatment of the Namibian people. It maintains more than 100,000 troops and together with the Ko-toet (Africaner for "crowbar"), a unit of secret police, they have brutally tortured, terrorized and murdered thousands of Namibians.

The glimmer of hope referred to earlier came in July when it was announced that South Africa, Cuba, and Angola would enter into peace talks to end the war in Angola. The South African govern-ment and that of the United States have maintained that the presence of Cuban troops in An-gola poses an obstacle to Namibian independence.

Despite a World Court decision in 1971 and U.N. Resolution 435 passed in 1978 declaring South African occupation of Namibia illegal, they have remained. To date, they have been their pullout from Angola. It remains to be seen, however, whether the govern-ment is sincere in its intention to withdraw from Namibia. Scep-ticism must reign, since 1978 Pre-toria has promised three times to leave Namibia.

Rest assured that if a pullout does occur, and free elections are held, SWAPO will form the next government and Sam Nujoma, its president, will lead Namibia out of the colonial period. Next week, I will examine SWAPO and their rule in the pursuit of Namibian independence.

To all Acadia DieHards, c/o The Editor

The bus trip to Acadia was both a success and an adventure. First of all, our football team con-tinued their winning streak by de-feating Acadia 11-10, and secondly, I received a souvenir from the Wolfville RCMP consisting of a $210.00 fine. I imagine my excitement (OH NO!) as the police officer presented me the brilliantly coloured paper. Of course, as usual, monetary fine hurt me financially and I regretted my foolish actions later.

This was not to thank all those students that contributed to my cause, it was very much appreci-ated. Also, I would like to extend a special thanks to Mike Kilger who asked everyone to donate on my behalf. The total final ex-ceeded $160.00 which cut my bur-den in half.

Again, I thank you all!

Word processing made simple.

Talk about manual labor. The only thing more complicated than most word processors is their instruction manuals. You can wade through hundreds of pages of "user interfaces" and "output fonts" or try something far simpler: The Smith Corona PWP 40 Personal Word Processor.

Using PWP 40 is truly an exercise in simplicity. Our easy-to-follow Tutorial DataDisk teaches you that moving blocks of text is a snap, deleting words is a cinch and inserting words is effortless.

In fact, PWP 40 is so incredibly simple to use, you can pick it up in practically no time.

That way, you can spend more of your time writing. And less of your time reading about writing.

Has Democracy Prevailed in Chile?

Yesterday, October 5th, was a historic day in Chile. Depending on whose view you accept, democracy either prevailed or failed in this resource-rich South American country. Buried well back in the pages of some newspapers or left in the editors' circular files are stories of the pivotal plebiscite that occurred yesterday. An estimated seven million people were to have turned out at the polls to cast a yes or no vote.

If the "yes" vote prevailed then dictator Augusto Pinochet will be reinstated to another eight-year term. If the "no" vote prevailed then the ruling military government has one year to hold open elections.

Returning General Pinochet to power will undoubtedly lead to further repression in a country that has already had its share. For fifteen years, since Pinochet was vaulted to power in a CIA-inspired coup d'etat in 1973, he has ruled over a country where political expression, freedom of the press, and other civil liberties have been brutally repressed. Murders, tortures, and kidnappings have been commonplace, and it is always linked to the Security Police.

One example of political repression that occurred recently was revealed in evidence of torture. In the September 14th issue of the New York Times it was reported that opposition television advertisements were censored to omit parts showing a judge accusing intelligence agents of torture.

If the "no" vote has prevailed then Chile is supposed to have its first democratic election since 1970. Many people believe that even if the "no" vote prevails Pinochet will not relinquish power. Past history indicates that Mr. Pinochet does not respect the outcome of democratic elections.

The last one, in which Salvador Allende was elected President, inspired Pinochet to seek assistance from the International Telephone and Telegraph Company (ITT). ITT, whose business interests were threatened when Allende nationalized the copper industry, went to Washington and offered to help with the financing of a destabilization campaign. As a result President Nixon of the United States instructed the CIA to "make the economy scream."

An embargo was placed on Chilean products and the USA exercised their influence in the international banking community to cut Chile off from all foreign assistance. Furthermore the CIA sponsored a restructuring of the military in which officers sympathetic to Pinochet were placed in strategic positions.

After three years of careful preparations Mr. Pinochet's henchmen and the CIA deposed Allende, killing him, and Pinochet declared himself president. Clearly, elections are a nuisance to General Pinochet.

Surveys released this past weekend are contradictory. One poll by an independent Chilean research institute found that an estimated fifty-six percent of the electorate will vote no. Conversely, a government study supposedly reveals that forty-eight percent will vote yes, thus returning General Pinochet to power.

If the "no" vote happens to prevail then the next year promises to be a very interesting one for Chilean politics. Never in fifteen years has Pinochet allowed political dissent that refers to class struggle. Any ideology that contains this notion has been outlawed since the 1980 constitution. Last month General Pinochet lifted a fifteen year ban on constitutional liberties. It is a move that surprised many and may actually lead to peaceful political debate. For the thirteen million Chileans it will be a welcome change.

JOHANNESBURG (CUP) -- Police forces walked in as some 4,000 assembled here on the campus of the University of the Witswatersrand to hear Winnie Mandela discuss the white elections in South Africa, May 4 last year.

The outdoor meeting was banned 10 minutes before it was to start and 129 academic staff and students were detained following an afternoon of violence and tear gassing. In protest, Wits and the University of Cape Town closed on election day, May 6.

In the face of National Party apartheid rule, it has not been easy for South African universities to maintain academic freedom and autonomy, given the extension to the University Education Act which enforces racial separation.

Passed in 1959 despite a massive campaign in which over 7,500 faculty members and students marched in protests in Johannesburg, Cape Town, Durban and Grahamstown, the Act has led to the establishment of separate black schools, forcing universities that wished to remain "open" to black students to seek special ministerial approval.

In their stand against apartheid, the open universities of South Africa -- the universities of Cape Town and of Natal and Rhodes University -- have consistently refused to discriminate on the grounds of race in the admission of students and the appointment of academic staff.

Despite the Act, there has been since 1983 a dramatic increase in the number of black students at open universities. In 1976, 5.6 per cent of students at Wits, UCT and Natal were black. In 1987, there were 21.3 per cent of black students.

The increase is a result of a relaxation in the need to obtain ministerial permission as well as the schools' commitment to non-racism. To compensate for the educational inequalities of apartheid, programs for disadvantaged students have also been provided.

Open universities are part of the movement for a democratic South Africa. A number of white students who have little direct experience or knowledge of apartheid and the conditions in the black townships are made aware of the issues through contacts with black students and the activities of the National Union of South African Students.

Widespread student protests at open universities by both black and white students stem from such an awareness of the discriminatory nature of South African society.

P.W. Botha's failed strategy of "reform apartheid" and the imposition of the state of emergency in July 1985 increased student protests at the open universities. The protests were non-violent and peaceful, but were portrayed in state controlled media as violent. Conflict is often sparked by police incursions onto campus.

The nationwide student protests in late April and May this year were directed towards the international media, simply because the South African government failed to be moved. These protests provoked strong counter-reactions such as the use of birdshot at UCT and police dogs at Rhodes.

The state's response to student protests has traditionally centred on harassing and detaining student leaders -- a number of students and academic staff are currently detained without charge.

Such measures have resulted in a lack of direction within student politics and create a climate of fear. Street marches are no longer permitted. There has been a growing sophistication in police control through the use of helicopters, the monitoring of protests with cameras, and the use of informers and agents provocateurs.

Nevertheless, the government believes these measures are insufficient to control the rising tide of student protest. National Education Minister F.W. deKlerk imposed regulations universities must follow to obtain government subsidies -- which constitute about 80 per cent of their funding.

The new regulations stipulate that university councils must prevent staff and students from using university property for "the promotion of the aims of any unlawful organization" and "the promotion or support of organizing of any boycott action" against any firm, product, article or educational institution.

Similarly, staff and students are not permitted to support civil disobedience or to encourage members of the public to strike or to stay away from work.

University councils are requested to inform the Minister of Education and Culture of any incident of unrest or disruption that has taken place on their campuses within 21 days and say what steps have been taken to deal with it. The Minister then notifies the university if the steps taken are adequate -- if they are not, the Minister may cut the university's subsidy.

Although Africans universities have expressed a willingness to live with the conditions, open universities have rejected them.

To protest, Wits, UCT, Natal, and the University of the Western Cape held general assemblies in October 1987. At Wits over 5,000 people attended the general assembly, which was followed by an academic procession. At UCT some 4000 members of the university turned up to show their support.

The immediate threat of the regulations seems to have passed when the Cape and Natal Supreme Courts ruled earlier this year that the Minister does not have the power to cut university subsidies in this manner. However, the government could quite simply introduce new legislation to override these judgments.

Whatever happens, the outbreak of student protests at the open universities cannot be solved by order and discipline -- for the protests spring from indignation with a government that denies freedom of association and is unwilling to relinquish state power to the majority.

Hornsby on Southside

When the first notes of "The Way It Is" wafted over the AM dial line in 1986, alot of people could feel that this music had more staying power than the tunes it shared the airwaves with.

As several more songs from Hornsby's first album - numbers like "Every Little Kiss" and "Mandolin Rain" - a public number by brain-damaging pop songs began to show a real interest in Hornsby's colourful style of rock and roll. Hornsby shared a Grammy as the Best New Artist in 1987 for his successful debut. The stage was set for a follow-up album; it was sink or swim for Hornsby.

Second albums are one of the biggest risks in the music business. A second album can be artistically sound, yet changing public opinion can send that musician permanently to the showers. With Scenes From The Southside, Hornsby has come up with one of the most outstanding albums of the year.

The depth and range of music and lyrics continue to be refined on this record, picking up where the first album left off. With this record Bruce Hornsby and the Range have explored their way onto the next rung, along with, im my opinion, Neil Young, Sting, Rush, U2, and Robbie Robertson among others. When artists go about creating, they ultimately assimilate all their relevant experiences into their work. For musicians, our goal is to combine whatever musical influence we see necessary to come up with original material. The strength of new music depends in part on how well the musician brings his influence together to form songs. What makes Hornsby stand out so much in today's rock scene is the tremendous background of styles this man weaves into his tunes.

Hornsby grows up in small town Virginia with lots of exposure to country music, then R and B, blues and roots rock and roll. In his high school years Hornsby got turned onto jazz. He took jazz piano at university while keeping abreast of Bob Dylan and The Band. With country, jazz and rock backgrounds, Hornsby began his long climb to the top.

Along with a diverse musical background to draw on, Hornsby is an avid reader of classic literature, which he delves into for inspiration. Both albums are faced with memorable images of people and the world that influences them. Hornsby doesn't rebash traditional love themes, but writes in a much more sensitive and personal way than most of today's song writers.

Hornsby has almost single-handedly not only brought creative piano back into rock and roll, but served up healthy servings of musical integrity. Although not faultless -- many critics complain about his tunes being too predictable and his songs of synthesizer riffs -- Hornsby is breaking new ground in the music world.

Hornsby has done in two albums what some bands can't do in twenty years... sing and play what he means to. The future ought to hold great things for Hornsby, but the only predictable thing about the music business is that it is unpredictable.

The Smithereens -- Green Thoughts

by Paul Basdeo

Although this album, the follow up to the band's debut "Especially for You", has been out for a few months now, this is the first time I have had a chance to review it. It is available on Enigma Records, a division of Capital, in most record stores.

I was able to hear the lead off single "Only a Memory" quite a while ago, but I was glad to finally listen to "Green Thoughts" in its entirety. For the most part, the album stays in line with its first single.

The Smithereens present their own brand of Rock and Roll, which centers around strong (and heavy) guitar riffs, with smooth and almost haunting vocal melodies.

Like this first album though, the band exhibits great versatility as well. On tracks like "Elaine", "Something New" and "Especially for You", the sound switches to a semi-acoustic, almost country sounding style with vocals not unlike Elvis Costello. The use of piano and saxophone on "Especially for You" and a particularly nice touch (and of course, they use a Rickenbacker guitar on most of the tracks).

So, in all, "Green Thoughts" is a triumph follow up to the Smithereens debut, showing maturity, and an unwillingness to compromise their sound for the sake of success.

A CAREER IN ORTHOPEDICS/OPHTHALMIC MEDICAL TECHNOLOGY

Orthopaedics is the clinical science of osceur motility and binocular vision, and related disorders of the eyes. An Orthoptist is an eye muscle specialist who works under the supervision of an ophthalmologist (an eye physician and surgeon). An Ophthalmic Medical Technologist assists the ophthalmologist with a wide range of diagnostic tests and procedures — some requiring a great deal of technical expertise.

In July 1989, the Izaak Walton Killam Children's Hospital will commence a twenty-four (24) month training program leading to a Certificate of Orthoptics and Ophthalmic Medical Technology. Applications are now being accepted from individuals at least 18 years of age, who have completed a minimum of two years of post-secondary education, with some emphasis in the sciences. Preference will be given to candidates holding a baccalaureate degree in the Sciences. Work/volunteer experience in the health care field will be considered an asset. Candidates should possess sound judgment, emotional maturity and a demonstrated ability to relate well to small children and to adults.

Financial assistance may be available to qualified students. Deadline for application is February 15, 1989.

FEAR OF FLYING BASH SHOT DOWN.

by Charlene Boyce

Friday night's "Fear of Flying" Bash was to have been the last event of the AIDS Awareness week. However, the Bash was cancelled due to scheduling problems of the band, which was playing in Newfoundland. Apparently, they were to have ferried across to Nova Scotia Thursday, except there was no crossing. They called SMU's Food/Bevage Co-ordinator Darcy Flynn Thursday to tell him this and to assure him that they could still make it, leaving 9:30 Friday morning. This would have them set to arrive in North Sydney at 5:30... not allowing for delays, natural disasters, etc. Add on the 4 and a half - 5 hours necessary to get to Halifax from North Sydney, plus the time needed to set up, it was, as Flynn put it, "too risky".

There were too many variables, and the bash was set to start at 10:00 pm Friday. We didn't want the students waiting until 11:30 or 12:00 for the band," Flynn said.

Mikeee Likes It!

by Michael Donoghue

With some bands, you can't do much but love 'em, and D. Frazuel is one.

One day, not a long time ago, I found a cryptic message waiting for me. There was a package waiting for me at Acadia bus lines; the address was illegible, but they managed to salvage the phone number.

After successfully completing the quest, I tore open the package, and out fell two cassettes -- no cases. The only accompanying item was a polaroid photo of a man with a fish, with a red marker scrawled message, "Don't worry, I didn't kill it."

Two tapes, two songs on each. The first I heard, "Trol, Iran" seemed to be a face-like song about the Iran-Iraq war.

Another song, "Seafood" is still churning through my recently altered soul. With lines like "When things explode, it's time to order out," it is hard to forget. All this slick instrumentalists make it a cross between The Cure and Alan Parsons. Quite amazing for one person.

I think it is the combination of tight instrumental tune, the catchy beat and original, but strange, lyrics that make these tunes tasty. They rattle through ones head all day and the funny lyrics can't help but make one smile.

The tape is a homemade production, so there is little chance of it being found on the commercial spice shelves. But if you would like more information (Lerd knows, I do) or would like to send fan mail, the address is:

Field Hockey Huskies Continue Torrid Pace
Still Undefeated After Weekend Victories

by T. Paul Woodford

The Saint Mary's Huskies continued to be the dominant team in AUAA field hockey this past weekend with a pair of shutout victories. On Saturday night the Huskies beat a tough UPEI squad 3-0. The following day SMU totally dominated Mount Allison in a 4-0 victory.

The first half of Saturday night’s game featured some sloppy ball handling by both teams as they tried to adjust to the night lighting. Most of the first half was played in UPEI territory as SMU applied constant offensive pressure.

Despite numerous excellent scoring opportunities, including nine penalty corners, SMUcame up empty handed in the first half.

The Huskies continued to dominate play in the early minutes of the second half. Their persistence paid off six minutes into the half when Shannon Byrne put the Huskies ahead 1-0. Byrne picked up a loose ball on a penalty corner and blasted it into the net from close range.

The Huskies connected on another penalty corner just ten minutes later as the familiar pair of Marcia Kissner and Heather Andrews combined for the goal. Andrews teed up Kissner’s pass and drove it through a swarm of UPEI defenders from 12 yards out.

First year MBA student Heather McLean completed the SMU scoring late in the game with a shot from five yards out. McLean found herself alone in front of the UPEI keeper with three minutes remaining, the veteran made no mistake as she blasted the ball between the keepers legs.

The game was livened up by the presence of the UPEI men’s soccer team who had lost to SMU earlier in the day. The lads made themselves heard throughout the entire game and directed most of their comments towards the referees.

In Sunday’s game the Huskies had very little trouble with the less skilled Monctons. Heather McLean put the Huskies ahead before the game was five minutes old. McLean drove Heather Andrews’ pass into the net to put SMU up 1-0.

Two minutes later fifth year player Marcia Kissner converted a goalmouth scramble into a SMU goal. Kissner grabbed a loose ball and easily tucked it into the net.

The Huskies continued to outplay Mount Allison but didn’t score again until late in the second half. SMU went up 3-0 when they connected on another penalty corner. Kissner put a hard pass directly to McLean who scored her second goal of the game on a low bullet-like shot.

McLean completed the hat-trick late in the game when she was awarded a penalty shot. The veteran scored on a hard wrist shot to complete the SMU scoring.

While the undefeated Huskies are comfortably in first place with 6 wins and 1 tie coach Bill Jeffery realizes the division title hasn’t been won yet. “I really think it will come down to the final game against UNB,” said Jeffery, referring to SMU’s October 17 matchup with the second place UNB.

Coach Jeffery sent a clear message to several veteran players in Sunday’s game by benching them for disciplinary reasons. Jeffery was impressed enough with the play of rookies Erin O’Brien and Glenda O’Neil that the starting lineup may be altered for future games.

The Huskies, who have this weekend off, will continue play on Thursday, October 13 when they host St. Francis Xavier at 4:00 pm.

SOCcer Huskies Still Hot

Men’s Soccer

The Huskies increased their record to 4-1-1 over the weekend with a win and a tie. On Saturday, the Huskies downed the UPEI Panthers 2-0. Lewis Page got the Huskies off to a quick start with his third goal of the season.

Midway through the half George Kyeragakos got his head on a Dennis Robinson cross and put it in the back of the net from five yards out.

The Huskies continued to outplay the Panthers in the second half but were thwarted by the sharp UPEI keeper.

Women’s Soccer

The women’s soccer Huskies remain undefeated after battling Memorial to a pair of weekend draws at Huskies Stadium. SMU fell behind 1-0 midway through the first half when Marge Dunphy popped a loose ball over the head of SMU keeper Louise Freeman.

Twelve minutes into the second half rookie forward Suzanne Muir grabbed a loose ball and booted it into the empty Memorial net.

Muir continued her excellent play early in Sunday’s game with a spectacular individual effort. Muir went around two Memorial players like a hoop around a barrel before driving the ball into the net for her seventh goal of the season.

Midway through the half when Stephanie Rose beat SMU keeper Louise Freeman to a loose ball and tapped it into the net.

The Huskies began to control play but couldn’t score on numerous chances from close in. The missed opportunities came back to haunt SMU late in the game.

With Memorial applying offensive pressure, the Huskies’ defender attempted to clear the ball but put it into her own net.
Husky's Edge Axemen 11-10

It wasn't pretty, but the Saint Mary's Huskies managed to remain undefeated with an 11-10 victory over the Acadia Axemen Saturday in Wolfville. The Huskies were led by a stingy defence and another stellar performance by sophomore quarterback Chris Flynn.

The Acadia defence stymied the SMU offence in the opening half. The Huskies were kept in the game by punter Bill Soillard, who's long, high kicks kept the Huskies out of trouble.

Acadia led 10-7 at the half on Dave Wooder's field goal and Greg Baker's aerial touchdown. Jerry Foster accounted for the only SMU scoring with a first quarter field goal.

Saint Mary's closed the gap to 10-7 on the strength of a Jerry Foster field goal and a Bill Soillard single.

The Huskies missed an opportunity to tie the game early in the fourth quarter when Jerry Foster missed a field goal attempt and was forced to settle for a single. With just over two minutes remaining and SMU trailing 10-8, Chris Flynn, who went 20 for 38 for 251 yards, marched the Huskies 55 yards downfield to the Acadia 18 yard line. Veteran kicker Jerry Foster then took over and kicked a 23 yard game winning field goal.

The SMU defence was instrumental in the victory. The SMU defence held Acadia to 73 yards rushing and only 245 yards of total offence. The SMU defence also held Acadia scoreless in the second half which allowed the offence to stage the comeback.

The Huskies return to Huskies Stadium this Saturday when they meet the Mount Allison Mounties at 2:00 pm.

Maroon vs. White

Training Camp with a Difference

by T. Paul Woodford

For the past three weeks fifty-two Saint Mary's students have been involved in an intensive training program directed by hockey coach Randy Nesbit. The training program doubles as the tryouts for the varsity hockey team.

Of the 52 players trying out, it is doubtful any have ever been involved in a training camp as unusual as the Huskies' '88 edition. The 52 players have been divided into two teams, Team Maroon and Team White. The training camp has involved many off-ice competitions between the two teams.

Off ice activities such as aero-bics, basketball, soccer, tug of war, and softball have added some enjoyment and variety to an otherwise grueling training regime. The off ice activities have also given the coaching staff an opportunity to evaluate each player's character and competitive instincts. "The three week period has really given me and my staff a chance to meet these players, talk with them, and evaluate them," said coach Nesbit.

When designing the novel training camp, Nesbit said he had three objectives in mind: "number one, we wanted guys to get to know each other. Number two we wanted to get into shape. Thirdly, we wanted to see guys perform in a competitive environment."

Nesbit feels the camp has been an overwhelming success. He feels every player will have enjoyed himself, met new people, and improved his fitness level and playing ability.

The training camp culminated this Friday when Team Maroon will play Team White in a regulation game at the Alumni Arena at 3:30 pm. On Sunday night the Huskies will host cross-town rivals Dalhousie Tigers in an exhibition game at 7:30 pm.

The final cut will be made on Tuesday. The hockey Huskies will have gained the 22 best players, but all 52 players will have gained a higher level of fitness, new friends, and an increase in their hockey skills.

Trapped within these prison walls
I long to escape and answer nature's calls
But this body won't set me free
No, it won't let me be.

My body holds me down
Trying always to keep my mind from wandering around.
I am not asking for a one-way ticket to Insanity,
I'm just trying to get in touch with me.

Behind the facade of normality,
Behind who we all pretend to be,
There lies reality,
What we're really about, you and me.

All these games we play with each other
I wonder why we even bother,
Why be something we're not?
For want of acceptance by the greater lot?
