CFSM Delays FM Application

March's referendum that saw students vote yes for an increase to part-time student fees has not yet been approved by the university's Board of Governor's. The increase would have raised part-time student fees from the current $11.50 to $40.20, half of the full-time $80.40 fee.

An increase in part-time fees would have created a significant boost in the funds that SMUSA would receive from the students. Subsequently, as promised by incoming President, John Francis, the societies would have benefitted in the process. Currently, there are approximately 40 active societies on campus and funding has been tight for several years.

CFSM Station Manager Kevin Smith says, "It is my understanding that they are questioning the results of the election because it was primarily full-time students that voted for the increase."

He adds, "that shouldn't matter. Everybody, full and part-time had an equal opportunity to vote. Those funds would have been greatly appreciated by all societies, especially CFSM; we are in the process of applying for an FM licence and we really need funding."

One of the main criteria for CFSM's FM licence application is guaranteed funding. Without this, the CRTC would never approve an application.

"Almost everything is falling into place now," says Smith with enthusiasm, "we have a strong, active Board of Directors, the MBA program is going to do a marketing study for us, and we have made many contacts that will help in our quest for an FM licence; the only thing that keeps holding us back is money. It all comes down to money."

Saint Mary's University has one of the lowest part-time fees at $11.50 per student and many feel that they should be paying half of the part-time fees.

Smith finally adds, "I can't believe that they are considering not approving this question. It passed, if they are worried that increased student fees will keep students away, they should lower tuition costs."

The Journal will carry details of the Referendum next week.

Commerce Society Plans Banner Year

The Commerce Society is back this year with a well-organized group and a full schedule of events. All summer long, the president, Jeff Keizer, and the other executive have been planning their events for the 1997-98 school year. The Commerce Society is one of the larger societies on campus and so they have greater flexibility in what they can offer to students. Last year they had well in excess of 200 members. Getting information about them is easy. They have a permanent bulletin board in the main lobby of Loyola where you can always check out what they're doing.

SMUSA Explains Society Reform

by David Young

In a year end interview in April, John Francis, the incoming SMUSA President said that societies would have to justify themselves and what they receive. He's holding true to his word.

At a society summit on Monday the president of SMUSA told society executive that in order to receive funding each event would have to be approved by the Financial Advisory Committee. Because societies have squandered monies in the past on such things as executive lunches, an event by event funding formula has been introduced. Detailed event descriptions and budgets must be submitted two weeks in advance. After a FAC approval, a cheque can be picked up. A FAC meeting schedule will be published and posted in the society offices area so that executive will know their deadline dates. By implementing this policy, Francis believes that the money will do the greatest good.

In the past societies received approximately $300 for the year to organize their activities. Jamie Welsh, the SMUSA Treasurer, didn't think this years amount would exceed the old but could be increased if an event was considered to be extraordinary. The Geology Society is planning a national conference and will probably get some additional funding. Per capita limits were not suggested but early success will determine continued funding. Societies are encouraged to record the number and names of people that attend their events.

Office space has been reasigned as well and only those societies that were successful at attracting members in the past have received offices this year. If you're looking for your old society, you need to find out their new location. Some society executive have been disappointed by this decision but generally it is viewed as an improvement. Executive that were interviewed after the meeting seem to believe that this would lead to greater responsibility with funds. Even society executive that have lost their offices believe the new system is fair.

Also discussed at the Society Summit was the upcoming Society Expo to be held this Friday. All societies are going to host a fair type of event in the court yard in front of the Student Centre. It is opportunity to

A Note From The President

By John Francis

Life at Saint Mary's

Saint Mary's university is the greatest place on earth. In my three years at Saint Mary's I have had so much fun getting involved. I have learned a lot about school, people and myself. It has helped me grow as a person and made me realize what it takes to survive in this crazy world of ours.

When I arrived on Saint Mary's Campus I was 1936 kilometres away from my home. I did not know a soul and my only friend was a stuffed bear my parents gave me before they left. It was a strange place full of different faces and new obstacles. You see I went to school with the same bunch of people for eleven years. There was two ways I could look at my situation I could be quiet and not make any new friends or I could be myself and have a blast.

I met my RA what a great guy he was funny and loved to have a good time. I soon began to meet some of my floormates and began to realize what a great bunch of guys they were. It was not like high school they did not care how you dressed or what music you listened to. You could be yourself, WOW! it was great a whole new opportunity to meet people and have fun. So I dove in headfirst I took part in all the froshweek event and went to all my classes and by the end of the week I was a little tired but no worse for wear. Through it all I made some great friends and had one hell of a time. Even though the week ended I did not stop getting involved. I played intramurals, I went to SMUSA events, I went to society events, and I even went to varsity games. By the end of the year I knew a ton of really cool people but, I was really tired.

I did not stop getting involved my second year I became an RA so I could be that warm friendly face the Frosh met on their first day of school. It was a great year I got to meet a bunch of new people and learned more about the school and the people in it.

The next year I took the big leap under the encouragement of my friends I ran for Vice-President Student Affairs the "Spirit" position on campus. I won and was prepared to have fun and boost school spirit. It was a tough year filled with good times and bad but, through it all I was given the opportunity to experience new things I had never done before. It made me appreciate our school even more. It introduced me to people who loved Saint Mary's as much as I do.

This year I went for the big job I ran for President and won. It is great to have this job because it enables me to do as much for the school as I can. I really want to make this place the happiest place on earth for you. In order to do that I need your help. I need you to go out there and get involved. I need you to stop myself, any member of the executive, and any member of council and tell us what ideas you may have to make this the happiest place on earth.

In closing if there is one thing I can leave you with, is you only get out of university what you put into it.

University Breaks New Ground

During a recent conversation with Jennifer Perry, the Vice President, I got some details of this year's strategy. Membership fees will be $10 and this includes a T-shirt. The first event is a harbour cruise on September 12 and you do not have to be 19 to attend. They plan the first pub crawl for September 26 and you will need to be 19 for that one. Some long range events are the annual ones held by the society such as the Halloween Bash at "Pacifico" and the incredibly popular Commerce Society Business Dinner. This is an annual event that brings together students, faculty, administration and industry for an evening of open conversation and exchange of ideas. It's an excellent opportunity for students to meet potential employers. The society is looking for Business Directors to help in organizing the dinner which takes in March of every year. Planning is underway now, so if you're interested, don't wait to get involved.

Societies are a good way to meet more senior members of your program. Jennifer Perry, who was a frosh last year, said she met many friendly people, and it helped reduce the impact of coming to a large university. She picked the brains of senior commerce students who told her what courses to take and which professors to avoid. She had several meetings with the faculty and administration, and it gave her a much clearer picture of how the entire institution runs. She was First-year Rep last year and it helped her to develop her organizational and time management skills. The first-year rep spot is open, and elections should be coming up soon. You must be a first year student to run.

If you are interested in the first-year rep spot or any of the other positions the commerce Society has open, visit them at their new digs. This year they are sharing an office with the Accounting Society, on the fifth floor of the student centre: room 516. You can call them too: 496-8799. If you're simply interested in being a member, go up to their offices and say hello. There'll be a friendly face around there all this week to meet and greet new students interested in getting involved.

Students returning for the first time since their last exam in April will notice a new structure on campus. The new Sobey Building will house the Frank H. Sobey Faculty of Commerce and will open in August of 1998. This facility will add 77,500 square feet of new space to the campus. Included in the construction plans are renovations to the already existing Loyola building. After all work is complete, approximately 75 percent of all classes will be in the new space. The new building will also house the PhD in accounting program that Saint Mary's is developing. Students coming to campus for the first time this year have a state of the art facility to look forward to in their academic future.

The building, and the faculty of commerce are named after a famous member of Canadian industry, Frank H Sobey was a native of Pictou County, Nova Scotia. He founded Empire Industries, and though it grew to an enormous size, Frank Sobey never forgot his humble beginnings. The name 'Sobey' is most often associated with the grocery store chain that Frank Sobey's father started with one store in Stellaton, Nova Scotia. However, Empire Industries has many booming retail and other business operations in the Atlantic Provinces, Quebec, Ontario, and New England. Frank Sobey was an amazing businessperson.

His influence on other areas of industry in Nova Scotia sometimes go unnoticed. He was instrumental in bringing many new businesses to the area in the 1970's and early 80's. As a member of the "Industrial Estates Limited," (a provincial government committee) he negotiated deals with such multinationals as Michelin and convinced them Nova Scotia was a good place to do business. Although he had only a small amount of formal training in business he was honoured with several degrees before he passed away. It is quite fitting, considering his contribution to the economy of Nova Scotia, that thousands will earn Bachelors of Commerce in a faculty and facility named in his honour. His sons, who now run the daunting Empire Industries, and sit on many boards of directors of other large Canadian companies, are well-known supporters of the "Building on Strength" capital campaign. The family donated one million dollars to the project, and Dr. David Sobey, Frank's son, is credited with raising more than 10 million from other donors.

A Message From The Registrar

If you would like to reduce the level of frustration in your life, it is best to follow the advice of the registrar. It also reduces the level of frustration for the staff at the Registrar's Office. The following is a message from Elizabeth Chard, the Registrar at Saint Mary's.

Students should pay strict attention to the fact that with the automated registration system, all students were provided with a registration receipt which shows a detailed list of courses (with applicable section numbers) labs, and recitations for which they are officially registered in the 1997-98 academic year. These are the courses for which grades and, if appropriate, withdrawals will show on their official University record and hence, on any transcripts or official documents produced by the University. Students who are attending a course or section of a course for which they are not officially registered will not receive a grade or hence, possible credit for the course. If students are not attending a course or section of a course for which they are registered, an automatic grade of "F" will be assigned both at Christmas and at the end of the academic year. Further information on this matter is found in academic regulation 16b, 1997-98 Academic Calendar.

Apply now for Spring Convocation, 1998 which is scheduled for Monday, 11 May 1998. Deadline for receipt of the application for Graduation is Friday, 26 September 1997. Forms are available at the Registrar's/Records Office. The $20.00 graduation fee can be paid directly at the Business Office anytime before mid-April 1998. Over the next several months, the Deans, Associate Deans, and Chairpersons will check the academic records of all students who have applied. Hence, it is important if you are a potential graduate, you register for all the courses you expect to take in 1997-98, especially 2 courses.

Finally, the first meeting of the Senior class of 1998 will be held on Thursday 25 September 1997 at 5:00 pm in the theatre B, Burke Building. If you expect to graduate at either the spring 98 or Fall 98 Convocations, please attend so you can have a voice in your graduation & related events. Life officers will be elected and will become the official representatives for the Class of 98.

SMUSA Executive 101

John Francis President

John came to Saint Mary's when he was four years and always intended to return. His dad is an alumnus and they took a family picture in front of school during a vacation to Halifax many years ago. John attended high school in Toronto, a couple of blocks from the Eaton Centre, and came to SMU as frosh in 1994. "I really love this school," he says with honesty in his voice, "it's thick and rich in tradition." John is committed to the idea of getting students involved with school events. He says he's no Rhodes Scholar but can tell that school pride and spirit have slipped.

He's presently enrolled in the Bachelor of Commerce program and plans to pursue a CMA when he graduates. He wants his presidency to be remembered as the transition year. When student government moved out of their 5th floor offices out to the where the students hangout. Expect to see him and the other SMUSA executive in the cafeterias, coffee shops, and lounges around campus this year.

Jamie Welsh Treasurer

Jamie's job at SMUSA is Chief Financial Officer. This summer he oversaw the budget and the audit. His studies in accounting provided an excellent background for this position and he says he's really enjoying it. A graduate of Prince Andrew High in Dartmouth, he came to SMU as a frosh in 1993 and got involved with all the orientation week events. The following year he was a frosh leader and last year was heavily involved in the Accounting Society. He will graduate in May of next year and plans to pursue a professional accounting designation.

Jamie wants all students to know that he is a source of help for any sort of difficulties you may be experiencing. In addition to being treasurer, he is on the Student Representative Council and can voice the concerns of students there. He also believes that the best way to most out of school is to put the most into it. He says "imagine your throwing a rubber ball against the wall, the harder you throw it, the further it bounces back." The position of Treasurer is not an elected position and anyone interested in doing the job next year should talk to Jamie about qualifications. It's excellent experience.

Jean-Guy Chaisson Vice President Administration

Jean Guy is responsible for staff training and this past weekend he was busy training frosh leaders to encourage frosh to get involved with SMUSA. He is commerce, with a double major in marketing and management who graduated from Notre Dame Association High School in Cheticamp

Cape Breton. His family owned a small business so he had plenty of related experience before he came to SMU. His objective with staff this year is to make sure they know they can come to him with difficulties and suggestion for improvements. After graduation he may travel to western Canada in search of work in hospitality industry.

Any students who want advice or need some help getting through school can visit him or talk to him around campus. He stresses his open door policy and tells students that once he gets to know you he can better help you.

Vanessa Tynes Vice President Student Affairs

Vanessa takes care of all the societies on campus. As well, her job is to organize frosh week activities, winter carnival, sit on several committees. She did high school at the Cobequid Educational Centre in Truro Nova Scotia, and came to Saint Mary's after a few years at another school (that shall remain nameless). She was frustrated by her lack of knowledge of what her student government was up to and so decided to get involved. As a member of the Black Nova Scotia Students Association she was encouraged to run for an SRC executive position. She's glad she did, although she sometimes dislikes all the work, she says it gives her the input she believed black students were missing. She spent a lot of time this summer learning the ropes at SMUSA so she could fully participate in the running of student affairs

It's important to Vanessa that all students are comfortable in joining SMUSA activities and not just a select few. This means students coming out and learning about what it is their up to on the fifth floor. But more importantly, she plans to go out to the students and educate them about student government.

Welcome Back

Five years ago when I came to Saint Mary's I didn't know what to expect. I didn't know if I could handle the workload. I didn't know if university was the right choice for me, and I especially didn't know anyone on campus. Today I'm entering the last year of my Bachelor of Commerce, and as much as I have enjoyed school, it was nerve racking at times. I'm looking forward to moving on next year. What is amazing to me, now that I'm almost completed my degree, is how much I've learned since that first class. Even more amazing to me is that only a small portion of that learning took place in the classroom. A recent chance encounter with a first year student fully illustrated that to me.

Last week, while waiting for 'in person' registration I noticed the person next to me was pouring over forms and booklets trying to figure out what to do. He asked me if he could borrow my pen. After a couple of minutes he began asking how he should answer certain questions on the form. I asked him a few questions, and we determined he had the wrong form. Knowing how difficult it can be for some just starting out I said, "Let me give you some advice," and went into the following speech. Whether or not he listened I don't know but I'm going to repeat it here for all frosh and anyone else who's interested.

First: don't be intimidated by the university. If your coming from a high school of three or four hundred students, it may seem like a big campus, but it will shrink quite quickly over the next few months. Go out and explore it. Visit all the facilities and make a point to use them. If your from out of town, you should explore the local community as well. Halifax is great city. Not too big. Not too small.

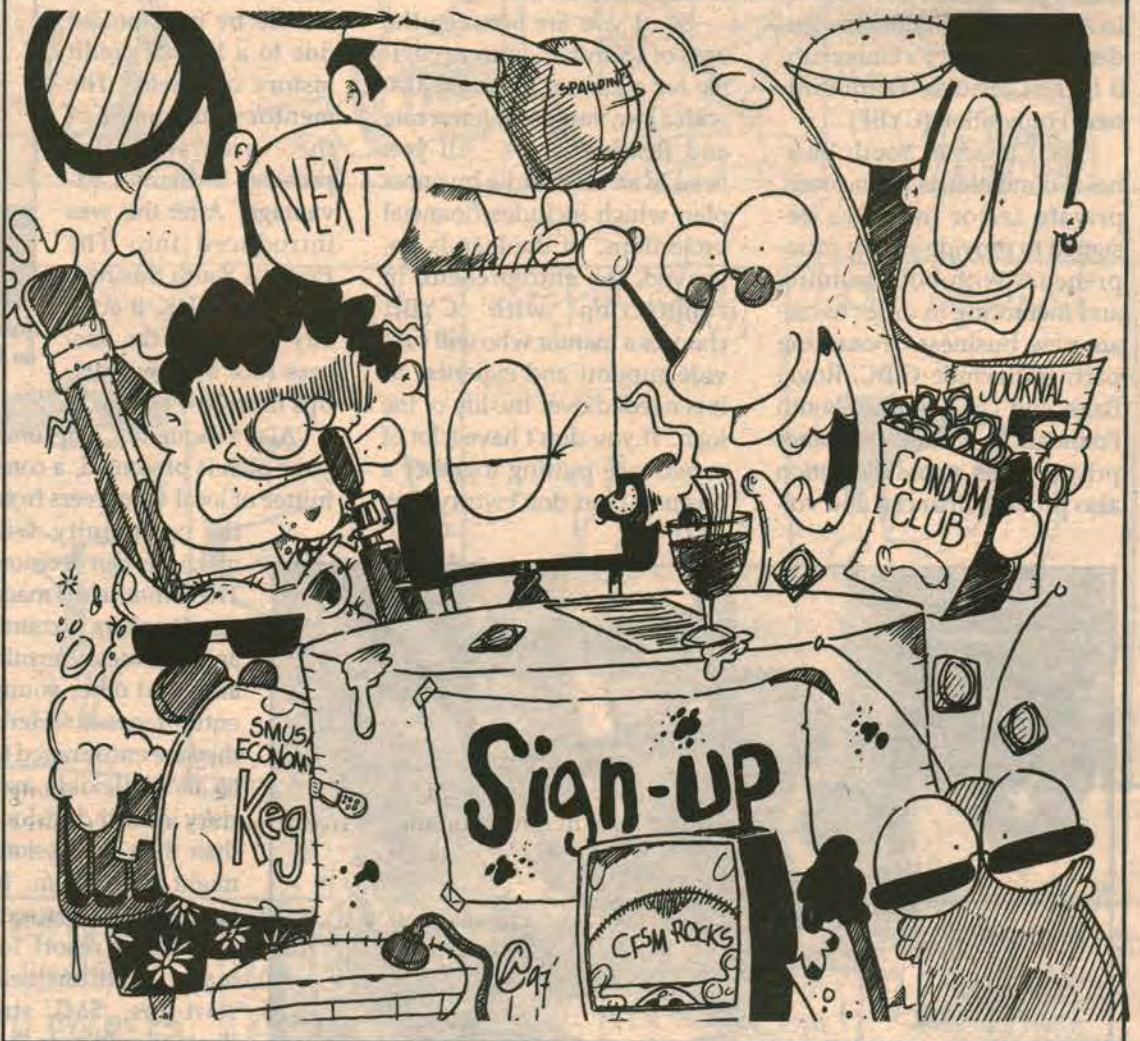

Second: Get involved in more than studying. There is a wide variety of extracurricular activities so you shouldn't have any difficulty finding something you like. Societies of every kind host events all year long and provide an opportunity for students with the same interests to get together. Look for their posters up around campus the first few weeks.

In addition to all this, the campus has a radio station where you can learn some production skills and host your own show if you want. CFSM broadcasts to the campus at this point but has trying hard to get an FM license for quite some time. Finally, if you'd like to reach the pinnacle of extracurricular activities, come and join The Journal. We're starting our 61st year of publication and we cover all the other topics I just mentioned. We publish weekly and are always looking for interested students to get involved. There are lots of different jobs besides writing, but if writing is what you like to do, it is a great place to hone your skills.

Finally: remember 'your' purpose for being here. You will, over next few years, learn a lot about the topic you've chosen to study, but you will also learn a lot about yourself. And you become more aware of yourself, you will become more understanding of others. That's when the real learning begins.

Enjoy yourself. It's one way of being wise.

Blatant Recruitment Ad #237: Look for this logo at the upcoming Society Expo. Come out and see what we're all about

Come One, Come All

Welcome back students! I hope everyone had a terrific summer and I hope you're all ready for another exciting year at SMU. If you are milling around in the colonnade in the next couple of weeks trying to figure out which societies to join, be sure to check us out.

Although a lot of accounting majors join for the potential to make business contacts and to learn about the profession, everyone is welcome. There will be many other events for non accounting majors. Some of the events in the works are a September harbor cruise, pub nights at the Gorsebrook, and pub crawls downtown. One of the most important events is the CA reception coming up very soon. We have tons of new ideas to try this year and were hoping for great success. If you have any questions please feel free to contact me at G_HOBSON@bass.stmarys.ca, or in the Student Union Building, room 516, 435-4244; leave a message. Welcome back, study hard and try to have a little fun.

CYBF: Supporting Young Entrepreneurs

The big banks are finally taking notice of Canada's youth and recognizing the importance of small business in strengthening our economy. By combining their resources, they are creating organizations which provide opportunities for young entrepreneurs to an extent that has not been seen before. If there is one organization that should not be overlooked by any Commerce student at Saint Mary's University, it is the Canadian Youth Business Foundation (CYBF).

The Canadian Youth Business Foundation is a non-profit, private sector initiative designed to provide young entrepreneurs with both funding and mentoring in order to create new business. Founding partners include CIBC, Royal Bank, and The Canadian Youth Foundation. A number of other private firms across the nation also provide financial and volunteer support in order to increase your chances of success. Foundation hopes to enjoy the same success and after rolling out in London, Ontario has opened regional offices in Halifax and Calgary. One third of their resources will be devoted to Atlantic Canada. This means they hope to support 1700 new businesses in the region by 2001. Nation wide, the foundation's goal is to open 5000 businesses in 60 centres.

So, if you are between the ages of 18 and 29, you are eligible for a loan of up to $15,000 with a low, variable interest rate and flexible terms. All you need is an idea and a business plan which includes financial projections. If the loan is approved, the entrepreneur, in conjunction with CYBF, chooses a mentor who will provide support and expertise as it is needed over the life of the loan. If you don't have a lot of experience putting together a business plan, don't worry. Ray

Folkins, Regional Director of Canadian Youth Business Foundation points out, "We are not looking for professional plans, but rather, we must focus on character based lending." This seems to be the key to success for CYBF. Folkins goes on to say that they look for those who demonstrate an entrepreneurial spirit, drive and enthusiasm. This is apparent in the fact that they take the time to interview every applicant. Character based lending is one aspect of this program that makes it unique and acts as an advantage to university students who might otherwise be overlooked due to a lack of credit history or assets. The mentor component of the program also presents a distinct advantage. After this was introduced into The Prince's Youth Business Trust in the UK, it actually increased the success rate of new start-ups from 30% to 70%.

Also unique to CYBF, once your plan is presented, a committee of local volunteers from the community, will make the loan decision. The committee is made up of bankers, accountants, business consultants, and other young entrepreneurs. Here, they are encouraged to be more flexible and risky in their decisions than their professions might afford them. In fact, CYBF is often seen as the last resort for many small business start-ups. SMU students should note that the committee has a healthy representation of people associated with the university. It certainly reflects the quality of our business program and its members commitment to business and community development.

"Come in for God's sake, the tea's on!" This is Jo-Anne Donovan's cry to the 66,800 Cape Breton natives that live in metro Halifax. The local committee was able to approve her loan for The Cape Breton Store and Tea Room on Barrington Street within four days of her plan reaching CYBF. Prior to this, Donovan had no business experience, but had always dreamed of owning her own business.

"I knew because of the job situation in Cape Breton, I couldn't go back, so I set up a piece of Cape Breton here in Halifax," says Donovan, noting that she received tremendous planning support from Marian Hopkins at the Centre for Women in Business. Donovan turned to the Royal Bank and CYBF for funding and in less than a week was approved for both. Her account Manager from the Royal Bank, Earl Covin, is also a mentor for CYBF. Donovan liked the personal touch offered by CYBF, and that of all her sources of assistance, CYBF was the only one able to offer her the support of a mentor.

Not only has the foundation's support helped to create full-time employment for Donovan and her staff, but also a new spot in Halifax for all to enjoy and a place where hundreds of Cape Bretoners at SMU and other metro institutures The Harbour Folk Society, with piano playing, Gaelic singing, and fiddling.

Don't miss the official grand-opening on Saturday, September 13. This will be nothing short of a good ol' Cape Breton kitchen party with well known names from the other side of the causeway. Keep an eye out for Natalie McMaster's pianist, Tracy Dares, and McGinty's John Ferguson. The Cape Breton Store will also be offering dance and music lessons in the very near future.

"Everyone told me how hard it would be to open my own business, and all the problems I would have," says Donovan, "but my biggest fear was not doing it at all."

Alice Cooper
A Fistful of Alice EMI

by Yanick Renault

Alice Cooper's new album, A Fistful of Alice, is far better than the 1977's previous live album, Alice Cooper Show. First off, you have Alice with three special guests: Rob Zombie, Slash & Sammy Hagar. There are many highlights to this album including when Alice introduces Slash as his "favorite guitar player", Alice states he wrote "Desperado" "...for Jim Morrison...a long time ago", "Teenage Lament '74" "live for the first time on an official release, and a totally new song entitled "Is Anyone Home?". This may be the only place where you can hear Rob Zombie sing "Feed my Frankenstein".

Using a similar set list from the 1995 American tour (minus a few songs), this album is much truer to the originals. "Is Anyone Home?" foreshadows what the next album is going to be. It was recorded June 2, 1996 at Sammy Hagar's Cabo Wabo Cantina in Cabo San Lucas, Mexico and was finally released in July to coincide with his summer tour. For more information on Alice's tour, simply go to his website: www.alicecoppershow.com

This CD is definitely worth the money.

Foo Fighters
The Colour and the Shape
EMI/Capitol

by Dwayne Wright

The Foo Fighters are back with their newest release The Colour and the Shape. Former Nirvana members, Dave Grohl and Pat Smear, create a definitely different sound than their old band. The Foo Fighters have an aggressive rock sound with good rhythms and energy. Nirvana mostly made noise. Grohl makes the transition from drums, in Nirvana, to guitar and vocals for these guys. I believe that The Colour and the Shape was recorded during a drummer switch which put Grohl behind the kit once again for the majority of the album.

The first single "Monkey Wrench" did well on the charts. It also has an interesting video. It features Grohl trying to get into his apartment (after leaving the elevator which was playing a nice quaint version of "Big Me") only to find it chained from the inside. After peeking into the keyhole he sees The Foo Fighters, including himself, playing the song. Then...well, watch the video. The first single has the typical Foo Fighters energy found on the first album, but the songs are rather different. "Monkey Wrench" winds up with Grohl in a screaming session, but he does it well. Maybe he should have sung for Nirvana

"Everlong" is a great tune. It is not as loud and it has a kind of determined sound that is well composed and well structured. I haven't seen the video for this one. Another song that stuck out for me on this album was "My Hero."

This is a good record and definitely a progression from their debut, some might even say better. Check it out: I do not think that you will be disappointed.

Bran Van 3000
Glee Audiogram

by Kevin Smith

At first glance the cover conjures up images of 70's hard-rock bands and van art that Meatloaf would certainly appreciate. First listen, however, is a completely different story. This is one of the most interesting and innovative albums that I've heard in a very long time.

I couldn't believe that Bran Van 3000 was Canadian when I first heard it; it is just too different and lately the Canadian music scene has been less than spectacular. Glee is incredible - a perfect mix of hip-hop, punk, folk, rock, jazz, and rap - you really have to experience it. With witty lyrics, great production, and catchy tunes this disc is sure to appeal to almost everyone.

If you've seen the video for "Drinking in L.A." on the nation's repeat station you have a good idea of what Bran Van 3000 are about but there is a lot more. I recommend their great version of Slade's (and Quiet Riot's) "Cum on Feel the Noize", "Exactly Like Me" - pure pop, and "Supermodel", though the album as whole is excellent. I think I can now cast my vote for Bran Van 3000's Glee as "Album of the Year".

Brutality on the beat...

Copland Brings Out Oscar Rumours

by Ali S. Zaheer

Just in time for the NYPD brutality scandal comes a movie that doesn't help the PR campaign any. Copland has one of this summer's best casts, and is filled with people I didn't hear about in any of the ads. With people like Robert De Niro, Harvey Keitel, Sylvester Stallone, and in smaller roles Janeane Garofolo and Peter Berg you would think that this movie would be an instant classic; however despite all the names, Copland could have been much better.

Copland has a good story, but it never seems to find a rhythm that fits the movie. A group of New York police officer at the 37th Division work overtime as transit cops to be able to live across the Hudson in New Jersey. In a little town called Garrison, the entire division lives in houses bought with mob money. To keep the peace in this town of blue is Sheriff Fred Heflin (Sly Stallone), "The sheriff of Copland", a man who never got the chance to fulfill his dream and become a cop in 'the city'. The dirty cops are lead by Ray (Harvey Keitel) with his cadre of cops including Figgis (Ray Liotta), Joey Randone (Peter Berg), Superboy (Michael Rapaport) and others. The plot begins with Superboy involved in a shooting death that can't be cleaned up, Uncle Ray shows up and fakes the death of Superboy. The dirty cops transport Superboy to Garrison where he is to remain hidden, all of this done right in front of Heflin who is too timid to do anything. At this point enter Moe Tilden (Robert De Niro), an Internal Affairs cop investigating the men living in Garrison, Tilden attempts to coerce Heflin into giving away information about the dirty cops.

Add to all this Figgis, who is now an estranged member of the ring, who is now siding with Heflin. From this point on, the whole movie become a version of State of Grace.

Overall I liked Copland but some things really need to be fixed. The plot seems to have some holes and quick jumps that aren't properly explained, see if you catch the importance of the 'Club'? When I saw Copland I missed it at first. In terms of acting Stallone wasn't bad acting in a serious role, but the weight he added on didn't really make me view him as paunchy and weak. Keitel played his usual role, very intense and impressive. And then there was De Niro, I can't really comment on him because he's in very little of the movie. One final point, when do you think the movie is set? From the ads I expected the late 70's - early 80's, the clothes they wear and De Niro looking like he stepped out of the Beastie Boys' Sabotage video. I'll recommend Copland, not because it's a great movie, but rather to see the actors and because I'm already hearing Oscar rumours.

What Sucked This Summer

by Kevin Smith

NBC sucked. "New to you! Must see TV. If you haven't seen it, it's new to you!" Wow, what the hell kind of ploy is this? Now they are trying to sell the reruns to us. Guess what? They're reruns!

I had a scratch and win ticket from Irving. The gamepiece has nine scratch-off boxes and the instructions tell you to scratch off three only and find three symbols (I can't remember what the symbol was, I think it was the Irving symbol) to win what was in the scratch-off prizebox. Then I scratched off three of the nine boxes and I didn't win. I had found only one symbol. Next, I scratched off the prizebox to reveal that I could have won a Riverdale coffee and with a sadness in my heart that could only come from losing out on a Riverdale coffee, I scratched off the remaining six boxes to see where those blasted symbols were. Much to my surprise, there were only two symbols. So instead of just having $3/9 \times$

$2/8 \times 1/7 = 6/504$ (approx. 1.2%), there was absolutely no chance to win. I have feeling that Irving didn't lose money on that contest. That sucked.

The 90210 girls' attempts at serious TV movies with a message, sucked. There were at least three starring Tiffany-Amber Theissen, two with by Tori Spelling, and one featuring Jenny Garth. I can't say if they are getting all this work because of their fine acting talents or some of their other assets, it is hard to say.

The music scene here in Atlantic Canada over the summer left something to be desired. There was the Great Big Picnic featuring Great Big Sea, Big Sugar et al. - what else happened? I know that we can't compete with the rest of Canada population-wise but throw us a bone. There were a lot of big festivals going on this summer but, as usual, they never make it down here. The Edgefest featured The Tea Party, IMother Earth, Our Lady Peace, Age of Electric, and Silverchair, and started in Ontario and moved west. Sarah McLachlan's Lilith Fair was a big success. I guess I'd be fooling myself if I thought that it would come to the Maritimes.

I guess the suckiest part of the summer was when my girlfriend dumped me; I guess most of you didn't hear about that.

If you are thinking that this article was a load of negative whining, you're right. However, it is not meant to be taken seriously. You can look forward to a weekly column this year featuring resident pessimist, David Andrew Mutch, who always has something or someone to complain about.

Between A Rock And A Hard Cover

On any given Sunday I could be found doing one of two things this summer. When you get past eating stale Hostess Nacho Taquitos off your own chest while watching another stellar Shannon Tweed-athon that you taped off Blue Nuit the night before, I had to start asking myself, was there better time management to be utilized? I guess rut is a kind word for the funk that had befallen me.

I had received a package that past Thursday, and frankly hadn't taken the initiative to shower, let alone open that box. It stared at me for days, just out of reach. A well thrown sneaker, might have retrieved it, but that would have meant stretching, dispatching my precious cargo of Nacho crumbs to the floor, and there was no way in Hell I was going to vacuum. Of course there always was the cat.

Finally in a sad display of slackdom, I managed to call 911. I was later informed by the attending medic, that it wasn't really an emergency. Says him. Opening the box revealed four selections from the Book Club for School Girls. I grimaced realizing somewhere a fifteen year old adolescent Hanson lover was leafing through "The Girls of the Hub Meat Processing Plant Calendar".

A quartet of paper-back time passers lay before me. The cable was out from the firefighters breaking in the wall earlier, so I kicked back and was ready to absorb at the grade 7 reading level. I hadn't read a book outside of school since the Hardy Boys, those two sleuth riddled teens who roamed the town solving crime and eating plenty of Scooby snacks; or was that Nancy Drew?

No Fixed Address by Maureen Bayless featured a disheveled teen sitting on a corner with a guitar case and a hat full of coins. My instincts promised me an exciting story about Buskers! Unfortunately the book unfolds a depressing yarn about this waif named Sabie who hits the streets after her Mom dies. Evading Social Services she doesn't really encounter any evil Pimps or murderous crack heads, so by about page 47, I lose interest and start picking some stray lint out of my belly-button. The book came in handy later as a coaster.

The Body in the Basement by Norah McLintock granted looked better. It painted a picture of a girl looking on in horror of two hands being chained together. After the last book, my expectations were about three apples high. Here was this chick named Tasha who's Father gets arrested by the cops after they suspect him of offing Tasha's mom. Holy Melrose, Batman! Long story short: Dad didn't do it. Tasha solves it a la Murder She Wrote, and he's set free. It was as believable as Tori Spelling's breasts or an episode of MacGyver. It does sway more to a fifteen year old since Tasha bags a hunky guy named Jace. For some reason this book would have made a nice night-cap to an episode of Catwalk.

Sylvia McNicoll's Walking a Thin Line tackles the After School Special topic of eating disorders. It actually proved to be the most depressing of the four books as it looked at this problem in a serious manner. I felt bad eating that second donair in the middle of the book, especially when some sauce dolloped onto the page where Lauren was regurgitating a cup-cake in a toilet. The line to beat is from a counselor who points out the first three letters in diet spell DIE. She must be a real card at the scrabble table.

Finally, I had left Grave Danger by Gisela Tobien Sherman last (talk about a triple word score) because it had twins on the cover. One good, One evil. Both girls! Catfight! Meow! Seems Cassie is being blamed for things she didn't do. She's been giving numbers to guys she doesn't know. That didn't really shock me since it's a regular occurrence downtown. Ultimately this book reverts to a seedy paperback thriller as the evil twin dies hideously at the hands of a wayward lawn mower. The sad thing is that I had to make the last part up to justify reading this 194 page epic.

The afternoon now fading, I felt better having read some printed matter. Now if a date asked me if I had read any good books lately, I could at least give an honest answer, without broadening the realm to include the National Enquirer in that category. I was just happy I wasn't a fifteen year old girl who'd just plopped $4.99 on one of these novels instead of that glossy copy of Teen Beat with Jonathan Taylor Thomas on the cover. That would have been a damn shame.

they do not set a good example as Canadian Industrial. Their previous album Affliction was better. They've varied slightly, but as I've said, are distinct and similar. I must, however, admit that some of the rhythms are catchy. The picture on the back of the CD case makes them look as if they've developed an attitude - kind of amusing.

Ever wonder where the name came from? Well, you know those old vans that you see with the word "Econoline" on the side?... well, there. But I'm not sure where the crush comes from... you can let your imagination run wild on that one. "Surefire", the disc opener, sounds like one of the songs from Affliction, but that's kind of good because Affliction was a good album. For some reason they are not using the same producer, Rhys Fulber (1/3 of Delirium), from their previous release, instead they are using the familiar Silvia Massy. This could explain some things.

Econoline Crush have a full sound that could use some alterations on the vocals. I don't mean additional electronic mess, maybe something pure. There's not much left to say about The Devil You Know. The songs all sound somewhat similar. Some of them are not too bad, but some are. If you want to take a chance, you might like it.

There's also a bonus at the end of the CD. It's a girl reading a passage from the bible (Corinthians 13:7) in Japanese. Interesting.

The Tea Party Transmission EMI

by Kevin Smith

First off, I'd like to say "Hey, Tea Party, do you think that you will ever find your way back to Atlantic Canada again?" It's a little disappointing that they haven't been here for several years but I guess they have to keep their Australian fans happy.

Initially, Transmission produced some mixed feelings for me. The Tea Party is one of my favorite bands and the new album took me by surprise. On one hand, they seem to have embraced the recent electronica fad and they created a great album with it, on the other hand, they seem to have embraced the recent electronica fad. Bands do need to grow though and this is just another stage for the group.

For those of you who can't get over the Doors and Led Zeppelin comparisons I'd like you to really listen to Transmission. Every group is influenced by some other band in some way and eventually they come into their own and perhaps become a group that is influencing others. I am paraphrasing, but The Tea Party lead-man, Jeff Martin, says of the Doors, "I never really liked them, I thought that they were just a bad surf band".

Transmission remains true to The Tea Party style with blistering guitar riffs, pounding drums, and intense rhythms, all reinforced with moody synth and sampling that would make the Chemical Brothers proud. To sum it up, they won't lose any fans but they will surely gain some new ones.

The Quest Begins

by Roger Ramjet

What are the Football Huskies looking for? The excellence worthy of a program rich in a winning tradition. Coach Larry Uteck believes he has assembled a football squad that will return him to the winning ways to which he is accustomed. Two seasons in a row have passed without a playoff berth for the Huskies. Previous to this drought, the Huskies had not missed the playoffs since 1986.

Under Coach Uteck, the Huskies have secured seven AUSA titles, three Atlantic Bowl titles and three appearances in the national football final, the Vanier Cup. An impressive drive to recruit new young talent has resulted in as many as 50 rookies attending the opening of training camp. Most of the recruiting accolades must be given to defensive line coach Danny Zarifeh and defensive coordinator Gus Karouzakis. Some promising young rookies to look out for include the quarterback receiver combination of Ryan Jones and Kelly Roulston, linemen Chris Reid and Jocelyn Frenette as well as Luis Perez. What are the Huskies looking for? Looking maybe for some of these rookies to reach their potential quickly to compliment the assets already in place.

Although the football Huskies finished out of the playoffs, they were still four and four and were strong contenders before slipping at the end of last season. Strong returning players such as quarterback Perry Marchese, AUSA defensive rookie of the year Mathieu Demers, receivers David Kameka and Yanick Trudel, running back Ray Skeete and defensive lineman Enes Medanhodzic are there to be complimented by this young talent. This season I imagine the football squad is looking for another championship, the same goal any deserving team begins with. I hope they find that championship, it would be nice to cheer on a champ again, but the quest has just begun.

Larry Uteck (right) will be hoping second year players Mathieu Demers (above) and Yanick Trudel (below) can improve on excellent rookie years to help push Saint Mary's Football back on its AUSA pedistal

Reviving The Past

The Saint Mary's football Huskies have looked to the past to help rebuild a winning tradition. With the addition of Chris Flynn as offensive coordinator and Sean Marriot guiding the linebackers, the Huskies have surrounded their young team with former players who know the taste of victory. As part of teams that consistently dominated the AUSA in the late eighties and early nineties, these two contributed to a combined 3 Vanier Cup appearances. Chris Flynn, with his three consecutive Hec

Creighton Trophies as the country's best collegiate player, was promoted to offensive coordinator from quarterback coach with the hopes that his once aggressive playing style at quarterback will be reflected in his approach to running the Saint Mary's offense. With the addition of these two former AUSA all stars to a coaching cast that already includes defensive coordinator (and former AUSA all star himself) Gus Karouzakis, the Huskies have winning tradition coaching both sides of the ball this season.

Stephen Hart returns to Saint Mary's after 11 year absence...

Women's Soccer Has Hart

by Chris Gillcash

On Monday, when everyone was dealing with the pains of moving, the Saint Mary's women's soccer team began training for a new season. This day marked the beginning of a new era for the women's program. There is an air of excitement within the team because of the arrival of new coach Stephen Hart. Stephen joins the Husky program as the new women's soccer coach, replacing departed Joanne Evans.

Stephen Hart returns to Saint Mary's after eleven years. He was both a player and an assistant coach with the men's program before leaving. He played with the Huskies between 1980-1985 and was an assistant coach with the team for two years beginning in 1986. Of his many soccer accomplishments one that stands out is being awarded the MVP at the Canadian Senior Soccer Championships while playing for King of Donair. He came to SMU from Trinidad on the advice of a friend who was already living in Halifax.

Coach Hart brings an impressive amount of credentials. Since leaving SMU he has gone on to become the Technical Director of Soccer Nova Scotia as well as this year's Director of Canada Games Program for Nova Scotia. During this past summer he was also the coach of the Nova Scotia women's team which participated in the Canada Summer Games.

This involvement within the Nova Scotia soccer community will be a great asset to recruiting. Coach Hart has a familiarity with the players coming up through the age groups that will give him an advantage as far as determining skill level for Nova Scotia players. Coach Hart's involvement with other programs also brings an immediate respectability to the Saint Mary's program. These assets and an ability to communicate with players will help bring credibility and integrity to the program in the long run. Roy Clements, who was part of the selection committee is enthusiastic about Stephen Hart's future with the team. From the accounts of the returning players, they agree that Coach Hart is the man most suited for this job.

As the coach of a team it is important to set goals, both short and long term. Coach Hart sees the soccer program as a long term commitment that will take time. It is his belief that a long term future is more important than an immediate gain. There will be no short cuts taken for short term success if it means jeopardizing the future. In order to build a program, the goal cannot be simply to win games but must also include an emphasis on academics, coaching accomplishments, and the growth of the athlete as an individual while at Saint Mary's.

The immediate task at hand for Coach Hart is to get familiar with the team he has. He had a very busy summer with the Canada Games program so was unable to begin his work at SMU as early as he would have liked. New players were recruited before he arrived and the team is still not sure which players will be returning for the new season. This will create a period of adjustment for both coach and player. It will take time before the entire team will be able to gel as a unit.

The short term goals of the team are to make the playoffs. Last year the team made the playoffs on the final day of the season and were able to make it to the semi-finals, losing to the eventual champions, Acadia. The playoffs are a sudden death format, so once in, anything can happen. Coach Hart sees the team progressing through the regular season and then to be evaluated at the end. With Stephen Hart as the coach the players believe the playoffs are a very realistic goal.

Coach Hart realizes that as a coach at Saint Mary's there are expectations placed upon him to win. He is however, realistic in his approach to these expectations. He points out that most achievements in sports occur in cycles and with patience and the proper guidance the women's program will begin a successful run. As for the pressure involved, especially as a returning star, it must be put in perspective. There are events occurring around the world that pale in comparison to a soccer game. Hart will stress to his players that they are here at SMU to get an education and winning soccer games will fall into place after that. With Stephen Hart leading the way, however, the team may become accustomed to winning. The future of the women's soccer program certainly seems to be in good hands.

Winds Of Change

by Enrique Mendosa

After a disappointing year which saw the Huskies athletics program flounder unsuccessfully, changes were inevitable. Major coaching changes took place in the off season, which means some new faces are running our mens ice hockey and women's volleyball teams. As well, a varsity star from Saint Mary's not so distant past is now coaching the women's soccer team. Here's a run down of who is in and who is out.

Men's Hockey

After watching his team fall apart last season and finish last in the division, Paul Boutillier resigned his position in the spring. A season that started with promise was riddled with injuries and discipline problems, which included coach Boutillier being suspended for throwing a clipboard. After three years of unfulfilled potential the hockey team will now look to new coach Trevor Steinburg for leadership.

Women's Volleyball

After an incredible year which saw this squad reach the CIAU tournament in Alberta, head coach Lori Welsh-Hawley is gone. In her wake she leaves a squad that matured from a good squad into a team that dominated the AUSA last season with an 18-0 record. She leaves SMU to coach cross town rivals Dalhousie.

Women's Soccer

After a year which saw the team squeak into the playoffs on the last day of play and then make a sensational playoff run, head coach Joanne Evans has moved on. Their sensational playoff streak saw them advance to the AUSA semi-finals before losing to eventual champs Acadia, 3-2. Of note, by scoring two goals in that game, Saint Mary's became the only team to score on Acadia in AUSA play. For a profile of the new coach see "Women's Soccer has Hart"

Just For Fun: Intramural Season

The intramural season is upon us again, playing sports just cause you want to, like a recess for big people. The endless joys of playing in the torrential rains of autumn, the frustration of finding just enough girls so you don't default that important game, the pure bliss of getting that lazy brother floor to sign onto a team. Ah yes, wonderful times indeed. You'd wonder at the thought of having any fun at all, but you do. Sure your team may stink, or your team may be brilliant, either way, what it boils down to in the end is that you are playing for a t-shirt and a free party at the end of the year. It's a nice t-shirt and quite frankly, a pretty good party (I've gone to a few of them), but all the same it's nothing really. I'm not saying it shouldn't be competitive, everyone needs to be challenged, but the point of it is, it's just for fun. Intramural nights on the turf are a great way to meet people (especially co-ed sports), and you can't beat the price cause it's free. Sure you lay down a twenty when you register your team but all you have to do is show up to all your games to get it back. And have I mentioned it's pretty fun? Honest, you'll have big fun, trust me.

Here's all the stuff you'll need to know to get you through the next few weeks.

So all you do is this:

Register before the registration deadline by bringing your team name and twenty dollars default fee

Take your captain's package and read the general and sport specific rules. As captain you should know them. Complete the team entry form to be handed in at the Captain's meeting.

Show up for the captain's meeting to receive your schedule and to review any rule discrepancies. This will also allow you to ask any questions.
