

The Federal Election race is on...

Margaret Trudeau does it all

Following the claim of a Washington Post gossip columnist that early proofs of Margaret Trudeau's autobiography disclose heavy experimentation with illegal drugs during Maggie's days at 24 Sussex Drive, an angry Mrs. Trudeau told CTV's Helen Hutchinson that "No one should be surprised about what has been leaked so far. I've made no secret of my desire to expand my consciousness as a woman, a photographer, and a publicity seeking jet-setter of the most pathetic sort."

Popping a couple of uppers and gulping down some liquid valium, the First Lady of Canada continued. "Fkisi dkdimm sisallaks sss a irdxkj mv." She added that she hoped to eat moon rocks with roquefort dressing, sleep with the body of Charlie Chaplin in the sarcophagus of King Tutankhamun when it is on display in Toronto this fall, and to return to the womb.

At the end of the interview, a weary Margaret turned to Helen, snuffing her marijuana cigarette on Hutchinson's right wrist, and said: "I've done it all. I've been everywhere, man. I've breathed the mountain air, man, I've crossed the deserts bare, man, of travel I've had my share, man. I've been everywhere."

The interview will not be aired on CTV this year.

Innovative show

by Dodo McHuggins

Informed sources say that College of Art and Design students are going to stage a conceptual art show in the University Art Gallery in the near future. A number of leghold-traps are to be strategically placed around the main gallery; entrances and exists will be sealed off to a height of about two feet, and the place flooded with porridge. Patrons will be provided with hipwaders and boathooks, and encouraged to grope around in the muck. The purpose of the boathook is to feel around for the traps, sources say.

"If you get caught in a trap, you are forced to stay there until a special squad in skindiver's suits comes to your rescue. The idea of the traps is to hold your attention," sources say.

The curator of the Art Gallery declined to comment, but this reporter has it from a reliable source, that he has already started to inquire about wholesale prices of oatmeal. He is also worrying about where to get volunteers to cook up all that stuff.

After the show, the porridge, and all that remains caught in the traps, will be donated to the university cafeteria and, by the miracle of modern science, through some ingenious recycling methods, converted into some tasty dishes for meal-plan students.

Your Morning Smile

The Premier was going around the province looking for a prostitute. He found three of them in a bar; a redhead, a blonde, and a brunette. The Premier asked the redhead her fee and she replied $200. Then he asked the blonde and her answer was $100. When he asked the brunette, she replied smartly: "Mr. Premier, if you can raise my skirt as high as the car insurance, get my panties as low as our wages, get that thing of yours as hard as the times are, and screw me like you screw the public, it won't cost you a damn thing."

Disco causes impotence, says doctor

In a special report to the Department of Health and Welfare, Dr. Friedrich Schnapps disclosed his findings that disco causes cancer and could lead to brain tumors. His study, conducted over the last five weeks at St. Jean de Arc Convent in Montreal, proved that nuns who didn't listen to disco had fewer cases of breast cancer than those that did.

In an unrelated study by Schnapps, he found that male disco goers at Studio 54 in New York, were suffering from limp, impotent, and rotting penises. He reports that in one night he counted over 40 males who would bend down in the middle of a dance and shake their left leg, then proceed to "retrieve a small pink object from the dance floor." Schnapps recommends that male disco dancers could avoid painful discomfort on the dance floor by wearing rubber prophylactics over their heads. Unfortunately, Schnapps says this remedy could lead to asphyxiation and brain hemorrhaging.

Coming to terms with the real election issues

BY PETER PUCK

THE REAL ISSUE AT HAND IN THE UP-coming federal election is not unemployment, inflation, government spending, nor rampant strikes. The real issue is the separation of Quebec. More specifically, what will the Montreal Canadiens do about their name if Quebec were to separate and become a country in its own right? The problem is a complex one, with provincial and national politicians and big business wrestling for control. The players themselves seem to be caught in the middle.

When I spoke with premier Rene Levesque of Quebec he was evasive at first.

Q. Tell me about your plans for the Montreal Canadiens.

A. After seceding, we will immediately pass legislation to give the players three weeks off from regular season play (200 percent more than the existing allotment) to prepare for and meet the Russians. Could you pass me the ashtray?

Q. What about their name?

A. Well, we'll have to change it.

Q. Any suggestions?

A. Yes. Les Montreal Grenouilles.

Map shows approximate location of Quebec.

I approached Canadiens' star winger Guy Lafleur about Levesque's proposal. "While I am not opposed to separation in theory," Lafleur said, "I will not play for any team other than the Montreal Canadiens."

On being questioned about the status of the Canadiens in the case of secession, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau suggested "in the interest of national unity the team should move to Toronto like everything else and join forces with the Maple Leafs." Trudeau claimed the "Mapelodiens would be the greatest team in hockey history", and would "probably beat the Russians."

In a recent interview with Canadiens' captain Yvan Cournoyer I asked him if he would play for Mr. Trudeau's proposed team.

Q. Would you play for Mr. Trudeau's proposed team?

A. Would I have to eat breakfast with Darryl Sittler?

A. I suppose so, from time to time.

A. Not me!

Opposition leader Joe Clark has called Trudeau's reaction to the potential problem "irresponsible" and "trivial". He claims, "...union influence is affecting Trudeau's decision to move Montreal to Toronto (sic). A conservative government would move the team to an arbitrarily chosen centre—like Rocky Mountain House."

A spokesman for Molson Breweries, long time owners of the Canadiens, said in a prepared release, "The Montreal Canadiens have always been called the Montreal Canadiens and always will be as long as our company is associated with them." A source in the printing industry has informed me that along with their usual order last month Molson's included a request for two million labels to read "Molson's Quebecois."

WORLD NEWS

•In a surprise move today, IDI AMIN was captured by his own troops and stuffed with Dacron Hollofill No. 2 and preserved in alcohol. It was later discovered that China bought the specimen as an educational tool for its university course on "Great Heroes of our Time". It is also rumoured that the specimen will be used to anchor the Great Wall which sways 3 or 4 inches in a strong western wind.

•Richard Nixon has declined an opportunity to use his name to endorse a new truth serum put out by the Tutti Frutti company of Norfolk, Virginia. When asked why he declined, Mr. Nixon replied quoting George Washington: "Truth will ultimately prevail where there is pains taken to bring it to light". He then walked away carrying the tape recorder playing his 1972 inaugural speech which has been "welded" to his hand for the past 3 years. Doctors say the tape recorder will have to be surgically severed from Mr. Nixon's hand within the next year or the whole hand will have to go.

•Premier John Buchanan was quoted as saying yesterday at a luncheon "that there are two types of people in Nova Scotia; Conservatives, and unemployed road commissioners."

•The popular TV personality known as "Professor Backwards" was slain in Atlanta yesterday by 3 masked gunmen. According to reports, neighbours ignored the professor's cries of "Pleh! Pleh!"

•A new book has been released entitled, "Friends Of Margaret Trudeau". It is only one page longer than the work, "Famous Chinese Television Personalities of the 18th Century". Conservative leader Joe Clark said, "I've spent most of the week reading it, finding it challenging in its scope".

CLOSER TO HOME

•The planned June 21st wedding of Mary O'Donnell and Angus Capstick has been postponed indefinitely. According to those close to the scene the breakup came as a result of being on the SRC, and working while living together would be "the straw that would break the camel's back". Rumour has it the relationship will blossom again next year in the council chamber.

•Father John Mills was charged last Thursday with the attempted mass murder of the SMU Folk Choir—the hideous crime was foiled when he found out there was no gas in the bus as he climbed into the driver's seat. Mills said he only planned on taking the Choir for a "quick jaunt around the Cabot Trail."

•Education student Kevin Wood is on the verge of making history as being the first practice teacher to slam-dunk 32 kids in a 40 minute period. When asked to comment he replied: "I would like to hit the 50 mark before I graduate".

SPORTS NEWS

•Reggie Jackson will be out of the Yankee lineup for a while as doctors try to remove a "REGGIE" chocolate bar from his ear. The bar was implanted by a frustrated 10 year old Yankee fan who got fed up when Jackson struck out for the third time in an exhibition game against the Toronto Blue Jays. The doctors are hopeful they can remove the bar before the caramel hardens and becomes crusty.

•Toronto Maple Leaf owner Harold Ballard was cheered last week when he put on a pair of skates and skated around the surface of Maple Leaf Gardens. The skate was cut short when Darryl Sittler and King Clancy fell down in a heap of exhaustion from pushing the "turd" around on a chair. Sittler said that he didn't realize that this was the bonus he was promised for scoring 30 goals this season. King Clancy lamented that "it was either this or play goal against the Russians". Ballard was hoisted back to his private box by a forklift.

You may have seen me hanging around. I'm Richard Long and I consider myself a private person but at times I've been prominent on campus. Before I came to Saint Mary's I was a member of several Greek fraternities. Though not that experienced in journalism I plan to edge myself in slowly to the main channel and then penetrate every nook and controversy. You can feel you're safe with me because I'm not the sort to pull out if the rhythm isn't right. You may think me a little testy for my opinions but I'm lucid on all subjects from nuts to shooting your bolts. Above all, approachable.

Birmingham signs Incredible Hulk

by Murray Mandryk

Reports out of Birmingham earlier today say that the W.H.A. Bulls have come to final contract terms with their new defenceman, The Incredible Hulk. The contract is worth an estimated $450,000 a year with many additional clauses including: no cut, no trade, and no obligation to pay for damage to the dressing room when he goes through metamorphosis.

"Hulky adds aggressiveness to our team," states the Birmingham coach. Since we lost Beaton (Frankie), Durbano (Steve) and Linesman (Ken), we've been stuck with a bunch of panty-waists."

When asked about the Hulk's skating ability, the Bulls' coach replied, "What the hell does it matter if he can skate or not? It won't matter a damn bit to Bassett (Bulls' owner). He never worried about such stupid things in the past."

The 7'8", 625 lb. Hulk started his career as a result of an overdose of radiation. Ever since, he has been busting things and terrorizing and pulverizing innocent World Hockey Association forwards for the Birmingham Bulls.

"We just hope that he can always carry the same attitude into the rink," states Bulls' coach. "If he keeps this up, in a few years he could be another Dave Hutchinson or Dave Shultz or Tiger Williams. Or maybe even . . . Gordie Howe."

Unfortunately the rest of the W.H.A. doesn't share the Bulls' attitude concerning the Hulk. Outspoken Winnipeg Jet forward, Bobby Hull, who met the Hulk for the first time in the Bulls-Jets encounter last Thursday night in Birmingham, made a few controversial comments about the big defenceman.

"This is an outrage!" says Hull. "How can that criminal of a Bassett continue to sign these big, stupid, dumb fools and get away with it? Won't the League do something? I, for one, won't stand for it. I won't let that big animal intimidate me. I am going to stick to my game and totally ignore that goon. . . ." (it is at this point that this paper would like to, once again, express its best wishes for a speedy recovery to Hull. He can be visited in Room 401 of the Health Sciences Centre.)

John Bassett sends regrets from Mealhaven, where he was scouting for more talent, at the time of Bobby's unfortunate accident.

In other news from Birmingham, John Bassett is currently negotiating with 5 players, including Son of Sam, Darth Vader, Leon Spinks, Ben the Bear from Grizzly Adams and Ray "The Crippler" Stevenson, from All-Star Wrestling. Rumour has it that Bassett is trying to sign Charles Manson as coach for the 1995-96 season. Manson can coach earlier if he gets out on good behaviour."

"I just want a coach who will install a winning attitude," states Bassett.

Civil Service Quiz

Here is a CIVIL SERVICE quiz. If you can answer the following questions, they tell us, you are completely qualified for a relatively senior post as a mandarin.

- 1] Why do civil servants refuse to look out windows in the morning?
- 2] How do civil servants wink?

Answers:

Civil servants don't look out the windows in the morning so they'll have something to do in the afternoon.

Civil servants wink by opening one eye.

If you got the answers to these two questions, you either have the markings of an excellent civil servant or you're probably unemployed and have spent many long hours in government offices watching civil servants.

N.H.L. — Separation

by Pat Keelan

Montreal Canadiens' Vice-President Jean Beliveau announced his club's separation from the National Hockey League yesterday.

The announcement came two weeks after a team referendum, in which 75 per cent of the players voted in favour of leaving the NHL.

Beliveau said the main reason for the Canadiens' separation was the refusal of other clubs to print names on the backs of their players' sweaters in both official languages, French and English.

He added that his club was also upset by accusations from other teams that the Canadiens have been illegally tampering with the league's annual draft since the early 1960's. "How dare they question our integrity!" said Beliveau. "We've only been doing that since 1972."

The 25 per cent who voted against separation, all English players, said their reason for not joining the team was one of the clauses in the White Paper on separation, which states that players must be chewed out by the coach in French only.

The Canadiens are now expected to compete in a French League with Quebec Nordiques of the WHA and St. Boniface Saints of the Manitoba Junior Hockey League, who separated from their respective leagues last week.

Sports Editor Dies

A 21 year old College Student was found dead behind the Occidental Hotel early this morning.

The deceased was identified as Barry Horeczy, a second year student at Saint Mary's University.

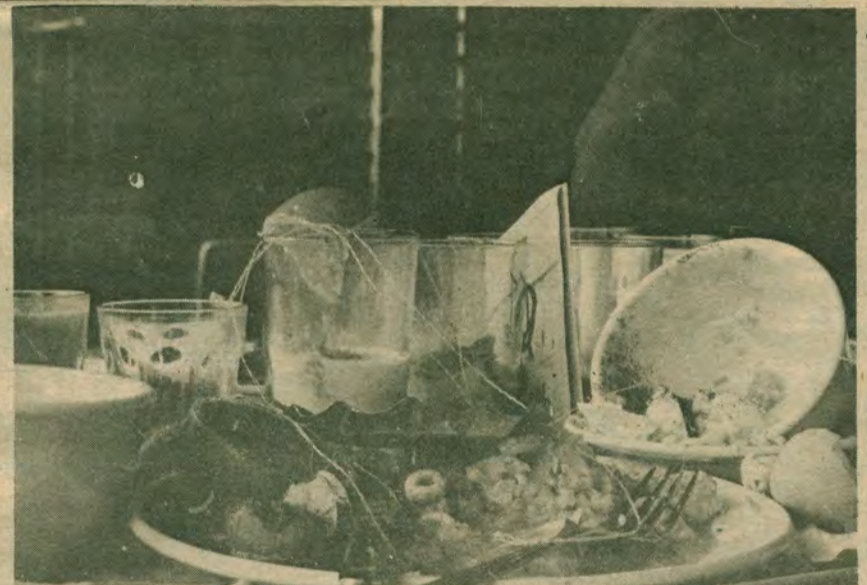

Sources say the youth apparently died of asphyxiation while attempting to snort a couple of beer cans up his nose.

A funeral for the deceased will be held on Thursday. A party will be held immediately afterwards.

Spinks

Leon Spinks, former heavyweight boxing champion of the world, lost control of his car today and hit another car, the side of a building, a lamp post, two turtle doves and a partridge in a pear tree.

The accident follows on the heels of his last accident where he ran into a tree but claimed he had the right of way.

"My favourite drug?"

Heroin of course."

"It's the best high in the world. Cheaper than coke, smoother than acid. And there's no hangover or morning-after uglies like I get with speed or angel dust. When I'm up, I'm mellow as Fleetwood Mac and nothing gets me down. It's great!"

Susie's no fool. She knows that pure and reliable heroin is the least damaging of all black market chemicals. Her dynamic young lifestyle needs a drug that won't harm an active body or cripple an alert mind. Heroin is the answer.

Susie deals with a pusher who cares about people. "Max" (not his real name) makes sure Susie's daily dose is just enough to keep her high, happy and coming-back for more. "Max" wants Susie's business—and like most pushers, he's tired of the negative impression so many people have of heroin.

One day "Max" sat down with his fellow traffickers and decided to fight back. They formed the Smack Promoter's Central Authority, a self-policing group of pushers who want to take heroin off the streets and put it back in the home—where it belongs. Max and his friends are using every means at their disposal to keep supplies consistent, constant and safe. Public education is the other half of the battle.

You may not know it, but heroin was once a common ingredient in most patent medicines. The same repressive government regulations that withheld marijuana from the free market pushed helpless heroin consumers into the hands of criminals and thieves. Inflated black market prices forced many users to steal and prostitute themselves for a small daily fix. The myth of 'the dangerous addict' was born.

Times have changed. Marijuana is almost legal and modern science has created drugs much more harmful than smack, drugs like STP, PCP and MSG. We now know the long-term effects of alcohol and tobacco can be far worse than a controlled opiate addiction. And a lot less fun, besides.

If "Max" and his friends can implement consistent standards in the quality and quantity of street heroin, fewer users will suffer from accidental overdoses. Poppy greenhouses on Canadian soil will cut down the dollar-flow from this country to France and Turkey. Chemical processing plants will stimulate the economy, create jobs and provide consumers with a cheap, reliable source of supply. Eventually, the national heroin industry will have enough political strength to legislate decriminalization. Finally, legalization under government control.

Let's admit the truth. Our society is increasingly drug-dependant. Why not develop drugs we can depend on? Max is doing his best to make smack safe and pure. You can help—by fighting the scare tactics that have kept heroin in back alleys, and by patronizing pushers who display the SPCA symbol.

Susie's no junkie. Neither are most of the New Wave of active, alive young heroin consumers. Why let the myths of a previous generation spoil your good times? Visit Max or one of his friends, today.

The first one's free.
