Message from the President

As President of the Saint Mary's Alumni Association, the past two years have been personally rewarding. I have had the privilege of meeting a lot of you, on different occasions, whether here in Halifax or travelling to other centers; and I'm proud to say that Saint Mary's has always been on the top of the list in conversations.

Your Alumni Executive has worked very hard to carry out their mandate. It's gratifying to see so many capable people offering for elected position on the 1989 Executive. I encourage all who have an interest to come forward in future years to carry on the role of binding together all Alumni.

Although a lot has been done already, we have only scratched the surface. We are on the threshold of bigger and better things; all of which you as Saint Mary's Alumni can be proud of.

We now have nine official Alumni Branches, with elected representatives, throughout Canada, the United States and overseas. I encourage those of you who are energetic and have a genuine concern for Saint Mary's, to continue to maintain your ties with Saint Mary's through the formation of more Branches.

We need your advice to formulate alumni policy. If we are to be a viable entity acting in your best interest we require your input as to the direction you want us to take.

What direction should we take? As stated by Tom McDonell, director of alumni, at the 1988 Alumni Annual Dinner held in October, "I think we have an increasingly important role to play in both the University community and the Nova Scotia community." He went on to offer the following possibilities for the future role of the Association: He stressed the need for a more formalized networking system whereby graduates could benefit professionally and socially through contact with other alumni; the need for alumni involvement in the recruitment of talented high school students; and increased involvement of alumni as advisors to students and recent graduates on career opportunities.

Finally, my friends, the President of the Alumni Association certainly is not on the same plateau as being the president of General Motors. However, as with General Motors, the support staff in any organization is all important; and we have an excellent support staff in our Alumni Office.

We have, in Tom McDonell, a superb Director. A large proportion of your Executive's work is brought to us and finished by him. His efforts are invaluable. Thanks, Tom, for your support.

Thanks, also to former Alumni Officer Geraldine Dunnigan, and to the present Alumni Officer, Heather Brown. Both are instrumental in continuing the link between Alumni and present students. Thanks as well to past and present alumni office secretaries, Cheryl Hill and Betty Jean Frenette respectively.

My dear friends of Saint Mary's, it has been a distinct pleasure to serve as President, and as always, "Remember the Husky."

Yours faithfully,

John C. Bishop

Alumni take to the Fairways

Alumni Golf Tournaments continue to attract alumni wanting to get away for the day and relax while renewing friendships and reminiscing about days gone by at Saint Mary's. During the late summer and early fall three alumni tournaments were held.

Halifax

In Halifax at the Oakfield Golf and Country Club record numbers of alumni took part in the 12th Annual Alumni Golf Tournament. The tradition of maintaining the mix between recreational golfers and serious golfers continued with valuable prizes being awarded through the luck of the draw and through various golf contests that reward the most skillful golfers. Some of the winners were as follows: H.G. "Babe" Beazley Trophy for Low Gross, Fred Hansen; Fr. M.J. O'Donnell Trophy for Low Net, Derek Watson; Women's Low Gross, Mary Phippen. Bob Dauphinee was rewarded with a gold Saint Mary's University wrist watch in the Colonial Honda Closest to the Pin Contest. Bob's shot was 5'7" from the Pin.

Assisted by brother Carl, Golf Committee Chair Granville Kelly also acted as emcee for the evening.

The Doug Mullenger foursome took top honours.

Toronto

Mardelle Telfer presents Tim Pal with the Stephen Telfer Memorial Cup as winner of the Toronto Branch Husky Open Golf Tournament.

Toronto Alumni held their first alumni golf tournament on September 23rd at the Vaughan Valley Golf & Country Club. In addition to bringing alumni together for a wonderful day of golf and camaraderie the tournament was important for another reason as well. Dedicated to the memory of Stephen Telfer the tournament proceeds were used to kick off a new bursary at the University; the Stephen D. Telfer Memorial Bursary.

Low gross honours went to Tim Pal while Kevin Pendergast took the award for low net. Many thanks to Virgile Magistrale and his golf committee, John Akkerman, and David Gray for a great day.

Annapolis Valley

Annapolis Valley Alumni held their first golf tournament as well. Due to poor weather conditions, results for the tournament were based on nine holes, although some brave souls completed the entire 18.

Low gross winner was Mike MacLean while Bruce Hopkins took Low net honours. Although small in numbers those who took part agreed on its success which augers well for the future. Thanks to Pamela Rafuse, ably assisted by Curtis Swinamer, for their hard work in planning the event.

New England Alumni Reminisce About Their Days at SMU!

by Karen Neves, BA '86

It was the year the Reverend Martin Luther King Jr. led 250,000 people in the Washington March that brought about the Civil Rights Act and later the Voting Rights Act of 1965. A much-loved President of the United States, John F. Kennedy, would die in his wife's arms. The Premier of South Vietnam, Ngo Dinh Diem was overthrown by his officers, drawing the United States ever closer into the conflict that would threaten to tear them apart as a nation. And the Beatles scored a hit with "Please Please Me" in Europe but had yet to take America by storm.

It was 1963 and at a small university in a small Canadian city four young men were learning lessons they would never forget, and making friends that would last a lifetime.

Three of those four young Americans would graduate from Saint Mary's that year. Saint Mary's University, a school with 500 students — 130 of whom were from the United States.

"We all thought of making $5,000 when we graduated," says Raymond Roy, "We thought that would be just great."

Roy was finishing his Bachelor of Commerce in Economics in 1963. He, like many of his contemporaries, played football for Saint Mary's University. Roy played wingback for three years. Roy has gone on to become president of the New England Teamsters' Credit Union.

Like the other three, Roy heard about Saint Mary's from others who had attended their high school, Bishop Bradley in Manchester, New Hampshire. Several young men had gone to Saint Mary's the previous year to play football. The following year, they came back to act as goodwill ambassadors and convince that year's crop of football hopefuls to come to SMU. Years later, this same zeal for Saint Mary's would infect Cosmos Marandos when he would travel to Daniel Webster College in the States to try and convince a football star to come to Saint Mary's. Marandos says as he was trying to convince the young man to come to SMU; he was taking his clothes out of the drawers in the boy's residence room where he had met Marandos. The boy's parents, set on keeping him close to home, were putting the clothes back in the drawers, as they refused to be convinced.

"It was quite a funny episode," recalls Marandos.

"Cos", as his friends call him, was a basketball star at Saint Mary's. He studied Sociology and French and now deals in real estate. He says he is proud to have maintained his connection with Saint Mary's.

Fran Gougeon says he was not an athlete, but came to support his friends in their athletic endeavours. Gougeon studied History at SMU and is now a school superintendent in Hatfield, Massachusetts.

Gougeon has a family connection with Saint Mary's. His brother Leonard graduated in 1973 and is now a professor of English in Scranton. Gougeon tells stories of life in residence where the Rosary was said every night, the curfew was 12 midnight — sharp — and they went to church three times a week besides Sunday (a floor proctor checked to make sure).

Theodore Chandonnet has a family connection with Saint Mary's like Gougeon, but his is more immediate. Chandonnet's daughter, Amy, has just begun her first year in an Arts program. Chandonnet graduated with a Sociology degree in 1963. He played Varsity football for four years. Ted is now a

All of the men, still obviously close after twenty-five years, tell stories of the wild schemes they came up with to let off some steam. Gougeon tells of drinking bouts at the Lighthouse tavern — still there after twenty-five years — where Father Hennessey, guardian, friend and mentor of several generations of Santamarians, would collar them and gently tell them to get their tails back to residence. Hennessey would then order a drink, sit down and tell the boys they had to be back in residence before he was.

"That wasn't very hard," laughs Gougeon affectionately. Then there is the story of the residence pay phone that Ted Chandonnet likes to tell.

"You'd put your money in the thing, make your call (usually long distance) and the phone would give you the money back." One day, Father Hennessey, after getting a phone bill for several hundred dollars, found only some loose change in the phone. He entered the common room, explained the situation and put his hat down. He expected to find the money for the calls in the hat when he came back. Father then left the boys to their consciences. Chandonnet never said if Hennessey got his money.

The four men have many fond memories of Saint Mary's. Raymond Roy said it best when describing his memories.

"The best thing I remember from my time at Saint Mary's is the fellowship with all the guys."

That fellowship continues with these four men to this day. In addition to maintaining ties with each other, these four friends also remain close to Saint Mary's by taking an active role in the Alumni Association's Branch in Boston. These four Santamarians and their spouses recently returned to campus during Alumni Weekend to celebrate their 25th reunion, and to remember the good old days at Saint Mary's. 🌿

Monte Carlo Games Lend Excitement to Toronto Annual Dinner

Donnie Smart, BComm '83, works the Crown & Anchor Wheel during casino activities following the Toronto Branch Annual Dinner.

How's your dart game? What about your accuracy in tossing baseballs or basketballs? Perhaps you prefer to take your chances at a crown and anchor table? These were just some of the choices that faced alumni and guests at the Monte Carlo Casino following this year's Toronto Branch Annual Dinner.

Patrons to the Dinner, held at the very luxurious and roomy Toronto Cricket Club, used play money to test their gambling skills for nearly two hours following dinner. An exciting auction of valuable prizes followed. The evening concluded with dancing and socializing.

One of the largest crowds ever to attend the Toronto Dinner can thank Dinner

Chairman John Akkerman BComm '82, and his committee for a job well done. Despite the loss of our football Huskies in the Vanier Cup the mood was very upbeat which speaks well for the future of not only the Toronto Dinner but all of the activities of the Toronto Branch.

Attending from Halifax were Dr. Kenneth Ozmon and his wife Betty, Director of Alumni Tom McDonnell and his wife Joan, Alumni Association President John Bishop, and Executive Assistant to the President Bob Hayes. Also in attendance was former Dean of Commerce, Rick Miner, who is currently on a one year sabbatical.

Registrar Receives Distinguished Community Service Award

Saint Mary's Registrar Elizabeth Chard

"We don't give this award unless someone has merited it, and in this case Elizabeth Chard certainly did." Alumni Director Tom McDonell is speaking of the Distinguished Community Service Award presented to Saint Mary's Registrar Elizabeth Chard at the Alumni Association Annual Dinner.

McDonell says that the main factor in selecting Mrs. Chard was her service in organizing sporting activities. "With Elizabeth we looked at her work with the Special Olympics, her work with the CIAU (Canadian Inter-University Athletic Union), and her service to several national teams as chef-de-mission; that's in addition to her services to the University."

Elizabeth Chard has been associated with Saint Mary's for twenty-seven years. Before her appointment as Registrar in 1973, Mrs. Chard held numerous positions at Saint Mary's. She held the positions of assistant and associate professor of history, chairperson of the history department, dean of women, and dean of residence for women.

Elizabeth Chard's community service has been wide-ranging. She has been president of the student affairs division of the National Student Service Organization, she served on the Canadian Association for College and University Student Service Personnel, the Atlantic Universities Athletic Association, and the Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union. She has also chaired the 1984, 1986, and 1988 Nova Scotia Special Olympics committees.

Elizabeth was also part of the committee which was almost successful in bringing the next Commonwealth Games to Halifax.

Within the University Mrs. Chard serves on the Calendar Committee, the Orientation Committee and she chairs the Convocation Committee. In addition to her official duties, Elizabeth is an active supporter of the Huskies. 🌿

New Branch Formed in Pictou County

Anse MacDonald, '47, Ed Mullins, BA '37, Jocelyn Dorrington, BED '80, and John Keating, BED '80 discuss future activities for our newest alumni branch. The Northern Nova Scotia Branch, the ninth such branch formed in the last two years, met and elected two executive members at a reception on November 15, 1988 in Stelarton. Jocelyn Dorrington will serve as president for the branch and Anse MacDonald will assist as vice-president.

Branch Executive Elected in Charlottetown

Discussing plans for the new P.E.I. Branch are executive members Fraser MacDonald, BA '74, vice-president; Carl Lafford, BA '88, president; and Terry Miller, BComm '71, secretary treasurer. The three were elected at an alumni meeting and reception on October 29th in Charlottetown.

Saint Mary's in Bermuda

On Monday, November 14th, Saint Mary's University kicked-off a busy week in Bermuda with a reception for Alumni and parents of current Saint Mary's students at the Belmont Hotel in Warwick.

In excess of fifty people attended this event and listened to a presentation by University Registrar Elizabeth Chard on an overview of the University, noting in particular the increased enrollment this year, and the efforts the University is making to continue the tradition of a personalized approach to undergraduate education; also to hear the success of the football Huskies the previous Saturday. The response from the parents was most gratifying as not only the Registrar, but also the Director of Admissions, Mr. Greg Ferguson, listened to the very complimentary remarks from the parents, many of whom had sons or daughters in their first or second year of attendance at the University. It was evident that these parents certainly felt that the University had delivered the kind of educational experience which had been promised.

In her presentation, Mrs. Chard stressed the fact that the University was continuously striving not only to maintain a personal approach to education, but ensuring that there was a proper mix of Canadian and international students, and that the Bermudian students were an important component in this mixture.

At the end of the evening's festivities a group of alumni formed a Steering Committee to explore the possibilities of not only forming a branch of the Alumni Association officially in Bermuda, but also setting some realistic goals and objectives to be reached during the 1988-89 season.

During the rest of the week the Registrar and Director of Admissions visited a number of the private schools on the Island, including Saltus Grammar School, Mount St. Agnes Academy and Bermuda High School for Girls, as well as the Berkeley Institute from which a number of Saint Mary's alumni have come. In addition, meetings were held with representatives from the Ministry of Education in Bermuda, and also the public school guidance counselors. All in all, it was a busy but productive week for those lucky enough to have to work at least one week of the year in Bermuda.

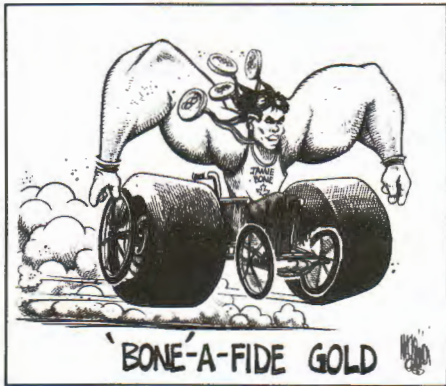

A special thanks from Mrs. Chard and Mr. Ferguson to Marie and Derek Joell. You will recall that Marie was president of the Caribbean Society at Saint Mary's for the 1987-88 academic year, while her husband Derek was the International Student Representative to the S.R.C. These two did a tremendous job on campus last year to increase the profile and awareness of the Caribbean Society and the involvement of the Caribbean students, including Bermudians, in the life of the University. They have obviously decided to continue that tradition of hard, energetic work back on the Island and we are looking forward to bigger and better things as they form an integral part of the Steering Committee previously noted. It is hoped that all Saint Mary's graduates living in Bermuda will lend them the type of support which is needed in order to form a successful Saint Mary's University Alumni Branch on the Island.

On Thursday, the 17th November, an information session was held at the Hamilton Princess, to which parents of potential university students were invited.

Jamie Bone Stars in Seoul Paralympics

CHRONICLE-HERALD

by Bob LeDrew

Slowly, people began to take notice. The headlines got larger in the newspapers — “Bone wins 100 meter gold. . .”, “Bone sets another world record,” to, simply, “The Golden Boy.”

Jamie Bone, a 22 year-old Commerce student at Saint Mary’s, had become the star of the 1988 Paralympic Games in Seoul.

Bone has cerebral palsy. This brain disorder, which takes several forms, left Bone classified as a quadriplegic. Although he walks with crutches most of the time, he races in a wheelchair. He has only been training since 1986.

Bone was a familiar sight to those who passed the track on campus. You could see him there six days a week, pushing the wheel rims around the track, in rain, heat, and cold winds. As his friend and chef de mission for the Canadian team, Dick Loiselle, said: “He worked his butt off. He’s done everything he’s had to do as an athlete.”

Jamie did what he had to do in Seoul — excel. In his first race, the 100 meters, he won by setting a new world record of 20.9 seconds. And that was only the beginning. Bone, who admits to being “a bit nervous” at the start of the Games, gained confidence from the win, and looked forward to his next three events — the 200 meters, the 4 x 100 meters relay, and the 400 meters individual.

The 200, though, was anything but easy. As Bone pushed through the first part of the race, something went wrong with the chair. He slowed, the field passing him, and almost came to a stop on the track. But he adjusted his wheelchair while still moving and shot to the front of the field to take his second gold. “It was a little bit scary,” Bone laughs, looking back. Even with his problems, though, Jamie almost set another world record. His time of 41.78 seconds was only 63/100 ths of a second away from his own world record.

Things went well for the Canadian team in the relay race, and they won a bronze medal, finishing 5.5 seconds behind the winning Irish team. But Jamie had saved the best for last. In the 400 meters, Jamie rocketed to gold in one minute, 23.11 seconds, shaving over a second from the record. And since then, life has been very sweet for this young man.

Jamie returned to a hero’s welcome on October 26. For the next few days, Jamie was rushed from event to event, collecting honors and gifts from local and provincial politicians. Saint Mary’s University held a reception for him on the twenty-ninth of October, where he was presented with a Huskies football jersey by quarterback Chris Flynn, and a framed print of Chronicle-Herald Bruce MacKinnon’s rendering of the young athlete.

Just a few days after the celebrations, Bone was off to Edmonton. His trip to Alberta was not of pleasure, though — he was going there to train with coaches at the Rick Hansen Center. His purpose: “to get faster; to improve my stroke for next year, and for Barcelona.” (Barcelona is the site of the 1992 Paralympics).

Jamie Bone? Whether you look at him as an incredible athlete or top commerce student, it’s plain to see that he is, as Bruce MacKinnon put it, “Bone-a-Fide Gold!”

THE YEAR IN BRIEF...

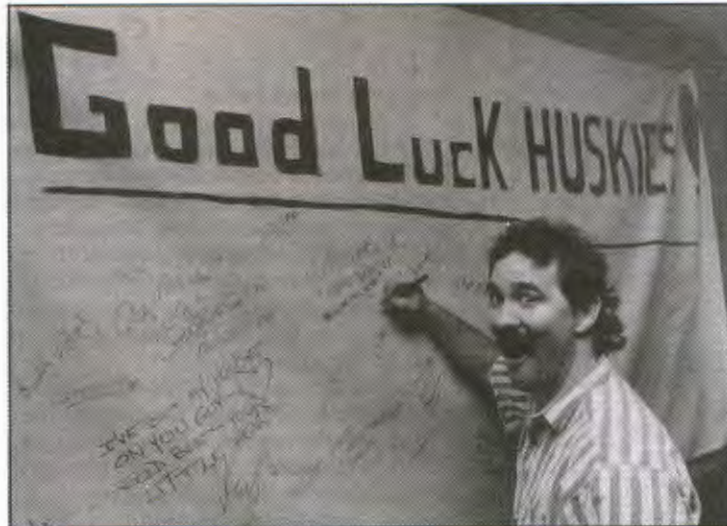

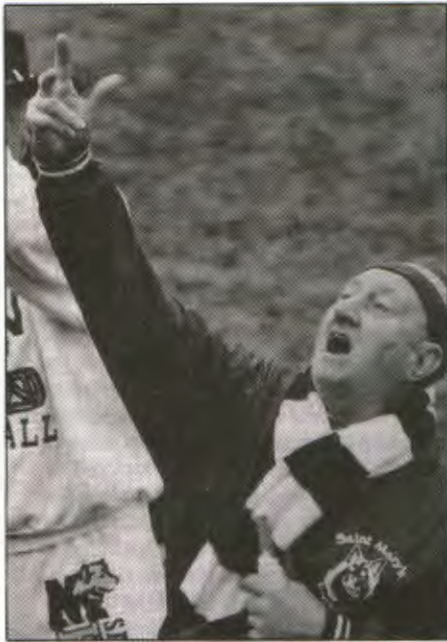

During 1988, Saint Mary's University:

- was designated one of two Apple Canada Centres of Innovation in Canada. The Designation, which provided $87,000 in computer equipment, is in support of research and teaching undertaken by Dr. Tom Musial with Apple Computers.
- painter Vern Creighton was recognized for his twenty years of yeoman service to the University, on the occasion of his retirement.
- received a Federal Government Grant of $722,972 for an Innovations Project under the Canadian Job Strategy. The three year project is aimed at improving the employability of disabled people living in the Atlantic Region and will be based at the Atlantic Centre of Support for Disabled Students.
- graduated a record number 650 students at convocation ceremonies.
- hosted 300 commerce professors and deans at the annual conference of the Administrative Science Association of Canada (ASAC).
- Chemistry Professor Dr. Jack Ginsburg received the Alumni Association's Fr. William A. Stewart, S.J. medal for teaching.
- conferred on three of the University's distinguished academics the honorary rank of professor emeritus. They were Dr. Stanislaw Bobr-Tylingo, Dr. Alfonso Rojo, and Dr. John MacCormack.
- fitness and recreation centre, The Tower, was selected by the National Intramural Recreation Sports Association as one of the top twenty sports and recreation facilities in North America.
- co-hosted with Dalhousie University, and funded by CIDA, a summer institute on Gender and Development which attracted twenty-five women from 13 countries.
- Accounting Professor David Bateman took first prize honours in an international accounting case writing contest sponsored by the Accounting Education Centre at the University of Lethbridge.
- enrollment increased by almost 1,000. The number of students enrolled, as full-time and part-time students, in September, 1988 was 6,458.
- along with the five other university libraries in metro Halifax began using NOVANET, a computer system based on a Canadian-built GEAC computer. Now people who visit the libraries of all five universities can use terminals to check on the location and status of almost 500,000 books.
- professors received $359,357 in Natural Sciences & Engineering Research Council (N.S.E.R.C.) grants and $184,404 in Social Sciences & Humanities Research Council (S.S.H.R.C.) grants.
- varsity athletic teams dominated AUSA action in the fall of 1988 winning AUSA championships in Football, Soccer, and Field Hockey. The Football Huskies went on to win the Atlantic Bowl over the Bishops Gaitors.
- received, through the International Education Centre, an Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency (ACOA) grant of $211,000 over three years to help private and public sector businesses and agencies increase their contact with foreign countries through the provision of orientation sessions, briefings, and written materials.

Huskies Suffer Glorious Defeat at Vanier Cup

Cheered on by a record number of alumni, University administrators, and fellow students, the Football Huskies suffered an honourable defeat at the hands of the Calgary Dinosaurs in the Vanier Cup, November 19.

The 52-23 score does not reflect what remained a close fought battle until the end of the final quarter. Saint Mary's were in contention all through, despite lacking star quarterback Chris Flynn. Even Calgary coach Peter Conellan said, "The final score was not indicative of what type of game it was."

After a resounding 44-10 win over the Bishops Gaiters in the Atlantic Bowl, the Huskies hopes of winning the Vanier Cup for the first time since 1973 were dashed when Flynn was diagnosed as having a hairline skull fracture two days before the game.

Flynn was hurt in the first quarter of the Atlantic Bowl, but returned to finish the game. Recurring headaches led to diagnosis of the skull fracture which sidelined him for the big game.

The week before the Vanier cup it seemed the whole of the Halifax-Dartmouth area shared Saint Mary's hopes and fears for the Huskies. Tension rose as game time drew closer and gloom descended like harbour fog when Flynn announced he would not be playing. He did this at the awards banquet at which he received the Hec Crighton trophy as top player in the country and coach Larry Uteck received the Canadian Interuniversity Athletics Union Coach of the Year award. Five Huskies, tight end Brian Smith, defensive end Doug MacKenzie, linebacker Scott Dunthorne, offensive guard Lou Olsacher and quarterback Chris Flynn were chosen for the All-Canadian team. The Huskies were placed number one in the standings all year.

Star slotback Bill Scollard, who had only played quarterback for a 12-minute period before the vital week, stepped into Flynn's shoes. He did a magnificent job, earning best offensive player award for the game and dazzling the crowd of 13,127 at Varsity Stadium by attempting a Vanier Cup record 47 passes and completing a record 27 for 296 yards.

Huskies star quarterback Chris Flynn, this years winner of the Hec Crighton Trophy as the outstanding college football player in Canada.

In the words of team mate Flynn, "I knew he could do it. Bill Scollard can play well in any position. He has a lot of confidence and he's a great athlete and a great leader."

Scollard kept the Huskies within reach of the Dinosaurs until the end of the fourth quarter, when Calgary put in a burst and raised the score to 52-23. The result, however, moved the Huskies one step closer to winning the coveted trophy. Last year they suffered defeat at the hands of the McGill Redmen in the Atlantic Bowl. "Wait until next year" is now the cry!

Huskies Coach Larry Uteck displays the Frank Tindall Award which was presented to him as the Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union coach of the year. The presentation was made November 17th as part of Vanier Cup Week in Toronto.

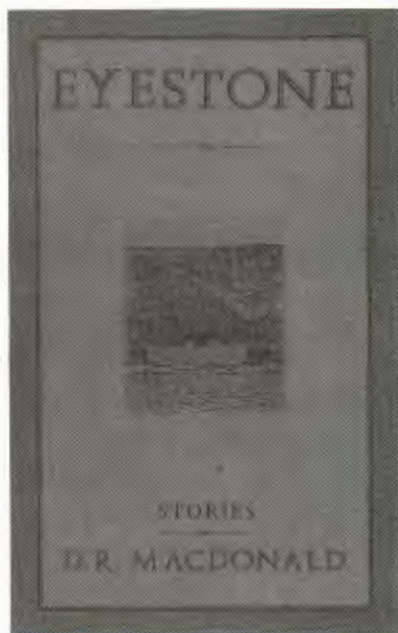

In Toronto a record number of Saint Mary's alumni were on hand to support the Huskies and a pre-game rally was held to make sure the fans were primed to play their part in the game. In addition a plane load of supporters flew in from Halifax. These included Vern Creighton, former University painter who has been leading the cheers for the Huskies for more years than he cares to remember. Also on hand was Crocodile Dundee, sporting a huge maroon and white flag, and ten-year old Katie Machek, who, with her maroon and white uniform and pompoms, is a permanent fixture on the Huskies home turf.

Speaking of the fateful game, assistant coach Al Keith says, "Everyone just came together after we learned Chris wouldn't be playing. It was fabulous to see. Every guy that was involved with this team has to be extremely proud." 🍀

Book Review

Cape Breton Elegies

Eyestone, by D.R. MacDonald Waincott,
New York: Pushcart Press, 1988, 206 pages, cloth, $22.95 (ISBN 0-916366-48-0)

Review by Russell Perkin

D.R. MacDonald's Eyestone is an impressive first collection of nine stories by a writer who was born in Cape Breton and who now teaches at Stanford University. Most of the stories contrast the traditional way of life of a dying generation in Cape Breton with the alienated and aimless life of contemporary North America. In effect, Eyestone is an elegy for Cape Breton culture.

MacDonald's stories combine two distinct literary modes, not always successfully. The majority of them can be read as realistic fiction, pessimistically cataloguing the signs of cultural disintegration. Most of them focus on death and physical infirmity. But MacDonald is also writing a version of pastoral and he raises Cape Breton to the status of a mythic landscape through his use of motifs from Gaelic traditions, his blurring of the boundary between the natural and the supernatural, and his celebration of the values of steadfastness, craftsmanship, and comradeship. This celebration can become sentimental, as in "Work" or "Sailing," and it emphasizes the very masculine world of MacDonald's imagination. Commitment to a woman tends to be an encumbrance for his protagonists, and all the moments of genuine human communication occur between men.

One of the most successful stories, "Poplars," describes an old man being brought home by his nephew after recovering from a stroke. When they arrive they find his house robbed and vandalized. The incident is rendered powerfully, and gains significance from the way that it is echoed in the other stories.

In "The Chinese Rifle" Cape Breton exists in the background, and the story is set in the contemporary America of writers like Raymond Carver and Bobbie Ann Mason. MacDonald is less sure of this territory, and less sympathetic to the people who inhabit it. His emotional investment in Cape Breton leads him to adopt a tone of easy satire towards "outsiders," who are depicted in several stories as stereotypical hollow men. In the title story an American artist realizes that his wife is unable to sketch him accurately: "Her drawings of him were always off the mark, as if she were unwilling to see what he really looked like."

The major technical weakness in Eyestone is MacDonald's lack of control of his narrative voice. He tends to remain close to the consciousness of his characters, but sometimes a discordant authorial voice intrudes. In "Poplars" the narrator asks, "What was it that had enraged the housebreakers so? Workmanship? Love?" The questions could conceivably be the nephew's, but they are too obviously rhetorical to belong appropriately to him. However, MacDonald is also gifted with the ability to make an incident both memorably particular and full of wider implications, which is the indispensable requirement for writing good short fiction.

Eyestone is an important tribute to Gaelic moving pathos in "The Wharf King" of John

Big Brother is Watching Overdue Books

"I can't think of a part of this library that hasn't been helped by it." Chief Librarian Ronald Lewis is speaking of the new NOVANET computer system that Saint Mary's has begun to use.

The NOVANET system is a large computer and database that has been bought cooperatively by Saint Mary's, Dalhousie, the Technical University of Nova Scotia, Mount Saint Vincent and the Nova Scotia College of Art and Design. Lewis feels that the $1.1 million cost was well worth it. He describes the system as "fully-integrated." For computer illiterates that means all library functions; acquisitions, cataloguing, circulation, and public use, are now done on the computer.

For librarians the NOVANET system is a dream come true. Ken Clare, the head of circulation, says, "At any time we have twenty to forty thousand items signed out. To keep track of these by hand we had to have all the book slips in hard copy form. To find any one book would have been very difficult. But now we can instantly find out where something is, who has it, and when it's due."

NOVANET allows library staff to keep track of each library user, and to keep statistics on the frequency of borrowing of any given book or subject.

For the student or faculty member in search of the latest theories in sociology or business, the computer can find books in all of the five university libraries. It searches in several ways; by author, title, subject, or call number. It can also search for a key word in the Library of Congress subject heading list.

The computer returns complete bibliographic information on any book, and also notes which universities hold it, and whether it is out on loan. Certainly easier than searching the shelves!

Remote access is also possible through NOVANET. This means that anyone with an IBM compatible microcomputer and modem will be able to call the University, connect with the NOVANET system, and search for books without leaving home or office. Ken Clare points out that, "With remote access, every law firm in the province could use the Dalhousie Law Library as if it were its own."
Similar benefits exist for those in the fields of medicine, psychology and many others.

Ronald Lewis feels, however, that NOVANET's best feature is its ability to perform the menial tasks involved in library administration. "The machine does filing much better than a human, for example. So let the machine do it; that way the staff has more time available to serve the public." ❁

CFSM Seeks City-Wide FM License

by Norman Gallant
Chairman — Radio Saint Mary's

Radio Saint Mary's Association (CFSM), Saint Mary's carrier current station, is now at the final stages of its FM expansion proposal which will transform the facility to a city-wide FM stereo station.

The Board of Directors of Radio Saint Mary's Association has been vigorously pursuing FM expansion since November 1987. A proposal was first forwarded to the Board by Patrick Morand, now general manager of Radio Saint Mary's. The report indicated that the market and audience for the outdated carrier current station has been dwindling in recent years, and city-wide FM has been proven, through marketing studies and after much planning, to be the most favourable direction for the Association.

The project was marketed heavily by Mr. Morand in the summer of 1988. Fund raising is presently underway, utilizing various sources for capital for this $100,000 capital development project. The annual operating budget of the new FM station will escalate to about $70,000, and has been cited as very "... efficient, feasible and realistic ..." by advisers at local city-wide radio stations (including CJCH/C100, who have provided most of the technical and marketing input for Mr. Morand's efforts).

In November 1988, the project had reached the formal application stage, at which time a substantial amount of funding was achieved. Mr. Morand expects that by late 1989 we could be on-air pending the outcome of the application submitted to the CRTC; this decision will probably be reached by July, 1989.

Saint Mary's University will benefit immeasurably from this venture into the larger world of radio by Radio Saint Mary's. The marketing segmentation studies completed have given the station a clear message of what type of programs the greater Peninsula Halifax market desires in radio. The CRTC will not allow a duplication of services, so CFSM will venture more into information radio, lecture series programs, easy listening, jazz, reggae, play-by-play Huskies basketball and football, sports and political roundtables, awareness programming focusing on the needs of disabled persons in our community, Christian rock specials, and Sunday morning eccumenical programs.

All university organizations will be offered free airtime and free announcement time on the station. Various sectors of the University community will contribute to the new FM station, and the community will benefit immensely from this participation.

The radio station is anxious to receive support from Saint Mary's Alumni as this public relations facility develops over the next year. 🌿

Bonnie LeFrank: Running Her Own Life

by Steve Zinck

After running her first marathon in 1980, Bonnie LeFrank, BComm '78, was ready to close the book on her running career. Her point proven to family and friends, she never expected to run another step. Although at first unwilling to admit it, even to herself, she was hooked and after a brief hiatus soon returned to the roads.

Within five years she had become a nationally-ranked marathoner, had represented Canada internationally and was dominating the Nova Scotian roads. Now eight years later, LeFrank has as much enthusiasm for the sport as she had disdain for it in 1980.

In the meantime she has logged close to 15,000 training miles, dropped a couple of dress sizes and worn out more pairs of running shoes than the accountant in her cares to count.

One of few national-class runners who also work full-time LeFrank is a contradiction of sorts. She is friendly, yet shy, a

"There are some people who are born to be national-class runners. . . It's not that way with Bonnie. She works for everything she gets and she'll work until she gets it."

shyness that is often misinterpreted as aloofness. She is determined, dedicated and demanding, especially of herself. Above all she is tenacious and she is competitive.

Those characteristics, which made her a Dean's List scholar during her university days, have been equally responsible for her running success.

"She has a desire to be a national-class runner," says Bob Waugh, her coach since the fall of 1984 when she first became nationally recognized. "I'm not sure she realizes it sometimes but she does want to be the best at what she does."

"There are some people who are born to be national-class runners, it's innate in them. It's not that way with Bonnie. She works for everything she gets and she'll work until she gets it."

"I think my best feature is I don't like to come in second," says LeFrank, who works as an accountant. "I've come second a lot of times but I don't think you can go into a race hoping to come second. Even if someone is two minutes faster than me, I have to go in believing I can win. Maybe they're not running well; maybe they're injured; maybe they're just having a bad day.

"I think running is a reflection of my personality and my attitude about life. Every race I run, I run it like it was my last."

Her competitiveness makes LeFrank particularly well-suited to the marathon, a race that tests one's physical as well as mental strength. In a race where it is often too easy to give in to fatigue, the kind of inner strength LeFrank has shown is an invaluable asset.

"I think I have the personality of a marathoner," she says very matter of factly. "No matter how tired I am, if something has to be done, I'm going to do it. That's just the way I was brought up.

"We sat down in October of 1984 and discussed what she had done and where we thought we could go," remembers Waugh. "We looked at what training she had done and set goals for 1985.

"The two goals were to break 35 minutes for 10K and to break 2:40 in the marathon. That was a 15-16 minute improvement in the marathon and a full two minutes in a 10K and she thought I was crazy but there was no question in my mind that she could do it."

Although the task seemed like an impossible one at first, LeFrank had faith in herself and even more in her coach. When Bonnie LeFrank crosses the finish line first in the Halifax Herald Modified Marathon, June 7, 1987.

"I don't have a tremendous amount of speed but I have good concentration. I'm not a quitter, but not because I say, 'I'm not going to quit.' It's just that quitting has never been an option for me. It's just a matter of how I'm going to do.

"For the same reason I've never thought about walking in a marathon. All I think of is, the faster I get this done, the sooner I can stop. I've been tired but I never thought walking was the solution."

Following a steady rise to the top of the provincial running fraternity, including a then-provincial record clocking of 2:54 in the 1984 Halifax Marathon, she decided to make a more serious commitment to the sport and sought the advice of coach Waugh.

her times began to drop, she was buoyed by the success to train even harder.

In September she finished fifth at the National 10K championships in Toronto in a personal-best time of 34:53. Two weeks later she ran 2:39.22 in the Montreal International Marathon.

"In retrospect, I think as time went on and we worked together, she became a believer. It was that belief in herself and in me that enabled her to achieve those times," said Waugh.

Along with a second-place finish at the National Team Cross Country championships later that fall and a 10th place finish at the National Cross Country championships in early 1986, her performances were impressive enough to earn LeFrank a berth on Canada's team for the Ekiden Renown Cup relay in Japan in February, 1986.

She had arrived.

"I think that's when I first felt like I belonged," said LeFrank of reaching national-class.

But while 1986 was the best of times, it was also the worst of times. Not long after returning from Japan with Waugh, who was named one of the Ekiden team's coaches, LeFrank encountered her first injury, a mysterious knee ailment. Shortly thereafter, she learned her fourth-place finish (second Canadian) at the 1985 Montreal Marathon had earned her a berth on the Canadian team for the Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh.

"It was something I had worked so hard for and suddenly, I was injured," she said, her face still showing the pain. "I couldn't do a thing about it, I felt so helpless.

"When I was running in Montreal, I was about to make the last turn and then I would be able to see the finish line and I thought, This is it; I've made the team? Then I thought, 'Am I doing this so I can do it again.'"

After a month-long battle during which she was unable to run but spent close to four hours a day swimming and cycling on a stationary bike to maintain her fitness hoping for some miracle, she finally and painfully announced she would not be able to compete in Edinburgh.

"I think running is a reflection of my personality and my attitude about life. Every race I run, I run it like it was my last."

"To make the team is nice but I wanted to go and run; that hurts," she said at the time. "I'm sure if you asked the athletes who made the 1980 Olympic team but didn't get to go to Moscow how they felt, they'd say the same thing. It's not making the team; it's the experience of going there and competing."

The month prior to her decision proved to be the longest of her young career. Unable to run for the first time since she took up the sport six years earlier, the uncertainty of her injured knee was constantly on her mind.

Although deep down she knew her chances of recovery in time were slim, she clung to the only hope she had. Before work, she swam two kilometres each morning and each evening pedalled seemingly endless miles without leaving her living room.

Each morning when the door to the Dalplex pool opened at seven, LeFrank, goggles already in place, would rush into the water, complete her swim, shower, change and drive to work by eight.

"Every morning I'd be there, first in line with my goggles down hoping they'd open the door early but they never did," she said, "I was like a maniac. I'd swim as fast as I could, shower, change and drive like a madman to the house. Mark (her husband) would be waiting on the steps and I'd drive myself to work, just in time."

By the fall of 1986 she was back on the roads again training for a marathon the following spring, one of two she would run in 1987. She also finished fourth in the National 10K championships with a personal best time of 34:35.

The year 1987 also brought with it her third selection to a Canadian team, this time to the World 15K Road Racing championships in Monte Carlo.

For LeFrank, like any other athlete, success has not been accomplished without hard work and sacrifice. Her day typically begins shortly after five and by six, she is on the road, rain or shine. By eight, she is at work.

Her regular work day is usually followed by a second session, either at the track, in the weight room or in the pool. It is not a routine for everyone but one LeFrank wouldn't trade. Despite the demands of her training, she asks no special favors instead fitting her training schedule around her work day. It is not a dilemma faced by many of her contemporaries who are either students or full-time athletes, but a lifestyle LeFrank accepts happily.

"I'm serious about running but I'm also serious about a career and I know which is going to last longer," she says. "I get up at five to run; I never ask to leave work early for practice and when I go away to races I take vacation.

"I think you can get overfocused about running. I can remember not wanting to rake leaves two days before a track workout because I might get sore. When it starts interfering with your everyday life, that's overfocused.

"I admit that sometimes running feels like a second job and I wouldn't mind running for a living but not for a livelihood. It would be fine if it was an occupation but not something I depended on for income. I need security in a job.

"I don't think I'd train any more if I ran for a living so it's not the time, it's the energy. I don't get stressed about work but when I have a track workout or a big race that I'm getting ready for, it's hard sometimes to walk out the door and say, 'O.K. now I'm a runner,' because you're dragging some of those things with you."

It was certainly not the lifestyle she expected when she returned to running fol-

"It was something I had worked so hard for and suddenly, I was injured. . . I couldn't do a thing about it, I felt so helpless."

lowing her initial marathon because, to her surprise, she missed the sport and also because she needed an outlet from an unfulfilling job she was mired in at the time.

"I remember a lot of runs I went on I was furious from work," she remembered. "When I started doing longer runs, seven-eight miles I found by the time I was finished, I had calmed down a lot. About that time I started competing and I realized if I trained, I'd do well. It wasn't like going to work where if I did well I'd only get promoted if someone chose to recognize me.

"Running was very scientific, very logical. If I train hard, I'll run well and I'll race well. What you put into it, you get out."

Aside from the obvious physical benefits of the sport, running had another positive effect on LeFrank. The confidence she gained through her running was easily translated to her everyday life. Although the shyness still remains, a new self-confidence emerged, a trait that has aided her in all facets of her life.

"The confidence I had in myself from running really improved my self-image. It also made me realize that a lot of the problems I had when I came out of university were my own fault. I was terrible in interviews because I had no self-confidence and as a result, nobody would hire me. I was expecting too much, too soon and not putting enough into it.

"I grew up a lot competing nationally and internationally because I was thrown into situations where I had to be on my own. I was forced to be a little more outgoing. I couldn't just sit in a room somewhere; I had to fake it. Sometimes, that's enough. If you appear self-assured, people will treat you accordingly. But if you look like you don't know what you're doing, you get shoved into the back somewhere.

"I'll always recognize that running has been good for me. I think about my personality; how much I've grown up since I started running. When I started going out with Mark, he was 19 and he seemed so self-assured. Now sometimes I see myself being more self-assured than he is."

Eight years ago LeFrank had trouble visualizing herself a runner. Now it is hard for those in the running community to recall the past eight years without LeFrank's name and her exploits popping up. It is even more difficult for LeFrank to look back on those years without running.

The sport, that began as a way of proving a point, a sort of means to an end has been many things but she has yet to reach that end. Looking ahead, none is in sight. 🌿

Representatives from Dalhousie University, Acadia, Mount Saint Vincent and Saint FX's Universities were also present. It was most gratifying to the Registrar and Director of Admissions to have a number of Saint Mary's University's alumni in attendance, namely Marie and Derek Joell; Richard Evans; Lisa DeSilva; Germaine Harvey; Malcolm Mitchell; and Malcolm Butterfield (whose wife Debbie, a University of Toronto graduate) also provided assistance. What better way to sell Saint Mary's University to potential students than to have some satisfied graduates helping us promote the institution.

All in all it was a most successful week for Saint Mary's University in Bermuda. 🌿

The Huskies' Quarterback for a Day Fails Nobly

by Milt Dunnell

Winning football games without a quarterback is something like winning baseball games without a bullpen. It just isn't done. So the result of Vanier Cup '88 was known to every Canadian who cared, long before the opening kickoff, which took place beneath the same kind of lowering skies which the immortal Four Horsemen allegedly overcame.

The undefeated Saint Mary's University Huskies, No. 1 in the land, suddenly found themselves like Dan Quayle without George Bush or the Boston Celtics without Larry Bird. Their man, Chris Flynn, sometimes described as the best signal caller east of Notre Dame, was unable to play because of a hairline fracture in his skull.

No one mentioned it at the time, but this situation was enough to cause an ache in the noggin of Bob Torrance, the excellent quarterback for the University of Calgary Dinosaurs, champions of all campuses in the west. Torrance simply couldn't afford to lose. And, of course, he didn't lose but the game was a contest for three quarters, despite the 52-23 numbers which blinked on Varsity Stadium's ancient scoreboard.

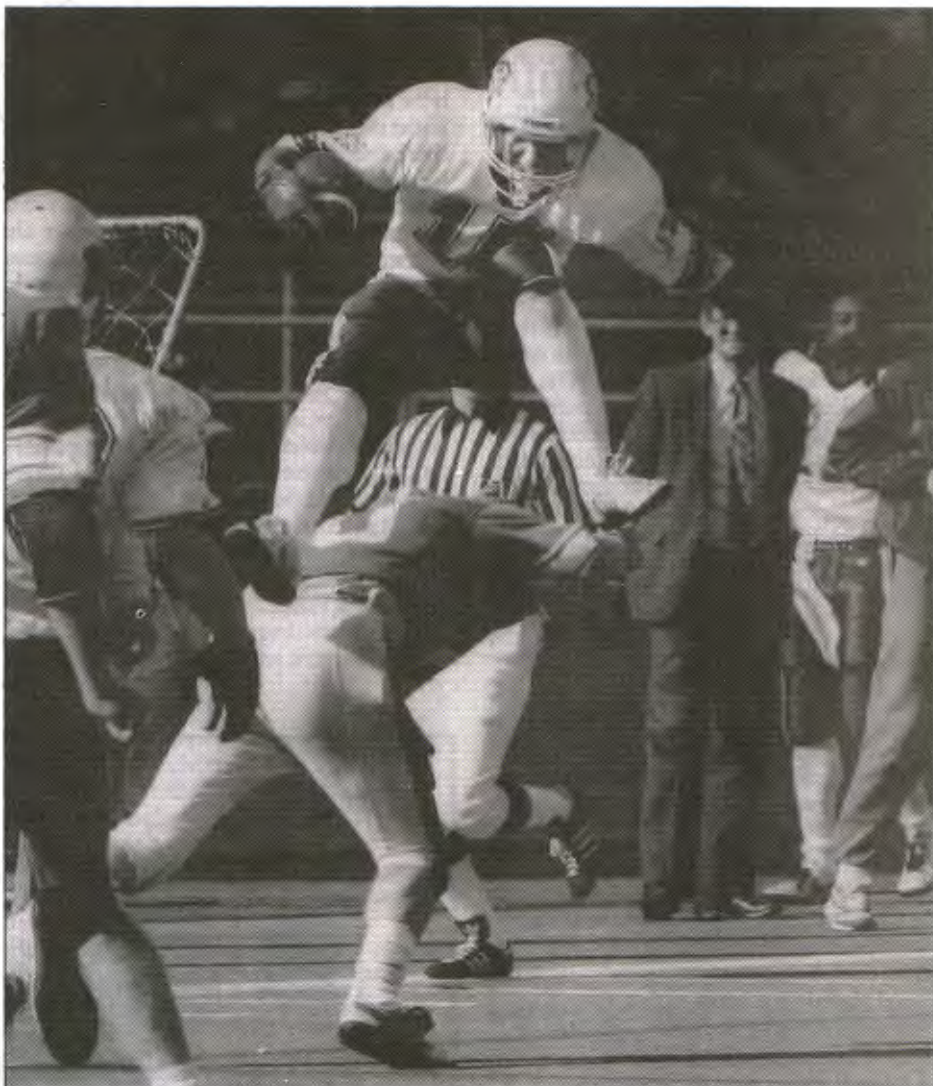

That it became more than a routine shootout was due mostly to Burlington's Bill Scollard, a slotback whose career as a quarterback consisted of one week in training camp and a dozen minutes in a pre-season game. The Huskies already had Chris Flynn at quarterback. They didn't need Bill Scollard at quarterback — until their most important game of the whole year.

A terrible start

For about 14 minutes, you couldn't be sure which side was using the slotback in the wrong place. Torrance, the Calgary quarterback, got away to a terrible start. Four of his first five passes were incomplete and one was intercepted. The fact that he was sacked twice did nothing for his composure.

Scollard, meanwhile, kept nibbling away with short runs and mini-passes that kept the Dinosaurs in their own end of the field. It meant little on the scoreboard — a single point from a missed field goal.

Torrance admitted, after the Dinosaurs had accepted the trophies of victory ("We're No. 1; we're No. 1") that he spent some time in silent contemplation at the half. No, he didn't hum any hymns, as Orel Hersher of the Dodgers might have done. Whatever self-analysis Torrance made became immediately obvious.

Bill Scollard, Offensive MVP in the 1988 Vanier Cup

Torrance, who completed 10 of 22 passes for 198 yards and a couple of touchdowns, was so much in charge during the second half that he took off like Alysheba doing a stretch run in the fourth quarter. This ramble covered 75 yards and was good for a touchdown. He made it sound simple.

"When I called the play," he revealed, "I told myself it was going to be good for 50 yards or nothing. No, I am not a running quarterback. I like to sit in the pocket and pass. In this case, though, I thought that if I sprinted to one side and faked a handoff, I would have only one guy to beat. That's how it worked out."

For Scollard, the outcome was inevitable. That he was able to make it a game for three quarters was in the same league as Donny Lalonde decking Sugar Ray Leonard in a losing cause. Scollard went into the game without conceding anything to the opposition. Somehow, he would make things happen.

It had to happen

Reality finally set in when the Huskies looked to be in position to pull off an upset. It was in the third quarter and the Huskies were trailing by only six points. Scollard, dropping back to pass, slipped and fell. As he was going down, the ball was stripped from him by Cole Nelson and recovered by Ian James. The Dinosaurs were in possession on the Huskies' 15-yard line. On second down, Torrance hit Sean Furlong with a perfect pass in the end zone.

Any hopes the Huskies had evaporated. That didn't mean they quit trying, Scollard, himself, insisted he didn't feel the game out of reach until Dave Heaton picked off one of his passes and raced 75 yards for a touchdown.

WAMBOLDT-WATERFIELD

"If only I hadn't thrown that pass," he lamented, "I still think we might have pulled it off. And it wouldn't have been because of anything I was doing. The guys around me were making it possible."

Scollard was wrong, of course. A guy from the ranks can't go into the pilot house, with a dozen basic plays strapped to his wrist (many of the plays came in by courier) and beat the best of the west — especially when the best of the west are as good as the Dinos.

In a way, it's too bad for the Dinos that Chris Flynn was unable to play. There always will be speculation whether the best of the west could have won if Flynn had been healthy. The answer to that, of course, is that they beat what they had to beat, on the day they had to do it, and they did it handily.

As for Scollard, he takes away from his last college game a sense of satisfaction in that the winners were mouthing praises of the effort he made in mission impossible.

Charitable Donations to Yield Tax Credits

How will the changes to the tax system under the new tax reform proposal affect charitable donations?

Beginning this year, charitable contributions to qualifying organizations will result in a tax credit as opposed to a tax deduction. A tax credit will directly reduce your "tax payable" while the previous tax deduction reduced only your "taxable income."

The first $250 of donations will provide a 17-per-cent Federal Tax Credit. After $250, your donation will produce a 29-per-cent Federal Tax Credit. The same limit of 20 per cent of net income continues to apply.

Don't forget that this will also reduce your federal surtax and provincial tax. The following is an example of how taxes will be reduced by making a $1,000 charitable donation in 1988:

17% credit on first $250	$42.50
29% credit on $750	$217.50
Total federal credits	260.00
Federal surtax reduction (three per cent)	$7.80
N.S. tax reduction (56.5% of $260)	$146.90
Total tax saving	$414.70

Any qualified donation you do not claim can be carried forward for five years, but keep in mind these amounts will still be subject to the 17-per-cent tax credit rate on the first $250.

As previously, either spouse can claim the charitable contributions of both spouses and this will be even more beneficial now since only one "17 per-cent-on-first-$250" amount would be applicable instead of two. Thus, instead of $500 at 17-per-cent credit, you would have just $250 at this rate and the rest at 29 per cent. 🌿

Soccer and Field Hockey Teams Win AUAA Crowns

The Saint Mary's varsity teams have all had exceptional seasons to date; at one time during the fall season standing no lower than second place in any sport. In fact, the combined won-loss record for Saint Mary's teams was an outstanding 30-5-6.

Certainly the exploits of the varsity football team are well known, but the results of the lesser publicized soccer and field hockey teams were also exceptional. The women's field hockey team capped off an exciting season by upsetting the UNB Red Sticks in the AUAA final. The Huskies finished the regular season tied for second with Universite de Moncton and then went on to defeat Moncton in the semi-final. The team was led all season by AUAA all-stars Heather McLean and Heather Andrews.

The men's soccer team picked up where they left off last season leading the East Division with an 8-2-3 record. Unlike last year however the Huskies took home championship honours by defeating Memorial in the AUAA semi-final and St. Francis Xavier in the final.

The next challenge for the Soccer Huskies was the CIAU Finals in Vancouver. After nipping the University of Western Ontario in a quarter-final match the Huskies lost, on penalty kicks, to McGill in semi-final play.

Congratulations to both the Soccer and Field Hockey Huskies on their AUAA championships!

▶ FREE ADMISSION FOR DALHOUSIE AND SAINT MARY'S FULL TIME STUDENTS FOR THE WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 1ST GAMES!

John Morrison, a second year business student at Saint Mary's, has started a rather unique business of his own. For a fee John will flamingo any lawn in Halifax or Dartmouth. With his company, Flamingos At Large, John will plant pink flamingos on your lawn for special occasions such as birthdays and anniversaries. John started the company after seeing something similar in Ottawa.

Saint Mary's Field Hockey Huskies captured the Atlantic Universities women's field hockey title for 1988. SMU players Heather McLean and Heather Andrews were named to the conference all-star team.

Saint Mary's President Dr. Kenneth Ozmon and Nova Scotia Research Foundation Corporation President Thomas Nickerson signed a joint research and development agreement at the university on November 22, 1988. This agreement is designed to foster closer ties between university researchers and private industry in Nova Scotia.

Saint Mary's University and the Pat King Group Limited have joined forces to foster the entrepreneurial spirit among high school and junior high school students in Nova Scotia. They will be awarding $1,500, $1,000 and $750 scholarships to the students who submit the best 3,000 to 5,000 word essays entitled, Why I want to start my own Business. In addition to the scholarships, which are to Saint Mary's University, the students will receive cash prizes.

As the result of a referendum held near the end of the 1987/88 academic year, students at Saint Mary's will donate almost $300,000 to the Capital Campaign over a period of five years.

Saint Mary's Capital Campaign recently topped its $13 million goal and is well on the way to achieving $14 million in pledges and donations. The campaign, which began in 1984, was organized by Don Heleher, director of university advancement, who says, "We really appreciate the tremendous contribution of the many volunteers and University donors who have made this the most successful campaign in the history of the University."

On September 1, 1988 Saint Mary's University joined the ever growing number of institutions which only permit smoking in designated areas.

Ann Cox, athletic therapist at The Tower, was part of the medical team which supported the Canadian Olympic athletes in Seoul.

First year student Robert Hessian is this year's Honorary Chairman of the Metro United Way Campaign. The United Way campaign organizer on campus, Dana Clements, reports that the fundraising goal of $16,500 has been surpassed! The Tower and the Library on campus, with a participation rate of over 70%, are silver plaque award winners in the campaign.

Members of the Saint Mary's Faculty Union ratified a 3-year agreement with the University in October.

University President Dr. Kenneth Ozmon has established a "President's Committee on the Future of the University." This committee will be chaired by Dr. Alan Earp, who has just retired as President of Brock University. Dr. Earp is a former President of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada and has been charged with the specific aim of looking at the future of the University.

The BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra gave the only Halifax concert of its first North American tour in the Theatre Auditorium at Saint Mary's on Saturday, October 15, 1988.

Saint Mary's is taking steps to strengthen its ties with Japan. It is now possible to learn the language on campus from a native Japanese speaker and plans are being laid for a major Canada-Japan Conference in 1990. Kayo Sakai from Sapporo teaches the language to an eager class of 26 students.

Local 269 of the International Longshoremen's Association has instituted a new scholarship. The $1,000 award is meant to help children of longshoremen, and as such, applications will be limited to direct relatives of union members.

The President's Block Party was held on October 9 at the Oaks. Neighbours and University faculty and staff were invited for an afternoon barbeque. This party was held in conjunction with Community Month at Saint Mary's, which is designed to encourage the public to come to campus for lectures, concerts, sporting events, open classes and other special events.

Alumni Scholarship Recipients: Profile

Beverly Zinck, of Sydney, Nova Scotia, was one of this year's two recipients of the Alumni Christian Brothers of Ireland Scholarship. Beverly is a third year Psychology major. After graduation, she plans to go to the University of Waterloo to study for her PhD and then work in clinical or developmental psychology. This award is given to a student with high academic standing in the third year of an Honours program, specializing in a Social Science.

In addition to her courses, Beverly is the president of the Saint Mary's Residence Society and coordinator of the Blood Donor Clinic on campus. She is also involved with the Winter Carnival and the Food Committees.

Beverly's previous awards include an entrance scholarship in 1986, an Achievement Scholarship, and the Sidney C. Oland Scholarship in 1987. She was also awarded an Achievement Scholarship for this year. When she graduated from high school, she received the Terry Fox Humanitarian Award. This award is given to those who exemplify the ideals of Terry Fox and who are active in extracurricular activities, and is renewable for up to four years.

Michael Volpe, of Bedford, Nova Scotia, was one of four recipients of the Alumni Leadership Award. This award recognizes academic achievement and leadership qualities in varsity athletics. Michael is a third year Political Science student, graduating in 1989.

Michael plays for the Hockey Huskies and has twice been invited to the New York Islanders training camp. He spent two years playing in the Ontario Hockey Association, then returned to Saint Mary's last year to finish his degree. He is also a member of the Political Science Society.

He has received a number of scholarships in his three years at Saint Mary's, including the William J. Dalton Memorial Scholarship, an award for high academic standing in Political Science. He is planning to study law after graduation in the spring.

The Alumni Association extends its condolences to the families and friends of the following alumni:

Frank Corcoran, BA'38, died April 15, 1988.

Father Horatio P. Phelan, S. J. died Friday, October 21, 1988 at the Jesuit Infirmary in Pickering, Ontario. Father Phelan entered the Society of Jesus in 1923, studied in Guelph, Ont., in England, in Montreal and Paris. He was ordained in 1935 and took his final vows in 1940. He taught at Saint Mary's, Halifax (1941-42), Regis College, Toronto and at Loyola College, Montreal.

Aidan Hennebury, BA'69, died this past summer in St. John's, Newfoundland, at age 41. Born in St. John's, Mr. Hennebury attended St. Bonaventure's College, Saint Mary's University and Dalhousie University, where he received a degree in law and was admitted to the bar in 1972. A senior member in the St. John's law firm of Martin, Whalen, Hennebury and Stamp, Aidan was an active and very respected member of his community. He sat on the board of directors of the Canadian Commercial Corporation, was a Fourth Degree member of the Knights of Columbus and served as a vice-president of the Liberal Party of Canada. Mr. Hennebury is survived by his wife Isabelle, a daughter, Beth 13, and a son, Mark, 10.

Ed Williams, BA'28, died this past summer in Ontario. Mr. Williams was a strong booster of Saint Mary's and took part in alumni events in Toronto until he became ill.

Douglas F. Dunlop, BED'65, MA'67, died August 1, 1988.

Harold J. Dyer, BComm'38, died Wednesday, October 19, 1988. Mr. Dyer was a veteran of the Second World War, serving with the Halifax Rifles and later as a landing officer for the 23rd Armoured Corps on D-day. After the war, Harold was employed with the Mersey Paper Company in Liverpool for thirty-five years as an accountant. He was a member of the Royal Canadian Legion, the Liverpool Kiwanis Club, the Liverpool Golf and Country Club and served on both the Queens District School Board and the Liverpool Town School Board.

Margaret MacLeod, BA'73, died this past year in Halifax.

Reverend Joseph Mills, BA'37, died Thursday, July 28, 1988 in the Halifax Infirmary, at age 71. Father Mills was ordained to the priesthood in 1941, and appointed to St. Mary's Basilica. He was widely known and respected for the many contributions he made to the communities he served over the years. He spent a great deal of time and effort working with the poor and disadvantaged. He will be remembered especially for his work to establish Hope Cottage. He will also be remembered fondly for his development of the men's and boys choir at the Basilica, which was famous throughout the region. He retired as a Pastor in 1987 to become the chaplain at St. Vincent's Guest House.

THE worldly CANADIAN

It is a fact that we Canadians are born travellers. It is equally true that, as one of these worldly Canadians, we fly to more places in this country than any other airline. What's more, we are the only Canadian airline to serve five continents — North America, South America, Europe, Asia and Australia. We even serve the South Pacific.

In fact, when all is said and done, it comes down to this. Every day, somewhere in the world, there is a Canadian leading the way. A spirited, worldly Canadian.

When you want the true Canadian spirit, call your Travel Agent or Canadian Airlines International.

The spirit takes wing.
