

Saint Mary's University Prepares to Celebrate 200th Anniversary

The excitement is building at Saint Mary's as the University prepares for its 200th anniversary. Extensive planning is going into the year long celebration that will mark two centuries of historic achievement in higher education.

Saint Mary's 200th Anniversary Steering Committee has been meeting since the spring to lay the groundwork for the year of events. The anniversary will officially begin at the Spring Convocation Ceremony on May 24, 2002. Dr. J. Colin Dodds says, "The 200th anniversary will celebrate our rich history of service to students, commitment to accessibility and community outreach. It will also permit us to welcome our future as a dynamic and innovative leader in post-secondary education."

The anniversary will provide an opportunity to honour the values and traditions that have provided the foundation of Saint Mary's University. Attention will also be focussed on Saint Mary's vision of the future including the renovation and renewal of the campus and accessibility to students worldwide. The recent $25 million investment in the Loyola-Vanier residences with its extensive telecommunications upgrades are only the beginning of future projects which will include a new Science complex, The Dauphinee Centre – the multi-athletics complex and renovation of Huskies Stadium. To support the ongoing development and improvement of the campus, Saint Mary's will be embarking on its most ambitious and innovative capital campaign in its history. Chuck Bridges, Vice-President (Assoc.) External Affairs, Chair of the 200th Anniversary Steering Committee says, "The celebration will last more than a year with events planned on campus, in the HRM and around the world."

The official logo and a comprehensive calendar of events planned for the 200th anniversary year will be presented in the months ahead. The logo for the 200th anniversary will be highly visible throughout campus on everything from letterhead to varsity athletic uniforms. High profile tributes that have already been confirmed include a commemorative stamp that will be issued by Canada Post in May, 2002. The logo will also be featured prominently on the metro landscape beginning in June, 2002 when it will appear as a floral

State-of-the-art Residence Unveiled

by Lisa Legatto and Paul Fitzgerald

(L-R) Dr. J. Colin Dodds, President of Saint Mary's University; Gabrielle Morrison, Vice-President, Administration; Samantha Anderson, President, Saint Mary's Students' Association; Benjamin Chambers, residence student; The Honourable Jane Purves, Minister of Education; and Most Reverend Terrence Prendergast, S.J., Archbishop of Halifax, Chancellor of Saint Mary's unveil the plaque marking the re-opening of Saint Mary's renovated Loyola and Vanier residences.

On September 4, Saint Mary's University officially re-opened the newly renovated Loyola and Vanier residence buildings. After 18 months of extensive renovations, reconstruction and refurbishment, the Loyola and Vanier residences have been brought up to the highest standard of technology readiness, safety, student comfort and convenience.

Students, faculty, staff and special guests came together to celebrate the completion of one of Canada's most wired residences. Guests who participated in the official re-opening included Jane Purves, Minister of Education; Jerry Blumenthal, Halifax Regional Municipality (HRM), Deputy Mayor; Sue Uteck, HRM Councilor; Most Reverend Terrence Prendergast, S.J., Archbishop of Halifax, Chancellor of Saint Mary's; Dr. J. Colin Dodds, President of Saint Mary's University; Gabrielle Morrison, Vice-President, Administration; Samantha Anderson, President, Saint Mary's Students Association; and Keith Hotchkiss, Director of Student Services, who acted as Master of Ceremonies. Saint Mary's Opens its Doors to Stranded Passengers

In the wake of the terrorist attacks on the United States on September 11, 2001 over fifty flights en-route to American destinations were re-routed to Halifax International Airport leaving thousands of passengers in need of accommodations. Saint Mary's University offered its assistance to Halifax's Emergency Measures Operations and that evening, 132 passengers arrived at The Tower, Saint Mary's athletics complex.

In less than two hours, staff and students turned The Tower into a temporary home for the passengers from British Airways flight 2025 scheduled to fly from London, England to Houston, Texas. Even with the profound sadness of the events of the day fresh in everyone's minds, groups of volunteers made beds, folded towels, filled boxes with soap, set up food and drinks, chairs, televisions, phones, e-mail accounts and Internet plug-ins. When passengers arrived at The Tower they were greeted by smiling students who helped them to get settled. The Tower was closed until the passengers left late on Thursday, September 13.

In a message to the University community delivered on September 13, Dr. J. Colin Dodds, Saint Mary's president said, "A large number of staff and students prepared the beds in the gym while others efficiently registered the passengers as they arrived, carried their suite cases, offered cold drinks and pledged to make blood donations." He said, "Their work illustrated our students' leadership and commitment to their community. I would like to extend my sincere appreciation to everyone who was involved in providing for our special guests."

The University would like to extend special thanks to members of the Saint Mary's emergency response team, External Affairs, Aramark, Facilities Management, Security, Student Services, Conference Services, especially Wanda Robinson and all the members of the Saint Mary's community who volunteered their time.

IDS Student Awarded National Leadership In Internationalization Award

by Lisa Legatto

Katie Kehoe, recipient of the 2001 CBIE Student Leadership in Internationalization Award spent last semester working and studying in The Gambia.

Katie Kehoe has been awarded the 2001 Canadian Bureau of International Education (CBIE) Student Leadership in Internationalization Award. This award which recognizes a Canadian student for their contribution to internationalization at home or abroad is the second major national award that Kehoe has received this year.

"I'm really excited and I was really surprised," Kehoe says about receiving the award. Last semester, the fourth year honours student enrolled in the International Development Studies (IDS) program at Saint Mary's worked in The Gambia through the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada (AUCC) and the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) Learning

Through Service Program. The program provided her with the opportunity to become involved in a University project in a developing region for one semester. The pilot program meshed her academic work with the hands-on experience at the West African Rural Development Centre (WARD). Dr. Gerry Cameron, a Saint Mary's IDS

The Office Next Door — Jane Collins

by Lisa Legatto

Providing Health Care Often More than a Full-time Job

On the night of September 11, Jane Collins was visiting passengers of the British Airways plane that was re-routed to Halifax. She moved around the gymnasium of The Tower stopping to apply an ice pack to a man's arthritic knee, take a woman's blood pressure and consult with an elderly man who couldn't sleep. Although, the situation was atypical for everyone involved, it was a typical role for Collins, Saint Mary's R.N. and nurse educator at Student Health Services, whose job often requires her to be on call 24 hours a day.

Collins worked at Saint Mary's Health Services during the summers from 1989 – 1991 and assumed a full-time position in 1994. Last year, brought a major change to Health Services when the University hired two full-time physicians, Dr. Danielle Lewington and Dr. Richard Lewington. In the past, doctors would come in for shifts from other clinics making continuity of care difficult. On average, 50 – 70 students, faculty and staff visit the clinic each day. Alumni and their families are also now beginning to visit Health Services regularly.

"One of the reasons why our clinic is very popular is because our doctors are very good," says Collins. "We're here to provide service for students and we realize how difficult it is for students on the run." Collins says that Health Services is an essential resource for students. "This is the age when you want people to take control and become aware of all aspects of their own health."

Throughout the day at Health Services, Collins does everything from consulting with students to collecting blood work. Even after Health Services closes at 5 pm, she remains on call for Saint Mary's students until the next morning. "I consider it to be part of the service," she says. Sometimes, she directs students to go to emergency, others require advice or a simple test to be conducted on the weekend.

Collins is also a sexual assault nurse examiner (SANE). SANE was developed by the metro sexual assault response initiative and community partners. Since receiving her certification in 1997, through the original SANE program, she has been called to hospital emergency departments to be with victims in the critical hours following a sexual assault to gather forensic evidence. On a few occasions, she has had to testify in rape trials as a forensic witness. Since June, Collins has been on call from 7 pm to 7 am and alternate weekends for the Queen Elizabeth II Health Centre, Dartmouth General Hospital and IWK Health Centre. From 1997 until only a few months ago, she had been the only remaining SANE nurse on-call for every evening and weekend. On October 5, Jamie Muire, Minister of Health unveiled the new SANE program that is being delivered by the Avalon Sexual Assault Centre. Collins and Brenda Zareski, SANE Co-ordinator are training the 12 SANE nurses. Collins says "I feel that my work as a SANE is important to the community, as the SANE provides immediate, compassionate, culturally sensitive and comprehensive forensic evaluation to victims of sexual assault." The SANE Program is a 3 year pilot project in the Capital District Health Authority.

Saint Mary's Health Services' hours are Monday to Friday 8:30 am - 12:30 pm, 1:30 pm - 5:00 pm. Blood work can be booked Tuesday to Friday 8:20 - 9:45 am. ♦

Criminology Professor an Onassis Fellow

Dr. George Rigakos, a Saint Mary's Sociology and Criminology professor has been granted a prestigious Onassis Fellowship. Past recipients of the fellowship include Nobel Laureates and heads of state.

This month, Dr. Rigakos will leave for three months of research in Athens, Greece. "I am very excited about working with Dr. Calliope Spinellis at the Centre for Penal and Criminological Research at the University of Athens Law School. The Onassis Grant will allow us to conduct comparative research on public and private policing in Greece and Canada."

The grant is funded through the Alexander S. Onassis Public Benefit Foundation. The Foundation was created by Greek tycoon, Aristotelis Onassis, one of the most successful shipowners in the world. In 1956, he established Olympic Airways airline, which he transferred to the Greek State in 1975, after having developed it into a private company serving the five continents. In 1968, Onassis married Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy, widow of the late President of the United States, John F. Kennedy.

After his death in 1975, Onassis' handwritten will outlined his wishes for the creation of a private, independent Public Benefit Foundation, named after his late son, Alexander, to which he bequeathed half his fortune. The Foundation is active in developing public benefit projects directed towards Greece and outside Greece.

Dr. Rigakos has conducted research on the emerging relationship between public and private security. He says, "I am slated to present to the National Police Academy and the Greek Society of Criminology on the now even more important relationships between public and private policing sectors in an international context." Dr. Rigakos will be completing his term this fall as the Law Commission of Canada's first Virtual Scholar in Residence. The Virtual Scholar in Residence was a joint initiative of the Law Commission of Canada and the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada. Dr. Rigakos worked with the Commission and scholars from across Canada using the latest telecommunications technology to examine how the evolving relationship between private security and public police responds to the security needs of different communities. ♦

professor and WARD facilitator says, "Katie should be recognized for the leadership she brought to the WARD project in terms of utilizing her skills in communication and organization." Dr. Cameron says that in only twelve weeks, Kehoe learned basic Wolof and Mandinka, the two main languages of the region. "Her ability to communicate and share is the essence of leadership."

Denis Leclaire, Director of Saint Mary's International Activities describes Kehoe, "She is a poised, thoughtful young woman who thrived in a challenging international context and who will continue, I am sure, to be involved, supportive and take a leadership role in the internationalization process in Canada and abroad." He says, "Katie should be congratulated for being such a special student and representative of Saint Mary's."

Kehoe has a passion for drama, as a form of education and international development. She received critical acclaim for her lead role as "Stella" in the University production of "A Streetcar Named Desire". In August, she performed a one woman interactive play that she wrote about her experiences in Africa entiled "The Gambia Pressed Upon Me Like a Play" for her community in Margaree, Cape Breton. "It's a very personal play about how I was affected by the differences and how I realized how we're all the same," says Kehoe. The play deals with the people, culture and environment that Kehoe was introduced to in The Gambia. "It's about feeling all of those influences and being affected by them. The reason why I performed the play was to bring something back from The Gambia." She plans to perform the play at Saint Mary's to thank all of those who were involved with her work this year. "Only good keeps coming from all of this and I have everyone to thank." Kehoe would like to extend a special thank you to Denis Leclaire, International Activities, Dr. Cameron and Dr. J. Colin Dodds, Saint Mary's President, for their support.

Kehoe is looking forward to the CBIE Annual Conference to be held from November 16 – 19 in Banff, Alberta where she will be presented her award. "I'm going to have an opportunity to listen to fantastic speakers and learn from all of their different perspectives." ♦

LEADERSHIP • VISION • COMMITMENT

Robert G. Belliveau, Q.C. (L) with Dr. J. Colin Dodds, President.

These are the qualities that distinguish the high calibre of individuals who we invite to sit on our Board of Governors. Individuals like Robert G. Belliveau, Q.C., whose vision and unwavering commitment have helped make Saint Mary's one of Canada's finest universities.

The Board of Governors at Saint Mary's University is pleased to announce the reappointment of Robert G. Belliveau, Q.C. to a second term as Chair of the Board of Governors.

From his days as a student at Saint Mary's through his highly successful career, Bob has continued to make a significant contribution to his community. These include Director of the National Association of University Board Chairs and Secretaries, Member of the Executive, Advisory and Finance Committees at Saint Mary's, Past Chair of two Presidential Search Committees, and Past Chair of the Investment, Finance and Audit Committees.

A Senior Partner with McInnes Cooper, he has served as Chair of the Administration of Justice Committee of the Nova Scotia Barristers' Society, a member of the Supreme Court Liaison Sub-Committee (Civil), and is a member of the Nova Scotia Barristers' Society and the Canadian Bar Association.

He has been involved in numerous community organizations including Advisory Board Chair of the Sisters of Service and President of the Waegwotic Club.

We extend our congratulations to Bob on his outstanding accomplishments and welcome his continuing leadership as Chair of the Board of Governors.

Saint Mary's is committed to excellence in teaching, research and community service, our hallmark since 1802.

Celebrating our Bicentennial in 2002, our success is a tribute to the exceptional individuals who share our vision.

University Offers Assistance and Gathers for Peace

Saint Mary's responded to the news of the terrorist attacks on New York City and Washington, D.C. on September 11, 2001 by providing opportunities for students and staff to deal with their grief and come together at 'A Prayer for Peace', an interfaith memorial service for peace and reflection.

Soon after the events of September 11, Dr. J. Colin Dodds addressed the community. He said, "Saint Mary's University wishes to offer its profound grief following the acts of terrorism in the United States. We offer our thoughts and prayers to the families and friends of the victims." The University provided support to all the members of the community in dealing with the sadness of the events of September 11. Counselors were and remain available to students through Student Services, Counseling Services. Counselors have been available to faculty and staff through the Employment Assistance Program (EAP).

On Thursday, September 13 an interfaith memorial service was held at Saint Mary's Art Gallery. Over 100 members of the Saint Mary's community and stranded passengers staying on campus attended the service led by Father Con Mulvihill, S.J., Saint Mary's chaplain. The memorial service included remarks from Rev. Mulvihill and reflection and prayer by Dr. Jamal Badawi, professor of management and religious studies at Saint Mary's and Imam, spiritual leader of the Muslim Community in Halifax. A Jewish ritual to mark a time of loss was also part of a candle lighting ceremony.

Introduction to Memorial Service

Introduction delivered by Rev. Con Mulvihill, SJ, Chaplain at Saint Mary's University at the inter-faith memorial service after the September 11 attacks on New York and Washington

It has been fifty hours since the terrible tragedies in New York and Washington, and all of us here in this room feel five years older. The news media have given us hundreds of images, many of which will stick with us forever. Stories of heroism have been told, and will continue to be told.

The overarching word for all these events is fragility. Most evidently, we have witnessed the fragile, transient nature of the works of our hands – the dramatic destruction of two 110-storey buildings, engineering feats of wonder.

More importantly, we have witnessed the fragile nature of our human lives. Those in the World Trade Centre entered their offices on Tuesday morning and began their days by checking their e-mail, getting their voice messages, socializing with their colleagues, going to meetings – much as we did this morning. Yet we are here and they, no more and no less innocent than we, are gone.

We witness the fragile nature of the bonds we have with those we love, who can be taken away so suddenly and tragically.

We witness the fragile nature of the social fabric which has been built up, justly and unjustly, over centuries.

We witness the fragile balance of peace and war in the international community.

In light of this, let us enter into prayer today:

For those who died on Tuesday: Christian, Jew and Muslim, Buddhist and Hindu, followers of natural religions, agnostic and atheist – all those whose integrity of heart is known to God alone.

For those who mourn their passing – their families, friends and co-workers.

For all desperate people who choose to perpetrate violence on the innocent to attain their ends.

For healing, reconciliation and forgiveness in the international forum – for measured, slow, peaceful and just solutions to mending the social fabric which has been torn so violently on Tuesday morning.

Reflections and Prayers

By Dr. Jamal Badawi, professor of management and religious studies at Saint Mary's University and Imam of the Muslim Community in Halifax.

There are at least five things that should unite us in this hour of grief:

1. Expression of our faith in God, the creator of the heavens and earth, and the benevolent and merciful cherisher and provider for all. We affirm our faith in the One and only living God, from whom we derive our existence, in whom we put our trust, and to whom we shall all return, sooner or later.
2. Expression of our unity as members of one race, the human race and as members of one family, the human family. We may be diverse in color, gender, ethnicity, religious beliefs and political views. Yet, such diversity is not, and should not, be a barrier to cooperation on common grounds as spiritual and moral beings. It is possible to have unity in diversity and diversity within a broader unity.
3. Expression of our unity in condemning, in no uncertain terms, acts of senseless violence, terror, atrocities and indiscriminate victimization of innocent civilians wherever they occur, whenever they occur and by whoever commits them. The innocent victims of the recent act includes men and women from diverse religious backgrounds, including hundreds of Muslim victims out of thousands of Muslim business persons and employees who used to work in the World Trade Center. Our hearts and prayers go out to the victims, their families, friends and communities. However, we should be equally united in condemning acts of harassment, vandalism and violence against innocent, peaceful and law-abiding Canadian and American citizens, on the basis of their ethnicity, race or other similarities to those who may have perpetrated this colossal crime. This is not a crime against America; this is a crime against humanity. Only those who were involved in planning and knowingly assisting in this evil are to be blamed, pursued and brought to justice. The Palmer Raid mentality, born out of stereotypes, racism or bigotry, should not be revived.
4. Our belief that all revealed religious faiths teach the same core message of love of God, love of the creation of God, mercy, justice and human brotherhood. However, we should also be united in condemning those who abuse the good name of genuine revealed religions to justify their evil deeds so as to achieve their aims or express their grievances.
5. Finally, we are united in praying for the souls of the countless men and women who perished in this act of terror; Christians, Jews, Muslims, Buddhists, Hindus and others. We are united in our sincere condolences to the families, friends and communities of those who lost loved ones. And we are united in our prayer that peace, justice, brotherhood and reconciliation may ultimately prevail.

Dear Editor:

Last Tuesday, I, like many others, was diverted to Halifax due to the terrible events in the United States. The kindness and the warm hospitality offered by the Halifax community will stay with me for a long, long time.

It is impossible to say how much this meant to me. I can only offer a heartfelt, and inadequate, thank you to all those involved. The staff at the airport were most welcoming and helpful. I stayed at Saint Mary's University and I was particularly struck by the fact that every single person I came into contact with there went out of their way to offer help and support. The Red Cross staff were also incredibly hard-working and helpful and the efficiency of the whole operation was very, very impressive.

Your behaviour, as a community, was exemplary. You should be very proud.

John Brooks, Brackley, Northants, U.K.

I was one of the passengers on the BA2025 flight diverted to Halifax last week. I was taken to Saint Mary's University, along with about 125 other passengers, for accommodation. Through your paper, I would like to express my extreme gratitude and appreciation for all the hospitality, caring and support we received.

The friendly and helpful attitudes we encountered from the Red Cross and the staff and students at the university, throughout our stay, made what could have been a very difficult situation all the more bearable.

I hope to have the opportunity to visit your city and province again in the future, in more favourable circumstances. My stay last week has certainly put Nova Scotia high on my list of holiday destinations! Brona Prendiville, Henley on Thames, Oxfordshire, U.K.

I was one of the diverted passengers on BA 2025 last week that was housed and fed by your university. I want to thank you all for your support and hospitality.

Yours truly,
B. L. White, M.D., Houston, Texas

My wife and I were two of those passengers on board British Airways Flight BA 2025 which was required to land at Halifax as a result of the terrorist activity in the United States last Tuesday, 11th September. We were taken from the airport to the University and accommodated in the gymnasium.

I am writing to express our gratitude to you, the staff and students of the University by friendly people only too anxious to assure us of the warmth of their welcome, and throughout our stay, nothing was too much trouble. Logistically, this must have presented everybody concerned at the University with a most severe problem but we were never aware of it, such was the calmness and efficiency displayed by everybody.

This could have been a stressful situation for all those passengers from the aircraft but the staff and students at the University contributed magnificently to ease the problems and I shall be grateful if some means can be found to acquaint everybody with our most grateful thanks.

Yours sincerely,
Alan Johnson, Alderwood, Oxted, Surrey, U.K.

I was among those "stranded" in Canada during the crisis in the United States. My flight was British Airways #2025 to Houston, Texas.

I feel most lucky to have landed at Saint Mary's. You dear people embraced us all and made us feel at home, even in the midst of the turmoil we were feeling at the tragedy unfolding at home in the States.

Thank you for the clean bed, the soap and showers, the tasty food, the access to television and phones, and the smiling faces. Every staff member and student had a kind word for us. We all felt blessed to experience such genuine goodness and caring.

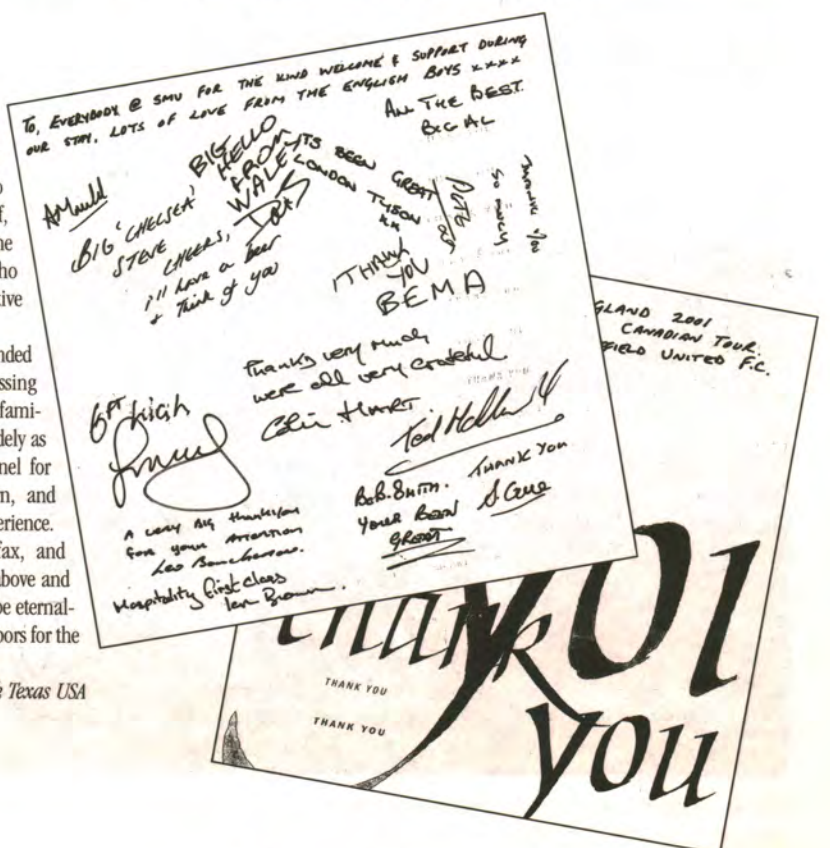

I am eternally grateful and will never forget Saint Mary's.
Sincerely,
Lee Ann Hudson

My wife and I were among the stranded travelers on BA Flt # 2025 who made an unscheduled visit to your campus. We are so very appreciative of students, staff, food service contractors, and the Halifax citizenry in general who were so gracious and cooperative under difficult circumstances.

I'm sure I speak for every stranded passenger on BA 2025 in expressing our gratitude to the Saint Mary's family. Please extend our thanks as widely as possible to all University Personnel for such a display of love, concern, and mutual sharing of this trying experience.

Surely the citizens of Halifax, and Saint Mary's in particular, went above and beyond the call of duty. We shall be eternally grateful to our Canadian neighbors for the many expressions of friendliness.

CIDA Award Recipient Educates South African Teens About HIV Prevention

by Paul Fitzgerald

Carla Fundak, a graduate student in the International Development Studies (IDS) program is one of three Saint Mary's recipients of a $10,000 Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) Award. Fundak's award led her to South Africa where she educated youths in South Africa about HIV prevention.

Her passion for the work stems from an exchange program with the Msunduzi Transitional Local Council's Environmental Health Division in the Province of Kwa Zulu she participated in as an undergraduate student. Fundak surveyed nearly 100 day care facilities around the Pietermaritzburg area to determine if resources from the health organization were being sufficiently utilized.

This is where her life would take a dramatic turn. She met an eight-year old girl who became infected with HIV after being sexually assaulted by someone in her village. She still remembers seeing the sadness in the child's eyes. "After meeting this young girl, I experienced tremendous emotional upheaval, which forced me to admit that it was time for personal growth and that I needed to use my education in a way that would make a difference," she says.

The CIDA award was her ticket back to Africa where she has spent the past three months informing youth about HIV prevention. It is estimated that approximately 4.5 million South African's are HIV infected. The numbers are expected to dramatically increase over the next 10 years. The United Nations Program on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) reports that the rate of infection among the 13-19 age group in South Africa is often higher for young girls than boys. Gender differences are important to pay attention to as they can be one of the first areas to reflect reduction or increases in high-risk behavior. In South Africa, where approximately 53% of the population are under 25 years old, teenage infection levels are skyrocketing.

Carla Fundak's (centre) CIDA Award research has taken her to South Africa where she developed workshops about HIV prevention for teenagers.

"My goal was to take a look at whether or not, despite the poor accessibility of contraceptives at medical clinics, chemists and from sex education programs, adolescents were getting the information necessary to make crucial and informed decisions regarding the choice to engage in sexual activity," she says. Fundak designed her own workshops that she conducted at high schools. She also surveyed young people to obtain a better understanding. Her respondents understood the perceived definitions of risk, however did not necessarily accept the actual risks for infection. She also incorporated issues of violence towards women into the workshop curriculum. She says, "It is considered to be socially taboo for youths to ask teachers, counselors and parents about sex and HIV prevention."

Heather Ann McPeake and Catherine Redmond, Saint Mary's graduate IDS students were among the 63 recipients of the CIDA Award from across Canada. McPeake is investigating the relationship between poverty and tuberculosis in rural Africa and Redmond is examining ecotourism and the impact on women and families in Belize. ♦

Urban Archaeology: Saint Mary's Archaeologists Recover Artifacts at Downtown Dig

by Paul Fitzgerald

When Dr. Stephen Davis, chairperson of Saint Mary's Anthropology Department and a team of students were asked to check out the site of a new downtown Halifax they had no idea that they would find nearly 10,000 objects.

Dr. Davis' crew, including students Danny Dyke, April MacIntyre, Nicole Brown and Julie Smith, unearthed chamber pots, serving plates and dishes, clay pipes, medicine bottles and other assorted artifacts at the site dated as one of the earliest settled areas of the late 1700s. Many of the objects came from long buried ash pits or garbage middens where Haligonians disposed of household junk. It's an exciting find for Dr. Davis as the artifacts could eventually be connected to individual owners who resided in the area many years ago.

"The fun thing for us as archaeologists working in an urban environment was this rare opportunity to excavate a site in its entirety, and then relate those features back to the original property owners," says Dr. Davis. "The findings could also provide the basis for further research into the social and health issues of that time period. As more development occurs, these kinds of finds become rarer."

The Halifax Regional Municipality (HRM) and its private sector partner of the downtown municipal parking facility, the Hardman Group, agreed that there would be an archaeological survey of the downtown site undertaken before the excavation for construction began. The work by the Saint Mary's team was conducted under a Heritage Research Permit issued by the Nova Scotia Museum. "One of the key reasons why this project worked so well was because everyone involved wanted things done properly," says Dr. Davis. He says that workers even kept a close eye on the dirt that was scooped up by the backhoes, many times shutting down their machines to lift an artifact from the dirt, and pass it along to the Saint Mary's team for analysis. A portion of the artifacts recovered from the site are now on display at Halifax City Hall and at the Saint Mary's Patrick Power Library.

Saint Mary's students recover artifacts that reveal the history of everyday people living in downtown Halifax in the 1700s.

Canadian Hockey Legend Scores Honorary Degree

Jean Beliveau has been recognized by Saint Mary's University for being a true Canadian hero.

Jean Beliveau at the reception following the special Convocation Ceremony during which he received an honorary degree from Saint Mary's University.

The former Captain of the Montreal Canadiens was awarded with an Honorary Doctorate of Civil Law from Saint Mary's University at a special Convocation Ceremony held at the Halifax World Trade Centre and Convention Centre on October 4. It was part of the Putting it on Ice Hockey Conference, hosted by Saint Mary's Gorsebrook Research Institute.

Beliveau was the "Honorary Captain" of five day conference that brought together academics and researchers from North America, Russia, Finland, Sweden and Germany as well as hockey players, officials, and community organizers. The purpose was to take a comprehensive look at the development, social and cultural influence of the game. "I am honoured to be a part of the Saint Mary's family," Beliveau said in his address. "This is truly a great honour coming from a great university. I am absolutely thrilled to receive an honorary degree from Saint Mary's University." Dr. J. Colin Dodds, President of Saint Mary's thanked Beliveau for accepting his honorary degree and participating in the conference. He said at the ceremony, "Dr. Beliveau you are a great ambassador for sport, culture and education in Canada."

Beliveau was born in Trois-Riveres, Quebec, and educated at a Victoriaville Academy and Victoriaville College. He began his hockey career at the age of seventeen. Beliveau has acted as a dedicated volunteer to several Canadian organizations. He signed the first National League Hockey (NHL) contract in the Fall of 1953. He was elected Captain for ten of his eighteen seasons with the Canadiens. During his celebrated hockey career he was selected for the NHL All-Star Club ten times; won the Ross Trophy (champion scorer) in 1955-56; received the Hart Trophy (most valuable player) twice, 1955-56 and 1963-64, and he was the first player to win the Conn Smythe Trophy (outstanding player in a Stanley Cup Series) in 1965. Beliveau is the second best scorer in the Canadiens' history, with 507 goals and 712 assists for 1219 points. He is also the best scorer in a Stanley Cup series with the Canadiens through 79 goals and 97 assists for 176 points. By the time he announced retirement in 1971, he and his team had won the League Championship and the Stanley Cup ten times each.

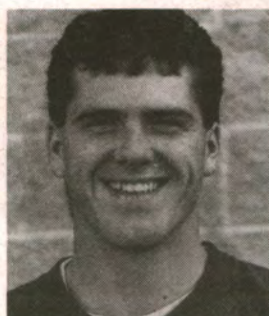

At his request on the Jean Beliveau Night in the Montreal Forum, March 24, 1971, the Jean Beliveau Fund was established. This provided much needed assistance for underprivileged children in Quebec and the rest of Canada. In 1993 he transferred the foundation to the Society for Disabled Children. In 1969, he was appointed as an Officer to the Order of Canada, and in 1999 his status was elevated to Companion to the Order of Canada. Since his retirement from hockey, Beliveau has been awarded many distinctions and honours. Included in these are Honorary Doctoral Degrees from a number of universities in Canada, and induction into the Hockey Hall of Fame and as well being named to "L'Orde national Du Quebec." Today, he is President of Jean Beliveau Inc. and a member of the board of directors of Acier Leroux, The Molson Companies, and Brookfield Properties. ♦

Saint Mary's 2002 Sport Hall of Fame Inductees

A pair of football stars, an athletic pioneer from the forties and a sensational hockey team will all be honoured as this year's inductees into the Saint Mary's University Sport Hall of Fame and Heritage Centre. Chris Flynn, Angelo Santucci, Elmer MacGillivray and the 1972-73 Huskies Hockey Team will be inducted at the Saint Mary's Tower on Saturday, October 13th at 11:00 am as part of Homecoming Weekend celebrations.

Chris Flynn rewrote the CIAU football record book as quarterback for the Huskies from 1987 to 1990, winning the prestigious Hec Creighton Trophy as the country's most valuable college player three times. The Buckingham, Quebec native was a four-time All-Star quarterback and a three-time CIAU All-Canadian while setting national records for most passes in a season and career. He was the all-time leading CIAU quarterback rusher and spurred the Huskies to a four-year regular season record of 27-2.

Chris Flynn

Angelo Santucci was a hard-nosed Huskies running back, chosen as AUAA rookie of the year and a first team all-star when he joined the league in 1971. After returning from a serious sophomore leg injury, he was key to the Huskies' national championship in 1973. He rushed for 186 yards in the AUAA title championship and scored a key touchdown in the national championship game against McGill at the CNE Stadium in Toronto, Ontario.

Angelo Santucci

Elmer MacGillivray, a native of Reserve Mines, was known to be a passionate athlete which more than made up for his lack of size at 5'10" and 170 lbs. He arrived at St. Mary's High School in 1944 and proceeded to help his teammates win the city football championship and the Maritime juvenile hockey title. The next year they won the city and provincial hockey titles. He continued his athletic career winning junior and senior titles in hockey and baseball.

In 1973 Saint Mary's came close to perfection in its storied athletic history as the football team upset its way to the national title and the basketball team shocked the nation in winning the CIAU crown. Bob Boucher coached the hockey Huskies, who put on a brilliant campaign posting a 31-0 record before taking to the ice in the championship game against the Toronto Blues. They fell a goal short in a heart wrenching 3-2 game. Some of the members of that team included Bill Doherty, Randy Crowell, Doug Abbass, Ernie Dooley, Gerard Gibbons, Tim Ripley, Bim McFall, Dwight Lewis, Steve Dmytruk, Richie Bayes, Dale Turner, Mike Quinn, Dave Nowlan, Chuck Goddard, D'Arcy Murphy, Ray Monette and Bob Warner. The Huskies varsity sports teams enjoy an unparalleled history of excellence in university athletic competition, winning more than 40 AUAA and a number of CIAU Championships, a record unmatched in Atlantic Canada. ♦

Kick-Off Classic

Dr. J. Colin Dodds kicked the opening ball a whopping 31 yards to mark the beginning of the Kick-Off Classic on September.

For the second year, Saint Mary's Huskies tied the annual September Kick-Off Classic to a community fundraising effort. This year proceeds from the game went to KidSport, a non-profit organization through Sport Nova Scotia that funds children's participation in organized sports who might not otherwise have the opportunity and the Huskies football bursary fund. (L-R) Gord Pratt, DownEast Communications, a supporter of the Kick-Off Classic and Huskies with kidSport touch football players; Huskies, Paul Flemming, Curtis Nash, David Stala and Erico Hakim.

Professor Brings Motivational Leadership Workshops to NS Power

by Lisa Legatto

Nova Scotia Power has enlisted Saint Mary's professor Dr. Russel Summers to help managers develop leadership styles necessary for survival in what may prove to be an increasingly competitive market.

Dr. Summers was approached by Nova Scotia Power over a year ago to develop a program for senior managers. He says, "They were interested in opportunities for their management to become more inspiring." Gary Thompson, Director of Recruiting and Development at Nova Scotia Power says, "We needed to focus more on certain leadership traits, collaborative leadership and leaders who inspire their teams."

The result was a leadership development seminar that was very similar to Summers' leadership and behavioural processes class, a required course for first year Saint Mary's MBA students. In the class, students engage in behavioural simulations that teach them how to be inspiring and persuasive. They are given a scenario, they then present in front of their small group and with the help of their peers and a second year MBA student facilitator go through a checklist of things that they should have done. They do this by watching themselves on videotape and engaging in self-analysis and feedback.

The 3 day long seminars held over 2-3 weeks with Nova Scotia Power managers have a similar format. So far, there have been three sessions of seminars involving groups of twelve people from middle and upper management. The participants are hand picked for the seminar and represent a cross-section of people from finance to operational groups. The sessions which are part instruction and part practice deal with the difference between leadership and management, transformational leadership, dealing with conflict, collaborative problem solving, inspiration and vision. Thompson says, "Russ talks about different leadership approaches, gets into coaching and provides feedback."

Dr. Summers says that with the potential for de-regulation of the industry, service within the organization and for customers is going to be a priority. This type of leadership training and subsequent management styles can have a direct impact on how people operate in the work place. "It can take people to this state where they are self-motivated, self-starters and self-managers," he says. "Managers can delegate, they're not always having to oversee their staff."

Thompson says that the feedback gathered in post-workshop interviews with participants has been very positive, even from those who have been through many training programs over the years. "Russ has received high marks from his participants." He says, "We've received feedback that they have become better at coaching their staff and working with their teams." Thompson says, "It's a very important program for us." He says, "We have built a very good relationship with Saint Mary's through the good work that Russ has provided, this program has provided that strong link." ♦

represents a major investment in the University's infrastructure and dedication to the quality of life and learning environment of students. It represents a significant upgrading of the University property that will benefit the entire community. "The $25 million investment, completed on time and on budget, provides our students with high quality, community centred residence life with all the 21st century conveniences," said Dr. J. Colin Dodds. "The residence renovations are a result of the dedication of the Board of Governors, our student body and administrators at the University."

The renovation of the residences is part of Saint Mary's initiative to make technology more accessible to all students. Every student living in residence can now plug-in to the Internet, Saint Mary's on-line courses and the Patrick Power Library resources. There are now over 700 computers online in residence. This is in addition to the more than 1,000 Internet access ports located throughout the Sobey Building and Loyola Academic Complex in offices, labs, study rooms, lounges, and classrooms.

The Loyola-Vanier project was carefully and thoughtfully managed from start to finish. Committees planned for logistics, communicated with the University community and neighbours and provided alternate housing and related resources for students. The Renovation and Renewal Project 2001 included students in the planning and implementation of the project.

Jane Purves, Nova Scotia Education Minister spoke enthusiastically about the University's initiative. "I am impressed by the fact that the renovation of the residences was student centred and guided by their input."

The multi-million-dollar investment is the largest capital campaign project ever undertaken by the University. The aesthetic and design improvements include new exterior cladding, larger energy efficient windows to enhance interior light, attractive modern furniture, lounge areas and apartment suites for senior students. Samanta Anderson, Saint Mary's University Students' Association (SMUSA) said at the ceremony, "The 18 months of renovations were certainly well worth the wait." She announced that Saint Mary's students will contribute $1.1 million towards the renovation costs over the next 13 years. "Saint Mary's students are making a real contribution to this project," she says.

The upgrades made to the Loyola and Vanier residences mark the first phase of the Renovation and Renewal of Saint Mary's as the University prepares to celebrate its 200th anniversary. The Rice residence building has already been renovated to provide students with the same high-tech access.

"The renovations made to our residences demonstrates the benefits of team work," said Keith Hotchkiss, Director of Student Services at Saint Mary's. "We are extremely excited and proud of this facility that will be home to the next generation of Santamarians." ♦

Dechtiar Would Be Proud

(R-L) Dr. David Cone, Saint Mary's biology professor; Dr. Janine Caira, professor University of Connecticut; University of Connecticut graduate students Claire Heely and Kirsten Jensen, and Saint Mary's honours biology graduate Ann Clarke.

Biologists from Saint Mary's and the University of Connecticut teamed up to file over 2,300 fish parasites that will soon be in the permanent collection at the Canadian Museum of Natural History in Ottawa, Ontario. The parasites were originally collected by the late Dr. Alex Dechtiar who devoted his life to studying fish from the lakes throughout Ontario. Having the specimens housed in the museum means that for the first time, researchers from around the world will have access to the materials.

The team spent an entire week, clocking in 15 to 18 hour days, in Saint Mary's new Taxonomy Lab, a facility devoted to classifying organisms. "Very tedious work, but truly well worth it," says Dr. David Cone, a Saint Mary's biology professor. Funding was provided by Saint Mary's Dean of Science and the Judith Shaw Parasitology Fund at the University of Connecticut. "When we heard that Dechtiar's work would be at Saint Mary's, we just had to travel here to help work on this project," says Dr. Janine Caira, a parasitology professor from the University of Connecticut. "The work was grueling, but we successfully completed everything in such a short period of time. Dechtiar would be proud of us." Team members included University of Connecticut graduate students Kirsten Jensen and Claire Heely, and Saint Mary's honours biology graduate Ann Clarke. ♦

SPARK Funds Student Science Writers

Two Saint Mary's science students have been selected to participate in a federally funded national research writers program that will help spread the news about science research being conducted at Saint Mary's.

Cecilia Matthews and Chris MacInnis have been selected to be Saint Mary's part-time science writers with the Public Affairs Department. The positions are being funded by Students Promoting Awareness of Research Knowledge (SPARK), a national program supported by the Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council (NSERC) of Canada. SPARK will provide student writers with training and further promote research activity at Saint Mary's University. Stories written by Matthews and MacInnis will be published as news releases for local and national media and appear in a variety of campus and NSERC publications. Matthews is also the editor of the University's student newspaper, The Journal. MacInnis has worked as a student researcher with the pollen forecast program at the University. ♦

SMUSA Hosts Student Academic Round Table

On October 24, Saint Mary's University Students' Association (SMUSA) will host the Canadian Academic Round Table (CART) for the first time. The conference entitled CART on the Coast is being co-hosted by SMUSA's Vice-President Academic, Paul Deveau, Acadia's Student Union Vice-President Academic and Saint Mary's alumnus, Jeffrey Britton, in cooperation with Saint Mary's University and Acadia University.

The conference will host approximately 30 delegates from across Canada, with representatives from universities, colleges, technical institutes, and student lobby groups. Student leaders will participate in round-table discussions on current academic issues facing post-secondary institutions. Some of the topics that will be covered include working with university administration, online learning vs. classroom learning, academic appeals processes, inclusion in post-secondary institutions, academic advising procedures, and representation on Board of Governors and Academic Senate. Bob Giroux, President of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada will address the conference as guest speaker.

Sessions will be held on the campuses of Saint Mary's University and Acadia University. ♦

Scholarly & Professional DEVELOPMENT

Astronomy and Physics

Dr. Malcom Butler and Dr. Adam Sarty with the assistance of an international advisory committee with representatives from MIT to the University of Athens organized LOWq – A Workshop on Electromagnetic Nuclear Reactions at Low Momentum Transfer. Sessions dealt with topics including Nucleon Properties, Chiral Dynamics, Few-Nucleon Systems (A<5), and Applications to Nuclear Astrophysics. The conference also posted extensive slides and abstracts online based on each of the sessions. The International workshop held August 23-25, 2001 at Saint Mary's was sponsored by the University and MIT-Bates Linear Accelerator Center.

English

During the past year, Dr. Brian Bartlett presented a travel essay to the Canadian Club of Halifax, and gave poetry readings in Hamilton, Ontario on CBC Radio, and in London, England, where he received first prize in the this year's Petra Kenney awards. He also traveled to Flagstaff, Arizona, to present a long poem at the Association for the Study of Literature and Environment conference. During National Poetry Month in April he was part of a panel on CBC's The Arts Today discussing the state of poetry in Canada. His next collection is forthcoming from McGill-Queen's early in 2002.

Dr. Lilian Falk, a retired professor of Saint Mary's English Department published, "The Master: Reclaiming Zangwill's Only Kunstlerroman" in English Literature in Transition 1880 – 1920. The journal is published through the English Department at the University of North Carolina.

Finance and Management Science

Dr. Dawn Jutla presented an overview of the current trends, emerging issues and opportunities for funding and business development concerning e-Government and municipalities at a joint seminar on e-Government Seminar held in Sydney, Nova Scotia. The seminar involved the Union of Nova Scotia Municipalities, Association of Municipal Administrators, and Service Nova Scotia and Municipal Relations.

History

Dr. Colin Howell recently published Blood, Sweat and Cheers: Sport and the Making of Modern Canada with University of Toronto Press.

International Activities

Denis Leclaire, Director of International Activities, was a witness at the development assistance review consultation that was Chaired by the Honourable Maria Minna, Minister of International Cooperation. The consultation was held in Halifax on September 4 and focused on the new strategic document developed by the Canadian International Development Agency, Strengthening Aid Effectiveness: New Approaches to Canada's International Assistance Program.

International Development Studies

Dr. Krishna Ahooja-Patel has been elected International President of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom (WILPF). She is the first international president in the 90 years of the organization from the South. Dr. Ahooja-Patel, a part-time IDS professor at Saint Mary's, has been a staff member of the United Nations for almost 25 years. During the UN Decade for Women, she was the editor of "Women at Work", the only UN journal on working women.

The WILPF sent an international delegation, led by Dr. Ahooja-Patel, to the UN World Conference Against Racism in Durban, South Africa, at the end of August, 2001.

Library

Madeleine Lefebvre, University Librarian, was quoted in an August Quill and Quire article about how librarians are struggling to define their role in the Internet economy.

Management

Dr. Albert Mills, co-organized and chaired with Jean Helms-Mills, Acadia University, the Gender and Management stream at the Second International Critical Management Studies conference in Manchester, UK. He presented a paper with Mills and Gina Grandy, Mount Allison University, entitled "Flying in the face of reality: Gender Rules in Trans-Canada Air Lines and the British Overseas Airways Corporation, 1937-1947" - at the International Colloquium of the Standing Conference on Organizational Symbolism (SCOS), in Dublin, Ireland. His work has been published in two collections; Gendering Organizational Analysis -- A retrospective. In Feminism(s) Challenge the Traditional Disciplines, McGill University, Elisabeth Wilson, Manchester University, 'Perception and Stereotyping'. In Organizational Behaviour Re-assessed. The Impact of Gender, edit. E. Wilson, Sage.

WHERE TRADITION MEETS THE FUTURE

2001 DONALD HIGGINS MEMORIAL LECTURE Margrit Kennedy

Money Rules the World Who Rules Money?

Creating an exchange medium that works for everybody and protects the earth

Kennedy is an architect, urban planner and professor of ecological building techniques at the University of Hannover in Germany. Her revolutionary book, Interest and Inflation Free Money offers a clear explanation of how financial policies shape the global markets, how interest destroys cultures, ecosystems, and economic systems.

Friday, October 26, 2001, 2:00pm Conference Theatre, Sobey Building, Saint Mary's University

Free Public Lecture

Sponsored by the Saint Mary's Visiting Speakers Committee and the Donald Higgins Memorial Lecture Committee
