

Father Stewart to Receive Honorary Degree

On November 26 Father William Stewart, Acting Academic Vice-President, will be honoured by Regis College, Toronto, with the degree of Doctor of Divinity. In recognizing Father Stewart, Regis College is acknowledging its close association with Saint Mary's and is also honouring the many achievements of Father Stewart.

Until this year, Saint Mary's has conferred Regis College degrees but the recent affiliation of Regis College with the Toronto School of Theology means that for the first time Regis degrees will be conferred by the University of Toronto.

The Times has taken this opportunity to interview Father Stewart and some of his associates and friends.

By Judy Scrimger

If you sat in Father Stewart's office for an hour you would probably meet a cross-section of the university community and you would see in action the warmth, charm and humour that has given Father Stewart almost legendary status at Saint Mary's.

He answers the door personally (his secretary is gone for the day). He sits beside you at the circular table rather than positioning himself behind the large imposing desk of the Academic Vice-President. A delivery man arrives with a tin of paint for the Dramatic Society and Father Stewart welcomes him by name. He answers the phone in the absence of his secretary and politely takes a message for her. A student flashes a smile from the door and says, "Thanks for stuffing the ballot box". He congratulates her on her election to Senate. A fellow administrator pauses at the door and Father Stewart says he'll drop by when he is free. You wonder if this is the signal for you to leave but he makes no effort to rush you.

He is more than willing to talk about Saint Mary's as it has developed over the thirty years he has been on campus but he smoothly avoids talking about the man behind the legend. When he does talk about his achievements his enthusiasm for being at the centre of the action comes through clearly, but he is quick to deny that he has played a special role.

"When you have survived as long as I have you realize that what you yourself have to do with things is often very little. It's more the accident of being in a job or a time or a place. Anybody else could have done what I have been doing," he says.

Not just anybody could replace Father Stewart, according to his students, colleagues and friends.

"Maybe a hundred people all together could have done the things he's done," says Mary J. Martin, a member of the Dramatic Society. "He's amazing. He always gets everything done but he never seems to be rushed. He will always take time to talk to a student."

Father Stewart's contribution to the Dramatic Society at Saint Mary's is well-known. He constructs the props, dismantles the sets, sweeps the stage and boosts morale. According to Elizabeth Hagen, a second-year student who is secretary of the Society, "He can transform paper bags into roast beef and make lanterns out of soup cans." She adds that "Once you know 'Father Bill', he's a friend for life."

His former students bring their children to visit him and it's no surprise that the Academic Vice-President takes time to make a finger puppet for a visiting five-year-old. But this is no ordinary vice-president and he did not take the usual approach to climbing the administrative ladder.

When he came to Saint Mary's in 1950 he never intended to stay.

"I was heading off to Rome to finish my doctoral studies when my Father Provincial sent me to Halifax to teach Philosophy for a year because a faculty member had become ill. I had my bags packed for the first five or six years I was here, still expecting to go off to finish my degree," he says without a trace of regret.

Since that first assignment as a substitute teacher he has held a variety of administrative posts including Acting President, Dean of Arts, Dean of Studies and University Librarian as well as being a member of the Senate and Board of Governors.

"As an administrator he's immensely energetic. He's a workaholic. I don't think he has ever said no to any job," says Arthur Monahan, Chairman of the Philosophy Department, where Father Stewart is a full professor.

But the man who has held nearly every administrative position at Saint Mary's at one time or another, sees himself as a teacher, first and foremost.

"I never intended to get into administration, but as a Jesuit you don't always have that much choice. Although I don't dislike administration, I find teaching more satisfying because you are dealing with young people. I like young people and the whole educational process. It is, after all, what I set out to do—to make myself a teacher."

And although the demands of the office of Academic Vice-President are substantial, he continues to teach a fourth-year philosophy course.

Has he seen any changes in students over the years?

"I don't think that young people change fundamentally. I think there is still the same generosity and idealism that students have always had. Their focus has changed perhaps."

He puts the blame for student disenchantment with university education on the government leaders of the sixties.

"In a sense they presented a false picture of what university was all about. The government was funding universities to a large extent and as a result they made them more vocationally oriented. You came to university to get a job.

"To me this is not what the university is all about. It's not primarily there to teach you how to do this or that, but to inform you, to educate you, to make you a better person and to transfer knowledge, wherever that knowledge happens to lead you. If it leads to a job, well and good, but that's not the primary aim of the university.

"To make it job-oriented as the government and others tried to do was a mistake and students now realize that leaving the university clutching bits of parchment is not a guarantee of a job. Naturally there is disenchantment on the part of the students."

This disenchantment has led in part to the declining enrolment in universities across the country. Father Stewart believes Saint Mary's will face its most serious challenge in the 1980's.

Although he uses phrases like "operating in the black" and "financial survival" he focuses mainly on what he calls "the human factor". He points

Installation Highlights Busy Round of Activity

From the Annual Faculty-Administration Dinner and Dance on Thursday, October 11, to the closing of the E.H. Norman Conference on Saturday, October 20, the ten days surrounding the Installation of Dr. Ken Ozmon as President of Saint Mary's University were full, to say the least. There seemed to be every kind of activity imaginable on the University campus—colourful ceremony, academic conferences, sporting events, religious celebrations, dinners, dances and receptions.

While not directly linked with all the other events, the Presidential Installation which took place on Friday, October 12 was, of course, the centre of attention.

Ministers of six religious denominations took part in the Ecumenical Service that preceded the Installation Ceremony. The Ceremony itself drew an audience which filled the Theatre Auditorium. Official greetings were brought by visitors from 30 universities as well as representatives from government and various community groups. Music was provided by the Canadian Forces Stadacona Band led by Lt. (N) G.L. Morrison. The musical highlight of the afternoon was the playing of the "President's Fanfare" which was written and provided by Bert Tersteeg, Chairman of the University of Prince Edward Island Department of Music, and a good friend of Dr. Ozmon. Dr. Ozmon was robed and formally installed by University Vice-Chancellor Monsignor Colin Campbell.

The Installation preparations had been overseen by Dr. Arthur Monahan, Chairman of the Department of Philosophy, and Elizabeth Chard, University Registrar. The Installation committee and support staff included people from every part of the University.

Among the many academic representatives present at the Installation ceremonies was Dr. Henry Hicks, President of Dalhousie University, shown here presenting greetings to Dr. Ozmon.

The momentum of activity created by the Installation was carried on for more than a week. Saturday's events included an afternoon of soccer and field hockey, a reception, and a student social evening. The Student Centre was dedicated in the names of Father O'Donnell and Father Hennessey on Sunday, October 14. A forum on the "... Smaller University in Nova Scotia" presented nine speakers over a three-day period, Monday-Wednesday, October 15-17. Thursday through Saturday, October 18-20 saw two conferences at Saint Mary's. The Nova Scotia

Science Teachers' annual conference was hosted by Saint Mary's and Science Faculty members took an active part. Completing the week's events was a highly successful conference on Canadian Japanologist and diplomat, E.H. Norman.

It seemed that every single moment of the ten-day period was filled by interesting and enjoyable academic and social functions and those with the stamina to take it all in were rewarded with a feeling of stimulation and satisfaction.

New Members for Saint Mary's Board of Governors

Several new members have been appointed to the Saint Mary's Board of Governors. The appointments were made in August, 1979, and the new members come from a wide variety of backgrounds.

Mr. Lorne MacDougall was appointed by the Roman Catholic Episcopal Corporation. Mr. MacDougall is a lawyer in Truro. In recognition of his work in the Archdiocese, Mr. MacDougall was made a Knight of St. Gregory. His appointment will be effective until July, 1982.

New members elected to the Board of Governors by the Board are Mr. L.F. Kirkpatrick and Mr. Harry Paton, Q.C. Mr. Kirkpatrick is the President of the Nova Scotia Power Corporation. Mr. Paton is a well known Halifax barrister and is a senior member of the Paton, Paton & Gaum law firm. Both of these appointments are for three years.

Mr. Kevin Cleary and Mr. Patrick O'Neil were elected by the Alumni Association. Mr. Cleary is a counsellor in Student Services. He is also a former University Registrar, and is the Secretary of Senate. Mr. O'Neil is a Chartered Accountant, and for several years was a member of the Commerce Faculty. Both of their appointments will be effective until 1982.

Dr. V.M. Catano and Dr. Ken MacKinnon were elected to the Board by the Academic staff. Dr.

Catano is a member of the Psychology Department and is a former President of the Saint Mary's University Faculty Union. Dr. MacKinnon is a member of the English Department, a former Chairman of that Department, and is active in the Atlantic Canada Studies program. Both of these appointments are for a three-year period.

Rev. William Lonc, S.J., was appointed by the Upper Canada Province of the Society of Jesus. Father Lonc is Chairman of the Physics Department at Saint Mary's, and is actively interested in radio astronomy.

The students elected to the Board include Mr. Peter Murray, who is a senior student in the Arts Faculty, majoring in Political Science. His home is in Campbellton, New Brunswick.

Mr. Charles Given is a senior student majoring in Biology (Honors). He is a native of Brunswick, Maine.

Mr. Ian MacIntyre graduated last spring from Saint Mary's with a Science degree. He has returned this year to work on an Education degree. His home is in Birchgrove, Cape Breton.

Ms. Jane McGinn, a native of Hantsport, is a senior student in the Faculty of Commerce.

The students are elected to the Board for one year.

Plans Announced for Annual Alumni Dinner

The Saint Mary's Alumni Association Annual Dinner will be held on Saturday, December 8. A reception will be held in the upper colonnade area of the Loyola Building starting at 6:30 p.m. The dinner will be held in the Multi-Purpose Room at 7:30 p.m.

The guest speaker at the pre-Christmas festivity will be author Hal Lawrence. Mr. Lawrence is an alumnus of Saint Mary's. He attended Saint Mary's College just prior to the Second World War. He joined the navy as a midshipman at the outbreak of the war and had a distinguished naval career in Europe and Canada. At retirement he held the rank of Commander.

His book A Bloody War—one man's memories of the Canadian Navy 1939-1945 has recently been published by MacMillan of Canada. He now makes his home in Ottawa with his wife, the former Alma Moresch, of Halifax.

Tickets for the dinner are $15 and may be purchased in the Alumni Office, O'Donnell-Hennessey Student Centre, or from Alumni members.

This year the dinner honors the Class of 1954 on their 25th anniversary. Dr. Pat Connolly, Saint Mary's Sociology Department, is Chairman of the Dinner Committee.

out that many universities are already laying off faculty.

"You cannot simply say good-bye to people who have served you well for a number of years. The most important resource the university has is the human element—the faculty and students. How the university is going to cope with this situation so that people are treated fairly and justly is going to require foresight and careful planning."

Although he intends to retire in 1980, there is little doubt that Father Stewart will, in some way, be part of the planning for the future of Saint Mary's. And it's unlikely that he will "retire" from his support of the Dramatic Society.

He describes his involvement in drama as being "part design and part accident".

"I started in drama as an actor. Because it was always a problem to find people who could drive nails and connect electrical outlets, I found myself doing both acting and the technical things because I am the handyman type.

"When I was at Loyola I was made stage manager of the F.C. Smith Auditorium which gave me considerable experience in working with professionals. However, it became a very time-consuming interest and when I was sent to Halifax, I decided I was not going to get involved in drama and I stuck to that resolution for four years.

"In 1954 the gymnasium was being finished and they decided to put on more elaborate plays than they had been doing at the University and I was asked for advice. When I went down to the stage and saw so many things being done incorrectly I took off my coat and got to work and I have been at it ever since."

In 1965 he was officially put in charge of drama and was asked by the President to involve Saint Mary's in outside organizations and groups. That led to the Nova Scotia Drama League and the Dominion Drama Festival.

According to Father Stewart, "When you get involved in these groups, first thing you know they put you on executive committees. If you hang around long enough you get these jobs."

"These jobs" included being a governor of the Dominion Drama Festival and two terms as Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Cultural Federations of Nova Scotia, an organization which he was instrumental in founding.

It is for this kind of voluntary participation in the life of the community and his dedication to the University that Regis College will honour Father Stewart on November 26.

The O'Donnell-Hennessey Student Centre Dedication

Two long-time Santamarians, close to the hearts of many Saint Mary's students of the past forty years, were honoured on October 14.

A program of worship, social gathering and formal recognition centred on the dedication of the Student Centre at Saint Mary's in the names of Father Michael J. O'Donnell and Father John J. Hennessey.

Over the years Father O'Donnell and Father Hennessey have endeared themselves, each in his own way, to the students of Saint Mary's. Though their personalities were different, each maintained close contact with students through his position as Dean of Men, as counsellor, and through an active interest in athletics and a genuine dedication to Saint Mary's and its students.

Reverend Michael J. O'Donnell, S.J. came to Saint Mary's in 1941. He has been described as that good, old-fashioned type of teacher who brooked no nonsense in academic pursuits—the kind that commanded respect at the time and appreciation and admiration with the passing years. Father O'Donnell was a teacher of Latin and English. As Moderator of Athletics he is remembered for having put forth great effort to maintain and build sports programs through times when money was tight. However, despite his enthusiasm for sports, academic excellence was never sacrificed in its favour. Father O'Donnell's commitment to academic strength at Saint Mary's was also reflected in his emphasis on public speaking and debating. Father O'Donnell earned the nickname "Buck" through his enforcement of the rules when it was compulsory for students (all male) to wear ties. If a student was caught without a tie, he was immediately fined a "Buck". Father O'Donnell has retired from active academic service but continues to reside in the Jesuit residence at Saint Mary's. He continues to take an active part in Alumni activities. Because of the important place he holds in the hearts of so many alumni, it is most appropriate that Father "Buck" O'Donnell contributes regularly to the Alumni publication, the Maroon and White, compiling the "Snippets" page which keeps track of the movements and accomplishments of Saint Mary's alumni.

Reverend John J. Hennessey, S.J. joined Saint Mary's in 1961. While he had taught in his younger years, Father Hennessey's first love was preaching and pastoral work. It is for his warm personal relationships with students that he is most remembered by alumni. The sixties and early seventies saw a lot of changes in the attitudes of university students and it has been said that it was the mark of the man that he was able to adapt to these changes, albeit sometimes grudgingly, while still retaining his dedication to his basic beliefs and religious commitment. Like Father O'Donnell, Father Hennessey was involved in sports and is still a regular figure at Saint Mary's sporting events. His main work at Saint Mary's has been and still is that of a counsellor. In that capacity, he keeps rather surprising hours for a man of his age; the sign on his door indicating his "office" hours includes his availability for counselling until 2:00 a.m. Father Hennessey has, of course, been given a number of nicknames over the years but the most enduring seems to be "Hen" and a concourse through the residences, adorned by some fine student artwork including a very good likeness of the man himself, is known as "Hen" Alley.

When students of the past return to Saint Mary's for a visit, it is Father O'Donnell and Father Hennessey who are most frequently searched out. And it is important to note that the idea behind the dedication of the Student Centre came straight from the alumni and present students, out of an obvious and deep love for these two men. As the plaque on the M.J. O'Donnell-J.J.

Hennessey Student Centre will read, "... both have been friends to all who needed kindness, compassion, friendship and assistance. This building's name recognizes gratefully their wise counsel and wholehearted devotion to Saint Mary's University."

At the dedication ceremony official tributes were offered by Kevin Cleary and Bob Hayes.

Kevin Cleary, a graduate of Saint Mary's and now a counsellor in Student Services, was a student of Father O'Donnell and he spoke with the dedication of a student with true admiration for his teacher.

Bob Hayes, Director of Student Services, came to Saint Mary's about the same time as Father Hennessey and with his loving tribute were stories of their relationship told as only Bob can tell them.

There were, of course, moments when you had to look hard to find a dry eye, but it really was a happy celebration of the University's honouring of two of its most beloved members.

Project Upgrading at Saint Mary's

by Howard Solverson

As the school-aged population in Canada decreases, public education agencies like provincial departments of education and school boards cut teaching staffs with, no doubt, a small sigh of relief. They are, of course, under increased public pressure to cut back or hold the line on their budgets. Whether or not these budget-oriented cutbacks are justified for the mainstream of students, a question about the adequacy of education for the handicapped should be raised. Members of a summer project at Saint Mary's University have learned first-hand that this is one area of education where service is lacking and demand is great.

Project Upgrading operated at Saint Mary's for the second year this past summer. Basically, it is a program, funded by a federal Young Canada Works grant, whereby handicapped persons are assisted in upgrading their education to a grade twelve equivalency level. The program staff numbers five including Stephen Young, the Manager / Coordinator. Mr. Young, himself confined to a wheelchair, is well-known on the Saint Mary's campus, having graduated in 1978 with a Bachelor of Arts (Honors) degree.

When Mr. Young and his staff began soliciting for students for the first year's operation they had to go no further than their first stop, the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. They immediately filled their quota of five with visually impaired students. This past summer they varied their range of disabled applicants and included "wheelers" (those requiring wheelchairs), quadraplegics, amputees and cerebral palsy victims as well as the visually handicapped. Also included was a single parent who was considered to have a "social disability". The age range of the students was from eighteen to sixty-five years.

The program as formally designed called for five 45-minute one-to-one tutoring sessions per day, four days a week for the eighteen-week summer period. The General Education Development (GED) certificate which can be obtained up to the level of grade twelve equivalency calls for tests in five subject areas. Mr. Young taught social studies, and Ronald Alley, who is totally blind and who graduated from Saint Mary's in 1978 with a B.Ed., taught English literature. Robert MacMillan, B.Ed., taught mathematics; Vicky Salsman, B.Ed., English grammar; and, Holly Decoste, a Saint Mary's Arts student, taught natural sciences.

The one-to-one tutoring is necessary because of the differences in the stage of advancement among the students in the various subject areas and the individual learning problems experienced by each student. Besides these, there is the fact that the program is expected to be concentrated and free to progress at the speed of the individual student.

Besides the strict academic tutoring, extra-curricular activities were held occasionally—discussions, debates, outdoor classes, games, a museum tour, etc. These were, unfortunately, limited in their scope because of financial constraints.

Besides trying to present a broader educational atmosphere, through things like discussion groups, the staff tried to de-emphasize the simplistic view of test results. The aim of the Project was not a simple drive to have all students achieve full grade twelve standing (that is, grade twelve standing in the five required subjects). Instead, emphasis was placed on the overall results relative to the way the tests were taken—a critical matter for some students—and the student's individual situation.

Because of the difficulties inherent in each student's case and because a student might be starting at quite a low grade level, it was not expected that the grade twelve level in all five subjects would be achieved the first time round. Two students from the 1978 summer program also were assisted on a part-time basis in completing their grade twelve this past summer.

The actual testing was one of the main challenges met in the program as most students could not be expected to take the standard written examination. Large-print tests were obtained for those with partial visual impairment and tests on audio cassette tape were made available. New and different approaches were tried as well, for example, for Hillary Wellard, a cerebral palsy victim with multiple disabilities, it was found that a combination of audio tape and large-print visual testing was best.

Testing took place over three days late in August. Four staff members of the Nova Scotia Department of Education came to Saint Mary's to assist in the testing. Mr. Young said that the Department was very helpful throughout.

A supplementary testing session was held in late September at the Nova Scotia Institute of Technology with special provisions for disabled candidates (using the techniques that had been developed by the Project). Unfortunately, as funding for the teachers ran out at the beginning of September, further tutoring assistance was limited to what could be done on a strictly volunteer basis.

While the results of the tests may be the only tangible proof of success or failure of the Project, the real success and potential are seen quite differently. It is seen by the staff as a pilot program for upgrading disabled students and in fact the project staff have been breaking new ground in recognizing special requirements and benefits of such programs. Most people, including many educators, tend to overlook even the most obvious needs like that of a proper setting with convenient access and special equipment or of the tremendous financial strain on the students who, generally speaking, exist on low, fixed incomes. Even costs like application fees which most people can absorb easily, can be prohibitive, let alone the high expenses of transportation, special materials and the like. Other problems, indirectly related to the particular handicap, will become evident to any good education program as well. Some of these involve social problems. Generally in our society, handicapped persons are tacitly encouraged to stay out of the mainstream of life, accepting a lonely, boring, unproductive lifestyle.

Simply getting out of such a rut to advance educationally can call for a major effort. Once that initial effort is made and given reasonable support, other important advances can follow. The Project staff found that they and fellow students provided a forum for the handicapped student to discuss special or common problems in an atmosphere of real understanding and interest. In respect to a number of problems, like financial aid, employment and even social interaction, the support of the group and the exercise of airing one's views help build confidence to the point where the person will press on in areas like searching out employment opportunities. In that particular regard, all five students in last year's program found jobs after their summer's study and a number of this year's students have been successful as well. Hillary Wellard found a part-time job setting up a filing system for a church organization; Marilyn Hall, a "wheeler" with a spinal disorder, found a job at the Saint Mary's Bookstore; John Walker, sixty-five, having a visual impairment, is now eligible for a manpower training course. Some jobs lead directly from participation in the program but it is felt that all students benefit from the confidence gained.

The staff seem to feel that they have benefited as much as the students. On their side, as well as increasing their understanding of the educational and social difficulties of the handicapped, the experience has improved their organizational and administrative abilities and has given them insights into the problems of formal and informal institutionalization, especially those of motivation and stimulation.

A special addition this year was a program whereby the staff members went to Park Haven Estates once a week. Park Haven is a general nursing home and it was felt that some of the disabled people there could benefit from Project Upgrading. While this extra program was well received, it was found that the time was too short and that some of the students required attention beyond the resources of the staff—one student, a diabetic amputee, could not maintain attention because of her condition; another was bedridden. It was arranged for one student, Heather Nelson, to come to Saint Mary's for the regular program to work towards the General Education Development certificate exam. For the others who studied at Park Haven a certificate of attendance was provided. The experience served to show that there was a lot that could be done, with students who were eager to learn, and with potentially great human benefits to be derived; however, the resources or at least financial support for resources are lacking.

As with all such projects, the main question now is: where will it go from here? Staff members are producing reports for their own use and for interested agencies. Young Canada Works acts mainly as a funding body with supervision being maintained at that level and little input given or feedback required in regard to the actual program. There is, of course, no commitment of funding in the future. The main concern of those involved or interested in the Project is that it will be treated simply as a make-work project to be funded or cut in an arbitrary fashion by those who control the money.

Stephen Young is trying to convince the Provincial Department of Education to set up a more permanent program of this kind. He believes in total rehabilitation and few programs have the scope to offer the facilities and understanding that have been developing through Project Upgrading.

The fact that physical disability does not imply a mental handicap is usually officially recognized by those in public life and the results of Project Upgrading add proof to it. This, along with the fact that there are a great many people of all ages who need and are eager to take part in such programs and teachers available leaves only a commitment to be made by an appropriate body to take on the task. In the meantime we will have to wait and see if Project Upgrading will operate at Saint Mary's again next year.

New Branch for Saint Mary's Institute of Human Values

Dr. John MacCormack, Director of the Institute of Human Values at Saint Mary's University, has announced the formation of a British-based branch of the Institute.

The British branch will broaden the scope of the Institute by sponsoring workshops and conferences in Great Britain and will bring added prestige because of the high calibre of the British members, many of whom are internationally recognized.

Dr. Michael Chance of the University of Birmingham and a member of the new executive is a leading scholar on primate behavior. The executive includes representatives from eight British universities and is multi-disciplinary. Economist Dr. Jane Collier, Lucy Cavendish College, Cambridge; Dr. H.P. Rickman of City University, London; Professor F.J. Ebling, University of Sheffield; and Professor Mary Midgley of University of Newcastle-on-Tyne are also on the executive. The branch will operate semi-independently and information will be shared with the Institute at Saint Mary's.

"Decentralization is probably in the future of our organization not only because of increased costs of transportation but because of its inherent advantages in promoting the kind of inter-disciplinary work which we favour," said Dr. MacCormack.

"The next step will be to establish regional branches in the United States where many of our members live," he added.

The Institute was founded at Saint Mary's to bring together scholars in a variety of disciplines to examine the relationship between knowledge, values and freedom. Membership is international. In 1975 it received a grant of $45,000 from Imperial Oil and since that time has hosted three major conferences, the papers of which have been published in the 1979 issues of Humanitas (Duquesne University).

Dr. MacCormack hopes to establish an endowment fund which will give the Institute the stability and independence required to carry out long-range programs. The Institute has recently received a grant of $5,000 from Union Carbide Canada Limited.

Former Saint Mary's Employees Hold Reunion

by Debi Woodford

The first ever reunion of former Saint Mary's employees was held on Saturday, October 27, and was termed a tremendous success. Director of Student Services, Bob Hayes; Director of Residences, Keith Hotchkiss; Payroll Supervisor, Mary Pace; past Secretary to the Vice-President, Connie Lynch; and past Business Office employee, Sharon True spearheaded the venture with much advance planning and many hours on the telephone trying to contact former employees.

Approximately thirty people attended the reunion which began with a brunch in the Private Dining Room where old acquaintances were renewed and Past employees: Ron Pate, a former student, don, and desk clerk—he now teaches at B.C. Silver Junior High School; Dulcie Conrad, the former Director of Information Services—she is the Director of Information and Promotions at Mount St. Vincent University; and Edmund Morris, the present Mayor of Halifax—was the former Vice-President of Development.

new friendships were made. After the brunch the happy group attended a football game (Huskies versus Acadia Axemen) where "Smooch the Bleacher Creature" eagerly led the cheering section. A half-time reception in the Student Centre helped to keep everyone warm, then a post-game get-together at Ginger's, the Lighthouse and finally the Heidelberg for dinner ended a most enjoyable day.

The Mayor of Halifax and former Vice-President of Development at Saint Mary's, Edmund Morris, attended part of the day's activities and inducted Dr. Ken Ozmon into the prestigious "Order of the Sou-wester" to the unanimous approval of everyone present. Many employees such as Guy Noël, Father J.J. Hennessey, Murray Wilson, Vern Creighton, Elizabeth Chard, Bob Boucher, Chris MacGillivray, Mavis LaRocque, Felice Catalano, Kathy Mullane, and Debi Woodford joined with former fellow workers like Bruce Smith, Gerry Blom, Leo Gargan, John Parker, Chris Soosar, Lynn Monette, Pat and Mary Cleveland, Bonny Danielson, and Dulcie Conrad for an entertaining day which brought back fond memories of Saint Mary's.

Talk is already spreading about the next reunion. It'll be bigger and better, and organizers are hoping to involve even more people next time.

Notes from AUCC

CITIZENSHIP REPORT ON STUDENTS AND FACULTY RELEASED BY AUCC

The AUCC has released a statistical report, prepared by the Council of Ontario Universities, on the citizenship status of students and faculty members in Canadian universities. The report contains the most comprehensive data collected to date on the number of university students holding landed immigrant status and those on study visas. The data show that non-Canadian (landed immigrants and visa students) student enrolment has not increased at a rate much greater than that of total enrolment. However, changes in the immigration regulations have altered the proportion of landed immigrants to visa students. For the country as a whole, the student population in 1975-76 included 8.2% landed immigrants and 3.9% visa students; in 1977-78 this proportion had changed to 7.4% landed immigrants and 4.7% visa students. The proportion of non-Canadians in postgraduate programs is higher: 21.6% of Ontario doctoral candidates in 1976-77 were landed immigrants and 16.3% were visa students. The report shows that in 1976-77 21.5% of visa students were from Hong Kong; 20.4% were U.S. citizens; and 15.2% were from the United Kingdom. Faculty data show a steady increase in the proportion of Canadians and landed immigrants in the teaching personnel for the years since 1973-74.

The report, entitled Citizenship of Students and Faculty in Canadian Universities, will be translated and published by the AUCC following its submission to the AUCC board of directors. It was released at this time to support the AUCC protest against a CTV-W5 program which contained erroneous information about foreign students in Canada.

AUCC BRIEF HITS LOW FUNDING OF RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMS

In a brief submitted to the Prime Minister of Canada, the premiers of the provinces and the chairmen of the federal granting councils on October 5, AUCC warns that Canada does not have the scientific resources to implement federal government plans for increased research and development, nor to sustain current levels of research activity. The brief states that underfunding of universities is restricting the academic role in the training of scientists. AUCC recommendations for improving the research situation include: expansion of basic and applied research capabilities in universities; renewal of laboratory equipment; coordination of government research programs in consultation with the universities; improved industry-university interface; and increased support for national research projects and facilities. Copies of the brief have been sent to university information offices, and extra copies are available from AUCC Information.

STATISTICS CANADA ENROLMENT PROJECTIONS

Enrolment projections issued by Statistics Canada in the annual publication, Advanced Statistics of Education, indicate for 1979-80 a continuation of the decline in full-time university enrolment and the first decline in part-time enrolment. Statistics Canada also projects the first drop in the annual number of bachelor's degrees awarded since the early 1950's; numbers of master's and doctoral degrees awarded are expected to increase slightly.

Statistics Canada will release preliminary figures on the actual 1979-80 university enrolment about December 1.

AIESEC—Busy Planning a Dream Auction

The AIESEC (International Association for Students of Economics and Commerce) locals of Saint Mary's and Mount St. Vincent University are co-sponsoring a "dream auction". Dinner at a fancy restaurant, the theatre, complete with limousine service—sound like a dream?—well, it can be yours at the AIESEC auction.

The exact date (sometime in January) and the location were not known at press time, but that information will be released in the near future.

The theme of the auction is "Support Downtown Business in Halifax-Dartmouth". Merchants in these areas will be asked to donate merchandise and / or services. These donations will then be arranged in "dream packages" and auctioned off.

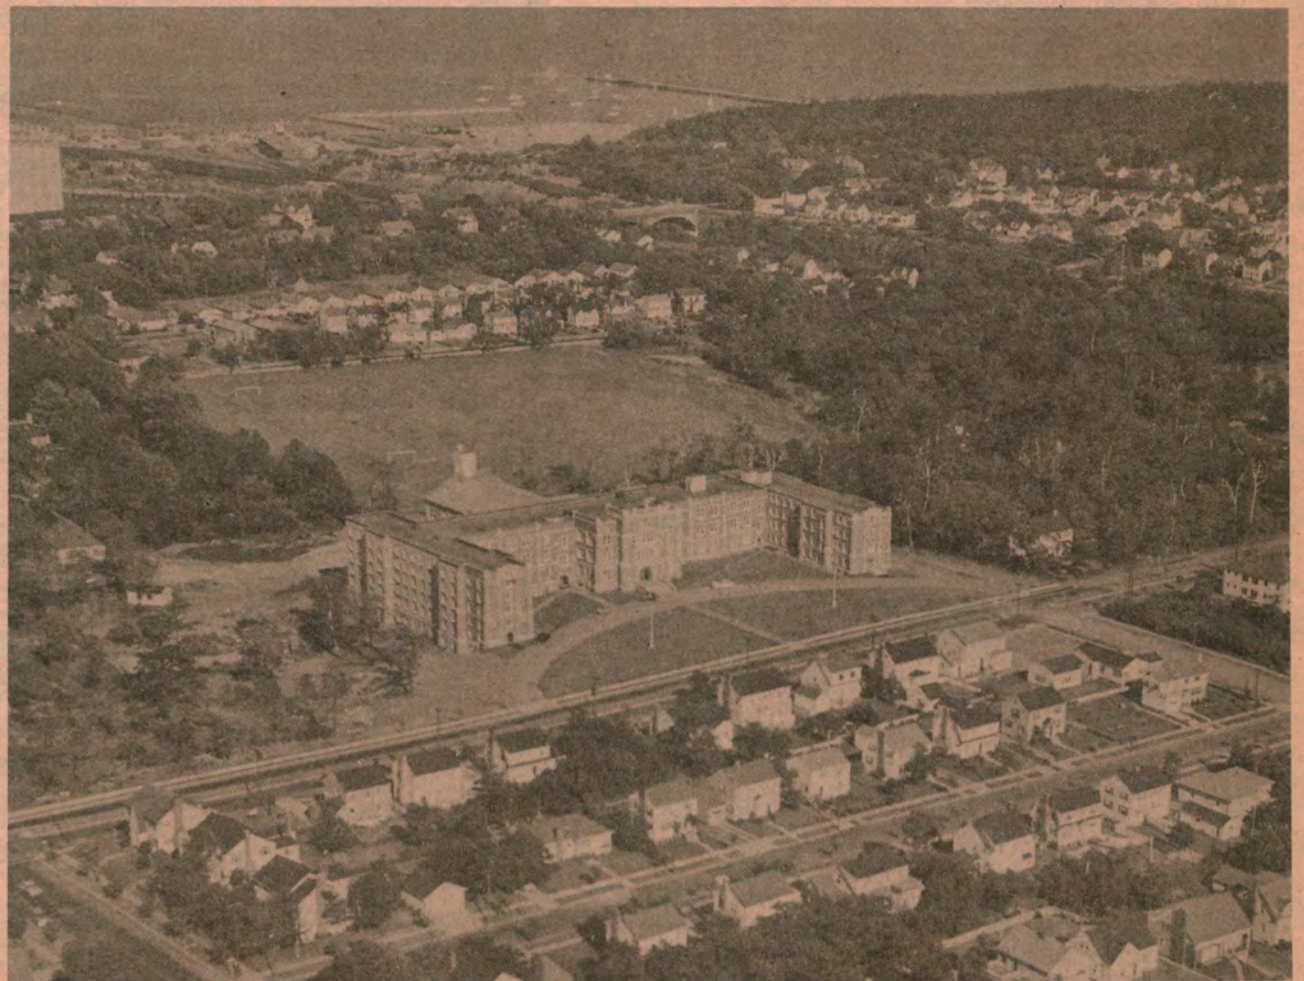

It is hoped that the event will attract students from all the universities in the Halifax area, professors, staff and the general public, and particularly the alumni members of all the universities.

A pre-auction reception will be held on the evening of Friday, January 18, 1980, on the Saint Mary's Campus. This reception will be open to all who wish to attend, and it is hoped that the Halifax-Dartmouth downtown merchants will attend as well.

Support the Downtown Merchants, and AIESEC, and plan to attend the auction. More information will be available soon.

REMEMBER WHEN . . .

. . . Saint Mary's looked like this.

. . . Monsignor Campbell (seated) was a student.

Notes from the Canada Employment Centre on Campus

On October 26 two recent Saint Mary's M.B.A. grads were back on campus, this time in a recruiting role. Alice MacDonald, a 1979 M.B.A. graduate, was here for Procter and Gamble. She, along with three other company representatives, held a briefing session, showed slides and answered students' questions about the variety of career choices available with this large national company.

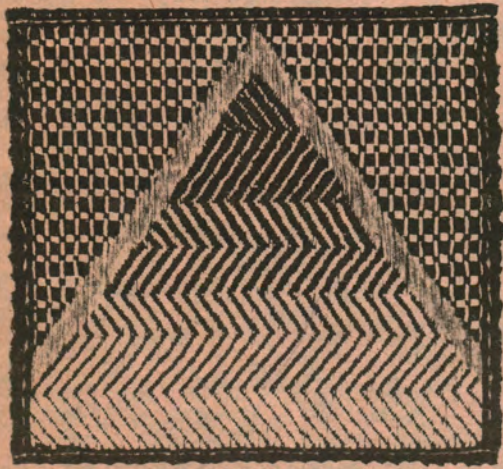

On Friday and Saturday, October 26 and 27, Mr. Robert Irving of the New Brunswick Irving interests was recruiting at Saint Mary's for his many and varied companies. He was accompanied by Don Campbell who graduated from here two years ago with his M.B.A.

The Auditor-General's Department, Province of Alberta, will be coming on campus here at Saint Mary's for the first time on November 26. Other new recruiters planning on visiting our campus for the first time are Canadian Pacific and Getty Mines Limited. They will be here in November.

It was good news to hear that three Saint Mary's graduates placed in the top four from Nova Scotia on the recent C.A. (Certified Accountant) examinations. The three were Danny McCarthy (who placed first), Nancy Flanders and Phil Rogers. All were 1977 Bachelor of Commerce graduates and are employed by Peat, Marwick and Mitchell.
