PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

*Dear Fellow
Santamarians,*

Last month, it was my great pleasure to attend the annual Saint Mary's Athletic Awards banquet.

Another awards presentation – I think not! Saint Mary's sports teams have just completed an extremely successful year. The awards and accolades are too numerous to mention.

The Department of Athletics, apart from its annual awards, made a special presentation to Dr. Kenneth Ozmon, O.C., on his retirement and his special contributions to varsity athletics at Saint Mary's.

As president of your Alumni Association, I can truthfully say that I have had the privilege of hearing Dr. Ozmon speak many times. Dr. Ozmon, always an impassioned speaker, last evening showed his true colors (Maroon & White). He talked about the similarities between art and sports, and how both contain, when done their best, the search for perfection that affords equal amounts of commitment. He compared the artistry of a down field wide receiver catching a pass or a well executed play in any sport being similar to a poem or a concert. All this while, he choked back tears. He should not shed tears of sadness, but instead tears of joy. His contributions to all aspects of this university will not be forgotten. His encouragement of all students to excel in mind, as well as body, is a true testament to twenty plus years in the service of our university.

A fitting conclusion to the evening was the presentation of the Most Valuable Player awards. Many of the "team" coaches remarked how the idea of MVP, as individual, being bigger than the team, is a notion that is abhorrent in sports.

As the "coach" of the alumni team, I can certainly understand their musing. No individual can stand taller than the rest. We all have to work together for the betterment of the University. That being said, I am very proud of the hard work being done on your behalf by the Alumni Executive.

As elections approach, I look forward to welcoming new members to the Alumni Executive (ballot enclosed in this issue on page 11). I encourage all of you to vote. We are fortunate to have a great slate of candidates who are willing to work together on your behalf to make our University and its alumni stronger and more unified.

During the last few months, I have had the great privilege to meet many Saint Mary's students at various dinners and society functions. They seem so young and full of promise for the future, that I can't help but feel a strong sense of hope for all of us.

The students of today seem to have accepted the notions of equality and tolerance that has so sadly been missing in the past. We should all learn a lesson from these young people and work together for a brighter future.

Regards,

Tim Westhaver

FEATURE

by Paul Fitzgerald

It's April 11, budget day for Nova Scotia, and Dr. Kenneth L. Ozmon is running up the back steps of the Provincial Legislature. Opening the big wooden doors of the old historic building, he finds hoards of journalists in a dimly lit lobby, frantically working to get their clips and quotes for the nightly news.

It's a big day because the government is about to announce how they'll spend their money for the next year.

Many in the province are worried about today's budget, as the newly-elected Conservative Party hinted that it would bring some tough financial woes for certain organizations.

Today however, post-secondary education was spared.

A group of reporters quickly notice Dr. Ozmon standing in the middle of the lobby. "Post-secondary education did well, much better than expected," he smiles. Within seconds he's in front of the television cameras and microphones doing what he does best – talking about the importance of higher education.

"The students are always the important ones, they are the ones who have to pay tuition," one hears him tell the scrum.

He's been hammering out this same message ever since he took the position as President of Saint Mary's.

"That's Ken, always looking out for the students," says his wife, Elizabeth. "He's been there for them ever since day one."

A few days later, from the living room of their new home on the outskirts of Halifax, the couple take time out to reflect on their 21 years at Saint Mary's.

"We had the time of our lives being Santamarians"

The Ozmon Years

THE OZMON YEARS

On June 30, Dr. Ozmon will officially retire as President of Saint Mary's. He is Canada's longest serving university president, and has worked tirelessly on behalf of his community and country in the field of higher education. In the summer of 1998, the Government of Canada awarded him with the Order of Canada O.C., the country's most prestigious award granted to Canadians who have made a real difference to their country.

Mrs. Ozmon has been there every step of the way, playing a supporting role in the growth of the entire University, including the development of the Women's Faculty Association.

The years have come and gone much too quickly for them, and both agree that they've simply "had the time of their lives being Santamarians."

The Early Years

"I still remember when we moved to Halifax," says Dr. Ozmon. "Our car broke down in the middle of the night along the way."

"That's right," his wife adds. "The axle broke and this fellow who drove a Canada Post truck gave us a ride to a motel. It seems just like yesterday that we were in the back of this truck with both our daughters, Angela and Kendi, dumping off mail along the way."

They both are now laughing.

The Ozmons lived for 20 years in the President's House on Gorsebrook Avenue, just behind the large 22-story Loyola Residence Building. One year ago, they moved to their new home in Hammonds Plains.

"We could write a book about living in the President's house," smiles Dr. Ozmon.

They clearly remember the time, when a table went missing from their backyard. About a year later, it turned up again with a note attached. "Here is your table back," the note read.

"Someone must have returned it because they were graduating," laughs Mrs. Ozmon.

Dr. Ozmon also recalls getting teased every time he took his car to work. "I lived so close to work, but took my car on many occasions because I had meetings off campus. People used to always razz me about that," he laughs.

During the Ozmon's early years some Jesuits who used to run Saint Mary's in the 1960s and 1970s, were still living on campus.

"Every Christmas I used to make a black-forest cake for Father William Stewart and Father Hennessey. One Christmas I decided to make them something different," Mrs. Ozmon laughs. "What a mistake that was... they loved their black-forest cake."

"That's Ken, always looking out for the students," says his wife, Elizabeth.

"He's been there for them ever since day one."

The Growth

The campus has certainly grown since they arrived just over two decades ago. Dr. Ozmon says that such dynamic growth has occurred only because the University has attracted a high calibre of faculty, staff, and students.

"Look at us today," he says. "There are so many neat things about Saint Mary's – diverse programs, new buildings that are wired with the best in technology, and a great campus life. We have all these great qualities because of the great people that belong here."

Mrs. Ozmon says that Saint Mary's has turned itself into a mini United Nations. "I remember walking down the halls and seeing just a few students from abroad," she says. "Now take a look around, we have students from just about every corner of the globe at our University."

Dr. Ozmon is extremely impressed at how well the University has positioned itself as a leader on the international scene.

"We are delivering programs and conducting research in many countries around the world – places like Vietnam, China, and The Gambia," he says.

They both say that last year's convocation in The Gambia, West Africa, was truly one of their most memorable international events. In February 1999, 62 Gambian students graduated from Saint Mary's, making them the first in their country to receive degrees on their home soil.

"What an impact that project had," says Dr. Ozmon.

"That was truly a dynamic moment to see all of them receive degrees. They were proud, and their country was proud," says Mrs. Ozmon.

Remembering the Students

Both agree that some of their best times at Saint Mary's were spent with the students.

"Some of the students that used to come to my house on campus now have honorary degrees from Saint Mary's," Dr. Ozmon proudly says. "Our graduates have gone on to do some great things in life. They are leaders, the ones who never quit, always striving to do their best, which is so wonderful to see. A Santamarian is a different kind of person, someone who never settles for second best."

"The school is certainly known for having well rounded students," says Mrs. Ozmon. "It's a thrill to walk the hallways and talk with them. I feel that Ken really set the tone in making the campus feel like a tight-knit community. Even though enrollment has dramatically grown over the years, it still feels like a small and friendly campus."

They both indicate that even though the University has been through some trying times, students were always a priority.

"I remember when we had the fire in Vanier Residence in 1994," he says. "Thank God no one was hurt. We made sure that the students were looked after and anything they needed was made available for them. The University community came together to help the students pack for the move into the Halifax Westin and the Lord Nelson hotels."

As well, they recall the rationalization process for post-secondary institutions in the province. "The province went through a process of cost-cutting to education during this last decade," he says. "This was a tough time for Saint Mary's. There were a number of proposals on the table and we worked to meet the needs of everyone, including the students."

Campus Life

Like many Santamarians, the Ozmons enjoy the quality of campus life.

"It didn't take long for our daughters to fit in," says Mrs. Ozmon. "Both Angela and Kendi had a great time here. Saint Mary's is the kind of campus where you can study and also enjoy lots of extra-curricular activity. Saint Mary's has so much to offer."

The University is also known for having professors who care about the students. "Professors at Saint Mary's are close with their students," says Mrs. Ozmon. "When we go to alumni events our graduates are always asking about their former professors."

Administrative staff at the University have also played a large role in making Saint Mary's a great campus. "The people who work on campus are wonderful people," she says. "I remember the time when I was sick in the hospital and the guys from the Physical Plant came in to see me. That brought tears to my eyes."

Both also highlight varsity sports as another enjoyable aspect of campus life.

"We've got women's hockey, women's rugby, and so many other great sports," says Dr. Ozmon. "When our men's basketball team won the national title last year, it was a very, very exciting time. And even though our other teams have not won any national championships lately, Saint Mary's has still earned a strong reputation for being very tough contenders."

Mrs. Ozmon says that coaches are a big credit for the success of the sports program. "The coaches deserve a lot of the credit for how well our teams have done over the years," she says. "They spend time with their players, making sure they do well in their sport and in the classroom."

The Future

Of course people are asking the couple what's next after retirement.

"I think I'll get a fishing license," says Dr. Ozmon. "I've also had my golf clubs cleaned, so I am ready to hit the course and play 18 holes. Mrs. Ozmon as well is looking forward to spending lots of time outdoors."

But we'll still see the couple back on campus, attending sports games and other special events.

After all, as they put it, Saint Mary's is a special place, one they'll always call home.

A Face of the Future

From Saint Mary's University to Washington D.C. – The international education of Eric Miller

by Lisa Legatto

For five days in January, Eric Miller left his vacation with his girlfriend in Buenos Aires to travel alone to the northern Jujuy Province which borders on Bolivia and Chile. By bike, car and bus he visited the villages nestled in the mountains. He frequently stopped to hear the concerns, mostly in Spanish, of the everyday people who are directly affected by the trade policy that comes out of his office in Washington D.C. He admits that most people in his line of work don't necessarily ask these kinds of questions but Miller has never fallen under the category of "most people." That's one reason why this Santamarian was chosen by Maclean's magazine as one of the 100 young Canadians to watch.

Miller is a trade consultant with the Inter-American Development Bank. At 28, he is young for the job. He's a member of a team that is creating rules of the game for the brave new world of global trade. Specifically, the creation of the Free Trade Area of the Americas, a free trade agreement that is being negotiated among 34 countries stretching from Nunavut to Patagonia in Southern Chile. The trade agreements, which he says, "in a sense tame the untamable power of the marketplace" will cover everything from intellectual property to the movement of products across borders. Miller talks about the "sheer joy" of being engaged in such a large political and economic process. "There's the excitement of being involved in the largest economic initiative in the history of the Western hemisphere. We're talking about building a free trade area for 800 million people and billions and billions of dollars in trade."

It was this "gung-ho" attitude that Dr. Ron Landes, Political Science professor at Saint Mary's University, best remembers about Miller. He describes him as, "the kind of student you dream about teaching", while Miller considers him a mentor. "I think that what he did more than anything else was to help shape my world view and how to look at political phenomenon." On a practical level, he provided him with a framework for looking at issues. According to Miller, "That's what the best political science education can do." These ABCs of international relations have resonated in Miller's trade work.

"What I learned from him and during my time at Saint Mary's was very useful for what I've come to do later."

In 1993, after completing an honours degree in Political Science, Miller moved on to Carleton University's Norman Paterson School of International Affairs in Ottawa. The focus of his graduate work was conflict studies, another example he says of Landes' influence. During this time, he spent a year at the Paul Nitze Center of Advanced International Studies in Bologna, Italy. The famed center is a training ground for European and American senior diplomats and government officials. He was introduced to trade policy in the summer of 1994, when he began working with the Canadian Chamber of Commerce. Two years later, he accepted a position with the IDB. Miller's success does not surprise Dr. Landes. "He's probably one of the most intelligent and enthusiastic students I have taught in 28 years at Saint Mary's." The two have kept in touch and meet when Miller visits Halifax.

Miller's life seems far removed from his home in Musquodoboit Harbour on Nova Scotia's Eastern Shore. He is among Washington's brightest and best working for international organizations, embassies and think tanks. Miller's office at the IDB, three blocks away from 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, provides him with access to major international players like the IMF and the World Bank where he attends seminars and "does lunch" with colleagues. During the Asian financial crisis he worked with an institution that loaned a couple of billion dollars for Brazilian stabilization. Miller is positioned at the epicenter of the globalization of trade. At the same time, he sees a connection between the sensibilities that he developed growing up in Nova Scotia and the evolution of his international career.

When he first arrived at Saint Mary's, he had not spent much time outside of Musquodoboit Harbour. That's one reason why he considers those years of growing, learning and making friendships so important. Miller's campus activities included a political column in the Journal called "Through Eric's Eyes." One of his favourite memories is hosting his own radio program for which he won the prize of best on air personality. He jokes about how he sometimes wishes that he could relive his days as a campus DJ. Miller also spent three years on SMUSA. In first year, he was selected to go to Washington, D.C. to represent Canada at a student conference. He says that experience, "was really the beginning of the whole process of internationalization." Most of his traveling and exposure to international politics occurred after his undergraduate years but he says, "I think the foundations were laid at Saint Mary's."

Understanding where he came from plays a part in Miller's approach to his work. "I think that what a Canadian perspective brings me is essentially an openness to go and talk to people and an understanding that that's important." Miller spends his vacations in Latin America, whenever possible, so he can learn more about its people. When he recounted his recent trek around Argentina, he spoke with as much interest about a lengthy conversation with an indigenous woman at a winery in the outskirts of Cafayate, as he did about a meeting with the former Attorney

General of Argentina. The woman told Miller "we are not living, we're surviving." Her words were not lost on him. One of the things that he likes best about his job, is that he sees it as an opportunity to improve people's long term economic conditions. It's his Nova Scotian roots that he thinks allow him to pay attention to the local element of globalization. "When I go out into the world I understand how other people feel in terms of their attachment to their culture because I have a strong attachment to my own." Miller's desire to understand the region is evident from his appreciation of Latin American rock music and literature to the way he acknowledges the countries' complexity, diversity and history.

"It's a very busy life," he says with long hours that lead his girlfriend to call him a workaholic. What free time he has, he likes to spend taking in the U.S. capital's cultural events or writing about current policy issues. He also makes time to scan the Globe and Mail perhaps, to keep in touch with Canadian politics. Politics may be what will lure him back to Canada. In Maclean's magazine's January cover story, "Faces of the Future" Miller revealed a childhood dream of becoming Prime Minister. Therese Arseneau, chairperson for Saint Mary's Political Science department saw a politician in the making when he participated in the university's first model parliament. "There's no doubt that when he stood and spoke, he had a polish," she says. "He could have gone into politics then and he would have done fine." Arseneau, a regular political commentator for CBC says, "It was very clear that he has not just an interest but great potential in terms of a political career." Miller says that he is very interested in politics as a possible career. He is quick to add that a good politician needs experience in the broader world. "When I do come back to Canada," he says. "I can bring a unique perspective of someone who spent some time working with people from diverse nationalities and somebody who traveled to the far corners of the earth." ♦

MBA grad Named One of Canada's Woman Entrepreneurs of the Year

Nancy Knowlton, co-founder of the Calgary based SMART Technologies Inc., has turned her company into a $200-million business and dominated high tech world markets. In November, the Saint Mary's MBA graduate's success was acknowledged with an export achievement award at the 1999 Canadian Woman Entrepreneur of the Year awards.

Knowlton was honoured with five other national winners at the Calgary gala event held by the Joseph L. Rotman School of Management at the University of Toronto. The keystone of SMART Technologies is the interactive white board that was developed in the early nineties by Knowlton and her husband, partner and co-owner David Martin. White boards are large touch-screen displays for desk top computers that make it possible for people in distant locations across the globe to manipulate the same information.

The company began as the Canadian distributor for an American projector manufacturer. They used their profits to develop some of their own products including the white board. In 1991, SMART had a near-death experience when they were dropped by the projector company. After a few breaks, such as investments by Intel Corp and Texas Instruments, the company was able to move in a new direction. The interactive white board continues to account for the bulk of SMART's sales. Although, other companies have attempted to copy the concept, it still has 67% of the worldwide market share, Knowlton told the National Post in December.

"Being first, you have to have that edge where you worry about people catching up to you," says Knowlton. "You've got to always apply pressure to yourself to stay out in front and continue to innovate and deliver better and better products all the time."

Over the last three years, the distributor representation has increased from 28 to 44 countries with exports accounting for 96% of SMART's sales. The company has seen dramatic growth over the past two years. In fiscal 1998, SMART sales were up by 75% and nearly 50% last year. Knowlton, a chartered accountant, handles much of the daily operations and marketing of the company. Martin concentrates on the development of new products and strategy. ♦

~ An Apology ~

There was concern expressed to us by some alumni that the cover of the Winter, 2000 Maroon & White did not represent the full character of our University. While the mistake was unintentional, it was a mistake. One for which we apologize and have taken steps to ensure we don't make it again. We thank those of you, who recognized our mistake and told us about it. We also want to express our apologies.

MBA Students Win $15,000 National Prize!

Nicole Methven and Clare Biddulph will represent Canada in May at the International Moot-Corp Business Plan Competition in Austin, Texas.

Two students in the Master of Business Administration (MBA) program at Saint Mary's came in first place at one of Canada's most prestigious business competitions.

Claire Biddulph and Nicole Methven won the national prize of $15,000 at the Canadian Imperial Bank Of Commerce – Ivey MBA National Business Plan Competition, held from March 31 to April 2. The annual competition at the University of Western Ontario attracted some of Canada's top business schools, such as Queen's and the University of Toronto.

Both students presented their business plan, DementiaGuide.com. It is a disease management site that will soon be available on the world wide web, providing doctors and caregivers with a vast amount of information about Alzheimer's disease.

"We are so thrilled to be number one," says Biddulph. "This says a lot about Saint Mary's, a University that offers a unique MBA program, catered to those who are keen on combining academia with experience."

Ellen Farrell, a professor in the Management Department at Saint Mary's, helped prepare the team for the big competition. She says that the judges are leaders in Canada's business community and were extremely impressed with the team's presentation. One judge openly indicated that he was ready to cut a $3.5-million cheque to invest in DementiaGuide.com.

"This win clearly demonstrates how excellent Saint Mary's is in delivering business education," says Farrell. "We are now known as Canada's best business school."

The team will travel to Texas for the International MOOT-CORP Business Plan Competition from May 3 to 7. Texas Governor George W. Bush, Presidential Candidate in the United States, will be the keynote speaker for the competition. ❖

And the Oscar Goes to... "The SMU Ambassadors" – Saint Mary's University Student Alumni Association (SAA)

by Jennifer Margeson

The 1999/2000 year was a very exciting year for everyone. Not only was it the beginning of a new millennium, but it was also a very busy year for the SMU Ambassadors. The year swung into action during the summer of 1999 with several of our members helping out at the Alumni Annual Dinner and the Annual Golf Tournament.

The executive members held a leadership retreat in July at Laurie Park to brainstorm ideas for the upcoming year and to get to know one another better. When the school year began, the ideas and skills that were developed on the retreat quickly came into focus!

The school year activities began with the recruitment of new members at the Society Expo that was held in September. All members were invited to join in with the "Run for the Cure", Canadian Breast Cancer Foundation, in early October. It was a beautiful day for our 5 km run and everyone had a great time! Fall Convocation, also held in October, brought on our annual diploma framing fund-raiser. This was one of our biggest and most successful fund-raisers of the year.

Several of our members helped out during Homecoming Weekend '99 with activities such as: face-painting, handing out balloons to the children, selling 50/50 tickets and showing their general school spirit during the Homecoming football game. Exam packs, another extensive fund-raiser for the SMU Ambassadors, created a flurry of activity in December. The packs required a great amount of time and effort from everyone and it too, was very successful.

The Saint Mary's University Student Alumni Association was extremely proud to host the ASAAN 2000 conference in February. Student Alumni Associations from across the Maritimes joined in to "INSPIRE" each other on new ideas and ways of solving problems. It was an exciting and effective weekend, with events such as an evening of cosmic bowling, a magical show put on by alumnus Rod Doiron, BA'74, BComm'76 and a delicious roast beef dinner. These activities gave students a chance to meet other SAA members and exchange ideas. A special thank you to Paul Deveau, Chair of ASAAN 2000 for a job well done.

Chocolate Roses, provided by Laura Secord, were once again a great fund-raiser, this year. The roses were purchased by the staff and faculty of the University and then delivered by the Ambassadors. There was a great focus on community service this year. The SAA door to door canvassed for the Heart and Stroke Foundation, Cancer Society, Lung Association plus we donated funds to the Children's Wish Foundation and the Kid's Help Phone. This was a very important part of the SMU Ambassadors year and we tried to canvass at least once a month. Campus Tours coordinated by Paul Deveau, provided information to prospective students about our University.

In March, the SMU Ambassadors attended the Annual Charter Day, held at Saint Mary's and we also attended the Academy Award Gala for the Kids Help Line, donating a grand total of $1,275.00 to this charity. We will end the year with our Annual SAA Awards night. Plans are in the works for a summer retreat. We've had a fantastic year and look forward to next fall! ♦

Promoting Alumni Products and Services

Throughout the year, many of our alumni receive an invitation by mail or by phone call to purchase products from your Alumni Association's affinity partners. The products range from life insurance, home and auto insurance to an affinity credit card. Many alumni do understand the value of these products and the group rates available to them as members of the association while others have questions about why the association is involved in these types of partnerships.

There are two significant reasons why your Alumni Association endorses and promotes the products of affinity partners. The Association is committed to serving its members. In providing members with the opportunity to purchase various products, we are allowing you to benefit from the Association's group purchasing power. In most cases, the quotes you receive from our affinity partners will be lower or very competitive compared to individual quotes.

The products endorsed by the Saint Mary's University Alumni Association represent, in our minds, quality. The Benefits and Services Committee of the Alumni Association fully research each opportunity that is presented to us in ensuring that we are dealing with reputable firms offering quality products. While it is true that we do release information from our alumni database to these affinity partners, rest assured that we do so with the strictest of assurances that this information will be used solely for the purpose of promoting products which we feel will be of value to the alumni membership. We will never provide our mailing list to any organization which we have not formed a partnership with.

The second reason we promote products is because of the financial compensation we receive from the providers for our endorsement. The revenue which we generate from these partnerships is used to finance our various activities including scholarships and awards, branch and chapter activities, reunions and homecoming activities and production of the Maroon & White. Your Alumni Association has grown over the last several years and continues to offer many new programs to alumni because of the on-going revenue available to us through these alumni partnerships. At a time where funding of universities is being reduced, we continue to generate some of our own revenues in order to offer the alumni membership more programs and services.

I hope this gives you a better understanding of why your Association is involved in this type of activity in an effort to provide you with quality benefits. We appreciate your on-going support of your Association.

Warmest regards,

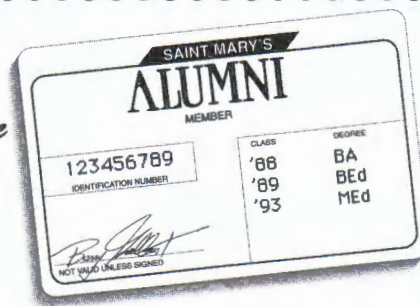

Barry Gallant
Director of Alumni Affairs

Class 1975 – 25th Year Reunion

Debbie Baker (McGowan), David Gray, Brian Donovan and Robert (Bob) Warner have offered to help with the preparations for the Class of 1975.

As I sat at the Air Canada Centre in Toronto last night with my now grown children, Mike (22) and Katie (20) listening to Crosby Stills Nash and Young, I was taken back to my days as a student at Saint Mary's and all the nostalgia that goes with that.

It is the 25th anniversary of our graduation and that of many of the people that were the centre of our lives way back when. We would like to see those who came before and after the Class of '75.

Dave Gray, Mike Dwyer and I put forth the challenge to all of the true Santamarians out there to make this year's Homecoming the best yet! Who will make the call?

Leo, Taps, Pipper, By, Sue, Q-man, Cooper, Butch, Purkis, Tader, Huskie, Puller, Dickie, Byrne, O'Byrne, Woody and dozens more. You know who you are. Let's get the ball rolling.

Contact the Alumni Office at (902) 420-5420 or E-mail me at debbienmc@hotmail.com.

Are You Leader Material?

by Gerald J. Walsh

In the recruitment business, our clients often ask for job candidates with "leadership" qualities. While we do meet many leaders in our business, the concept of "leadership" is one that has always intrigued me. How do you recognize leadership qualities? What makes a leader? Are leaders born? Or can leadership be learned?

To help understand leadership, I asked these questions of several clients, colleagues and business professionals. Here is a summary of what they said.

Leaders have a clear sense of direction and purpose. Leaders have clearly defined goals, a personal mission statement and strong values. They are self-directed and see every action they take as a step toward achieving their goals.

Leaders demonstrate a positive attitude toward work and life. Leaders see problems as opportunities. They are realists but tackle problems with vim and vigour, not a defeatist attitude. They never think the world is against them. They believe they control their own destiny.

Leaders possess strong work ethic, enthusiasm, intensity and drive. Leaders have a quality that allows them to persevere, no matter how difficult the task. They have incredible work ethic and extraordinary stamina. They have the ability to create a highly-charged, enthusiastic work environment and enjoy the process of getting the job done. They have a passion for challenge and opportunity.

Leaders have strong interpersonal skills, including listening skills. Leaders put their points across effectively, whether to large groups or individually. They give professional presentations and most important, they listen more than they speak.

Leaders project a strong professional presence. Leaders have natural charisma. When they walk into a room, people notice them and respect them. Leaders are conscious of their image even at social events or in the off-hours. Around the office, they are courteous, positive, co-operative and are team players.

Leaders are sincere and honest. Leaders are highly-principled people with strong values. They admit mistakes freely and are not afraid to apologize. In working with others, leaders instil confidence and gain the trust of others quickly. Other people value and trust their knowledge. In negotiations, they don't lie or bluff.

Leaders encourage others to reach their full potential. Leaders are excellent coaches. They motivate others to perform at maximum levels. They provide constructive feedback quickly. Because they demonstrate empathy, they understand people better.

Leaders possess high intellectual capacity. Leaders are smart and strategic. They know how to use their intellectual power to make quick, solid decisions in difficult situations.

Leaders have excellent anticipatory skills. Whether dealing with peers, employees, suppliers or customers, leaders plan ahead. They anticipate what will be said next and what they will do next. They're ready when asked that difficult question.

Leaders succeed in more than one aspect of their lives. Leaders are high achievers. It's not uncommon to see leaders succeed in other aspects of their lives such as sports, family or the community.

Saint Mary's Engineering Team One of the Best in Canada

The Saint Mary's engineering team won first place in the regional competition and 3rd in the national competition of the Canadian Federation of Engineering Students "national impromptu design competition." The team Donald Hartlen, Stephen Turner, Marc Larabie and Bjarni Schandall presented a plaque to Ronald C. Gilkie, Vice President of the Association of Professional Engineers of Nova Scotia (APENS). They were joined by Dr. David Richardson, Dean of Science and Dr. Andrew Seaman, Dr. Seaman, External Director of the Division of Engineering was recently appointed acting Vice-President, Academic and Research.

Saint Mary's is one of best in Canada when it comes to engineering.

An engineering team from Saint Mary's competed in the Canadian Engineering Competition at the University of Western Ontario from March 9 to 12, an annual event that attracts top notch universities from across the country.

After spending hours on a detailed engineering project, Don Hartlen, Bjarni Schandall, Stephen Turner, and Marc Larabie came in third place, just behind the University of Saskatchewan and University Trois-Rivieres.

"We had a spectacular time at the competition," says Hartlen. "We worked hard and worked well as a team. Placing third overall in Canada says a lot about the engineering program at Saint Mary's. The University offers a unique engineering program with small classes and close interaction with professors."

The same team from Saint Mary's came in first place at the Maritime Junior Impromptu Design Competition on February 11, an annual event held at DalTech. ♦

Julie Galipeau Named CIAU Basketball Rookie of the Year

by Lisa Legatto

Julie Galipeau was named CIAU and AUSA basketball rookie of the year for her outstanding performance with the Saint Mary's Huskies. Galipeau says that the realization of the national award is just starting to sink in. "I was really honoured to get it. I wasn't expecting it all."

Few others were surprised to see the 6'2" freshman post take home top honours for a season when she averaged 15.4 points and 10.9 rebounds in the Atlantic Universities Basketball Conference. She finished second in the country in rebounding and was named a 2nd Team AUSA Conference All-Star for her outstanding play this season. Galipeau was also named Saint Mary's University's Female Rookie of the Year and the Most Valuable Player of the female basketball team.

Galipeau never expected so much to happen this year. She says, "I want to try to do better all the time." She is thankful for the support she received from coach Jill Jeffrey and excited about returning to Saint Mary's next year. ♦

Stienburg Named the Best Coach-Of-The-Year in Canada For a Second Time – A First in CIAU History

by Lisa Legatto

It was a bittersweet year for Saint Mary's Huskies hockey coach, Trevor Stienburg. He won the CIAU coach-of-the-year for the second straight year making him the first coach in CIAU history to win the prestigious award twice in a row. He also took home the AUAA coach-of-the-year award. These top coaching honours came after a devastating loss to Acadia's Axemen in the Kelly division semi-finals.

"I learned so much this year," says Stienburg. "I am very excited about the future at Saint Mary's." Under Stienburg's direction the Huskies have become regular-season champions. This year the team ranked first place in the Kelly Division with an 18-8 record and advanced past the first round of the play-offs for the first time in more than 20 years.

"It came down to one shot on goal," Stienburg says. "We had our chances and there's no question we would be very much deserving if we were going on, but the fact was that their shot went in and our two or three didn't." Although Stienburg is not interested in making excuses, he acknowledges that Saint Mary's has a young hockey team with 14 new players over the last two years. Acadia, the favourite at the beginning of the season, had a lot of experience on its side.

Stienburg and the Saint Mary's Huskies are disappointed but not defeated. He is very positive about the progress made by the team that he says has been built from the ground up over the last three years. "Every coach's dream is to have a team of players who battle right to the end." He shares the credit for the award presented on March 26 at the CIAU National Hockey Championship in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan with his players, assistant coaches Darren Burns, Tyler Naugler and Lee Algee. He also says that Larry Uteck, Athletic Director, has created an atmosphere that breeds success. "Larry is a true athlete," says Stienburg. "There is a lot of leadership in our athletic department."

What Stienburg wants his team to do now is refocus and learn from the experience. "I'm going to throw more salt on my own wound. I'm going to make this thing sting longer than it should to motivate us." That will involve recruiting quality players even though a big turnover is not expected for next season. "We've got a university to represent. We've done it well, but we still think that we've got work that we want to get done." ♦

Gordon (Tim) Allen, BComm, hasn't allowed retirement to push him into laziness or inactivity. Retired eight years ago, after a 31-year career as regional comptroller for CBC Maritimes, Gordon has had many things to keep him busy. He curled, played golf, built a cottage from the ground up, wood working and built cabinets which are prominently displayed in his Halifax home. Gordon's nickname is "Tim" and he says he was called that long before the comedian became a star. He now hooks rugs, something his grandmother and mother both did when he was a boy. Tim has won several ribbons at the Atlantic Winter Fair and shown his work at exhibitions. He displayed rugs in downtown Halifax stores during the G-7 summit. Tim collects old pictures of animals, birds, totem poles and farm scenes and, from those, draws his patterns on framed burlap. A year ago, he published an article in the Rug Hooking magazine, an American publication entitled "Being a rug hooker is great - and you're never too old to start." Tim also tends to his garden and annually makes pickled beets and chow chow, also ribbon winners at fairs.

SMU writer nominated for Governor General's Award

by Ann Graham Walker

When Sue Goyette signed up for Dr. Brian Bartlett's poetry class at Saint Mary's, she never imagined it would completely change her life. But it did.

"I remember parking the car and walking across campus to class one night and it suddenly struck me for the first time in my life: I am a poet. I never had the courage to say that aloud before."

Goyette reflects on being a poet. For her, it is the most nurturing, rewarding vocation imaginable, where the poet dwelling inside her has finally been validated, set loose in the world. And yet it is hardly an occupation that guidance counselors might include on their career lists, when advising a student on the future.

Goyette has a sense of humour about this. "So what do you say to the person next to you at a party, when that inevitable question comes up about what do you do? When I tell them I am a poet, I know I can expect a long pause."

Being nominated for the Governor General's Award in 1999 was one of the most exciting things that has happened to Sue Goyette since she decided to commit herself to her writing. The Award is national in scope. Well over one hundred books were considered before making up the short list for "Best Canadian Book of Poetry". Goyette's work has also been nominated for awards by the League of Canadian Poets, and when she was a student at Saint Mary's, she won the Joyce Marshall Scia Award for Poetry.

Her first published book of poems – The True Names of Birds – is in its fourth printing.

"Studying with Brian Bartlett made such a difference in my work as a poet, it was the major turning point for me," she says. "He would get us to read and would assign different poetic forms to us, and every time I tried a new form, something intriguing would happen. Each form brought forward some kind of discovery I had not expected."

"He read our work very thoughtfully and wrote a lot of notes before handing it back – I think he is one of them most generous people I have ever known as an artist."

Goyette sets aside at least one hour a day for writing. She is working on her next collection. "I carry a notebook around with me wherever I go, and write about the things that intrigue me. I don't believe in writer's block. If nothing comes out, I figure there is a reason and wait for another time. I remind myself to keep my eyes open."

Sue Goyette

Dr. Terry Wagar is the Best Teacher and Researcher in Canada!

Dr. Terry Wagar is receiving praise for his hard work and dedication to teaching and researching in the field of management.

He is one of four recipients of the Leaders in Management Education Award. The awards are intended to identify and pay tribute to individual professors at Canadian university schools of management who have demonstrated outstanding performance as classroom teachers and leaders in their professions and who, through their other professional activities, have helped to improve the practice of management in Canadian organizations.

Candidates were judged on the basis of their performance in Teaching Excellence; Pedagogical Leadership; Academic and Professional Leadership; Contributions to Management Practice; and Applied Research. The winners of this award were the individual candidates from each geographic region who were judged to have the best overall record of professional accomplishments in these areas.

Dr. Wagar's students, business and academic colleagues refer to him as a passionate teacher, a top rated instructor, a guest speaker who "brings them in," and "the best management researcher in Canada."

The Leaders in Management Education Awards is sponsored by the National Post, PriceWaterhousecoopers, and Bell Nexxia.

POP Benefits include:

- Personal Accident.
