Alumni President's Message

By the time you receive this issue of the Maroon & White we will be at the end of the Fall Season and the Fall Semester. I have always enjoyed the Fall Semester at the University the turning leaves, the clashing of football helmets, and particularly the energy of the students as they embark on a new academic year. After the first few weeks of the semester, the student's enthusiasm turns to resolve with midterms and assignments taking their priority. As you read this magazine late in November or early December, the students of Saint Mary's are preparing for their exams, just as you would have in your time as a Saint Mary's student.

Many things have changed at Saint Mary's since we attended the University, but the enduring attributes of the University continue. High academic standards, the belief in ascribing to the highest level of ethics, and the belief in doing the best in whatever You do. The latter is of course The University's motto Age Quod Agis... I relate to the University motto because it is something you can practice every day and it has a level of substance that marketing slogans and management fads cannot attain. Today, to the best of my ability, I will be the best parent, best businessperson, doing well whatever I do. The belief and practice of doing the best you can in whatever you do, along with the tradition and history of Saint Mary's makes it distinctive — and special.

Many Canadian Alumni are probably aware of the recent Macleans Annual survey on universities that again show Saint Mary's with a respectable placement. But yet many of you no doubt wonder about why the results aren't better. Measurements such as books per student and number of tenured faculty teaching freshmen classes tend to negatively our results. I am not making a plea for more funds from the Alumni, I am underscoring the fact that Saint Mary's receives the lowest funding per student in Canada. Being underfunded compared to other Universities does make the playing field unlevel when it comes to rankings such as Macleans. on the other hand, it is obvious that both taxpayers and students receive excellent value for their investment in Saint Mary's. The next big challenge for Saint Mary's, and particularly its students, is to receive a fair funding per student. How Saint Mary's receives the lowest funding per student in Canada is a larger issue than I have room to deal with in this column. The present system does not serve the students or taxpayers, given that it funds Universities with a historical base grant, without incentive to either students or taxpayers to realize savings. The government is clearly in a leadership position to bring a more fair and equitable solution into play for the benefit of all students, regardless of their university, as well as taxpayers. Your Alumni Association are keenly aware and interested in a fair resolution of this issue.

The addition of the new Business School will further enhance the University's ability to provide excellence in education. The faculties of Commerce, Arts, Science and Engineering will benefit from the addition of the physical space.

The values that the University promotes have served us well through the years. Saint Mary's ability to provide excellence in education is proven. The fact that Saint Mary's is able to provide the service that it does while receiving the lowest funding per student in Canada is nothing less than remarkable. Just imagine what could be achieved if Saint Mary's received equitable funding!

Wishing you all the best of the Holiday Season

"Saint Mary's gave me the start of a good life," says Randy Delaney, (BA '36, BComm '38). Here he is seen seated, with his wife of 53 years, Marguerite, their son John, (BA '64) and his daughter Erin who is in her second year of an Arts degree.

OLDEST COMMERCE GRADUATE IN METRO

by Renee Field

Sixty years ago, Saint Mary's University was a very different place. The Irish Christian Brothers were the administrators and only a few hundred people attended the then all-boys college, compared with over 8,000 men and women today. Over the years much has changed and grown within and beyond the campus, but the original foundation that established the University has remained the same—providing quality education to students.

"Saint Mary's gave me the start of a good life," says Randy Delaney, 83, who graduated with a Bachelor of Arts in 1936 and a Bachelor of Commerce degree, two years later. Going to the college was a natural extension for Delaney, who completed high school at Saint Mary's, then located on Windsor Street in Halifax. In the early 1930's, only a handful of men decided to study business, and Delaney seized the opportunity to be one of them.

In 1934, Saint Mary's College was among the first of its kind in Canada to establish a Faculty of Commerce program. Brother William Cornelia, F.S.C.H., president from 1931-1937, saw the establishment of the Commerce program just before he returned to Ireland.

"Experienced commercial men may today have a slight advantage over the college trained man but time will eliminate this, and then the benefits of a college education will be realized," wrote an anonymous student in the Saint Mary's yearbook, The Collegian of 1933. Years later his words seemed to be a prophecy of higher education's new role in the business field.

Delaney looked upon furthering his education as a means to help him in the workplace. "Dekker" as he was nicknamed on campus, decided to continue his studies after his first degree. With his parents living in Halifax, he was considered a day student. He did not miss out on college life. In fact, in many instances he was in the middle of it. Laughing, he recalls how he used to play the piano in the college gym for the old silent movies.

"He was a great fellow to work for and he played a very fine organ, too. We had some good times, back in those days," says Jack Greenough (BA'59/BComm'60), district six councillor and Deputy Mayor of the new Halifax Regional Municipality, who used to sing while Delaney played the organ.

Education and music went hand in hand for Delaney. Besides playing the piano in the College orchestra, he played the organ and the clarinet for graduations and weddings. Delaney was also one of the pioneers in the establishment of the Saint Mary's Journal, the student newspaper, which was published for the first time in 1936. For 25 years he was a band member in the St. Patrick's Concert Band. With World War II well underway the band often entertained the troops stationed in Halifax. Playing in the band was where he met Marguerite, 75, his wife of 53 years. She belonged to the St. Patrick's Social Club and used to sing and dance as part of the show they performed for the troops.

After graduation Delaney worked for the Royal Dockyard until he was conscripted into the army. Making the rank of Sergeant, he served with the Central Ordinance Department and just before the war was over his name came up to go overseas. Luckily, the war ended before the orders could be followed. After the army, they moved to the United States. For five years he worked in Boston, Massachusetts. "After a while it was a rat race. When my mother started to get sick, we decided to come home," says Marguerite. Back home, Delaney took a job working for the provincial government's Department of Labor, where he worked for 20 years, while Marguerite worked for 12 years with the federal government. On the day Delaney retired they went on a whirlwind tour of Europe.

Pointing to a 1947 photograph Delaney says, "There's only five of us left that played for the St. Pat's band." It's not hard to spot Delaney in the photo; back row, handsome in his youth, he is the one grinning ear to ear. That same 30-year-old smile, lit up his face when he was recently asked to participate, as the oldest Commerce graduate, at Saint Mary's recent sod turning for The Frank H. Sobey Faculty of Commerce building.

"That's going to be great and very different from when I went to Saint Mary's," says Delaney. That sentiment was echoed by Delaney's son, John, 52, who also graduated from Saint Mary's University with a Bachelor of Arts in 1964. "Going to Saint Mary's was just a natural progression from the high school. The Jesuits were a little stricter, but they were fair," says John.

"It (the University) has expanded, but it has maintained that type of family atmosphere. It may be a big school but it's a small school at the same time," says John. When he studied at Saint Mary's, tuition was close to $400 and all the classrooms were contained in the McNally building.

Things certainly have expanded, but "It's a family school," echoes Erin Delaney, 19, John's daughter, who is in her second year of an Arts degree. "They have the best Irish studies program in the region and I wouldn't go to another school," she says, Today, with a third generation of Delaneys walking the halls of the University, Randy is kept up-to-date on what's happening at his alma mater. Erin's sister, Katie, 21, who has a few credits left to complete in her Arts degree is taking a break from studying and much like her grandparents before her she is making her journey across England and Europe.

PRESIDENT'S MEDAL

Dr. Terry Wagar, Management Department, Saint Mary's University, received the President's Medal for Research Excellence at this year's October convocation. His line of research is examining workforce reduction and wrongful dismissal.

Workforce reduction and wrongful dismissal are hot topics these days as more and more companies downsize and restructure in an attempt to improve the bottom line. What are the factors that influence a positive workforce restructuring? What are the implications if employers dismiss workers without having just cause?

The answers to both of these questions are being investigated by Dr. Terry Wagar, Management Department, whose specialty is examining wrongful dismissal, workforce reduction/restructuring, and human resource/labor relations systems. His line of research touches on almost every aspect of the labor climate today.

This year, in recognition of Dr. Wagar's outstanding research, he received the President's Medal for Research Excellence. His work has been published in a number of important journals including Canadian Business Economics, Journal of Labor Research, Relations Industrielles and Human Resource Management Journal, Work Place News, Human Resources Professional and Lawyer's Weekly. He is also referenced in newspapers such as The Chronicle Herald/Mail Star, The Toronto Star and The Globe and Mail.

Currently, he is working on compiling data from three different lines of research. His wrongful dismissal research involves examining more than 1,200 legal cases across the country from 1980 to the present. Factors affecting the determination of just cause were tackled by content analyzing the cases, inputting the data into a computer and running a number of statistical models.

"In Canada, the termination of a nonunion employee in the absence of just cause or reasonable notice constitutes a wrongful dismissal and the former employee is entitled to sue the employer for damages flowing from the discharge," wrote Dr. Wagar, in "Determinants of Just Cause and Reasonable Notice in the Dismissal of Nonunion Employees," which recently appeared in Canadian Business Economics. "However, employer perceptions of just cause frequently differ from the standards employed by the courts." With the increasing number of workers suing previous employers over this notice, Dr. Wagar was interested in the type of awards granted by the courts. His findings revealed that the courts were more likely to find just cause for dismissal if the former employee had a blemished work record. Currently, Dr. Wagar is working on developing a computer software program that would predict court awards concerning wrongful dismissal.

The issue of workforce reduction/restructuring is being tracked over time. He recently finished surveying a number of Atlantic Canadian organizations, 1,500 labor unions, and 1,500 other major organizations across the country. He is measuring what has happened in recent years and what has changed. "I'm really trying to look at when downsizing works. A lot of downsizing efforts have failed to meet organizational goals but some have been highly successful. According to Dr. Wagar, a key issue is "What factors distinguish successful and unsuccessful workforce restructuring efforts."

In June, 1996, Dr. Wagar published some of his findings in an article entitled "What Do We Know About Downsizing." His findings highlighted the importance of a commitment to job security for "surviving" employees. Organizations with a more positive relationship with employees, an ideology based on progressive decision-making, and a culture focused on human resources, along with an entrepreneurial spirit, continued commitment to training, investment in new technology, and a quality management focus were important factors in enhancing organizational performance among downsized firms.

Examining human resource/labor relations systems is a natural extension to Dr. Wagar's previous research. To date, he has collected data from more than 3,000 Canadian companies, 1,800 labor unions, and organizations in Australia and New Zealand. "Any single human resource practice, on its own, is not enough. Organizations need to have appropriate "bundles" of human resource practices if they want to markedly affect performance," says Dr. Wagar.

Dr. Wagar has been with the university for eight years. His research continues to attract a lot of interest from government policy makers, labor unions and organizations in Canada, the United States and abroad.

NEW FACULTY OF COMMERCE BUILDING TAKING SHAPE

A new building to house Atlantic Canada's leading business school is quietly taking shape with the direction of a committee of faculty, students, administrators and members of the University's Board of Governors.

The committee was established immediately following the announcement of $6 million from the government of Nova Scotia. The funding along with the government's commitment to the leadership role of business education for The Frank Sobey Faculty of Commerce was announced at a news conference in June, 1996. "The evolution of the building plans is exciting," says Dr. Paul Dixon, Acting Dean of Commerce. "The new facility will be built with the needs of our faculty, students and professionals in the business community in mind."

This will require the right mix of space and technology and the development of a dynamic learning and research environment. Dr. Cathy Driscoll, Management Department and a committee member expects the new building to reflect the changing dynamics of teaching and learning. "Effective business education programs are finding ways to integrate across faculty and program disciplines and to promote active student involvement in the learning process," says Driscoll. "One design implication will be to include small team break out rooms to be used for business simulations, negotiation exercises, case discussions and other problem-solving based activities."

The Tower, one of the most popular and modern fitness facilities in Atlantic Canada, was the last new construction project on the Saint Mary's campus. It was built in the mid-1980's. The consultation and discussions with neighbors, along with a well thought out construction plan, resulted in minimal disruption to campus and neighbors. "This same approach will be followed in construction of a new building to house The Frank H. Sobey Faculty of Commerce," says Michael Zatzman, Chair of both the University's Property and Development Committee and the Business School Project Committee.

The overall plan and design, of the as yet unnamed building, which will house the Commerce Faculty will be the result of extensive discussions involving faculty, students and members of the Board of Governors. Others on the committee include Board members Donald Lohnes and Lauchie McKenzie. Administrators include Guy Noël, Vice-President Administration, Louis Dursi, Director, Physical Plant and Ron Cochrane, University Comptroller.

Another committee member, Dr. David Gray, Finance and Management Science Department, is excited about the mix of technology and teaching, which will form the backbone of the new building. "There will be better integration of technology in our new classrooms," says Dr. Gray. "Technology, both current and emerging is a big part of how business is conducted around the globe. Now it will be a big part of what we teach to our students. It will provide them with a competitive edge and will distinguish them to employers when they graduate with a Saint Mary's degree."

"Another important consideration is how students will learn," says Joseph Richards, President, Harold Beazley Commerce Society and a student member of the Business School committee. "Classroom dynamics play a vital role in how students can learn and with most students more attuned to new technology, videos and fast paced presentations, a student's overview during the planning stages will help the University make decisions concerning the building which will positively impact on the learning experience of students at Atlantic Canada's leading business school," he says.

The faculties of Science and Arts will also benefit from the new construction will free office and meeting space. The University has suffered through a period of one of the lowest space per student ratios in the region.

The committee meets regularly to work out details of the new $18 million investment. The sod turning ceremony was held October 16, 1996 and many alumni, students, and government officials including John Savage, Premier, Nova Scotia, and Mary Clancy, Member of Parliament, were on hand to show their support for Saint Mary's new business school.

SAINT MARY'S EMBA GRADUATES...

AT THE FOREFRONT OF THE HEALTHCARE INDUSTRY

by Marilyn Pincock

Two Saint Mary's Executive MBA alumni have enjoyed considerable attention in recent months. Linda Weaver and Dorothy Spence, co-founders of TecKnowledge Healthcare Systems Inc., have earned rave reviews for their work in the rapidly emerging field of telemedicine. Over the past 18 months, the company has successfully marketed its telemedicine technology, which has been quickly embraced by the medical community, in Nova Scotia and outside the region.

Weaver and Spence met during their engineering days at the Technical University of Nova Scotia (TUNS). Weaver pursued electrical engineering while Spence concentrated on mechanical engineering. After graduation from TUNS, the would-be entrepreneurs worked together at the Nova Scotia Association of Health Organizations (NSAHO) maintaining medical equipment. Spence eventually moved into sales in the medical gas industry while Weaver pursued the defence electronics industry. In 1993, the two were reunited while attending the Saint Mary's Executive MBA program.

Spence explains the role the Saint Mary's EMBA played in their newest venture. "Because the classes are small, it becomes a very tight-knit group. The networking opportunities are incredible through the program — your classmates are employed in diverse fields and it is a very encouraging and supportive environment."

Weaver and Spence started a consulting firm after Weaver's first year of the EMBA Program. As a result, much of their EMBA project work focused on their business... planning, executing, succeeding. During a workshop about strategic planning, given by Jim Moir, President and CEO of Maritime Medical Care, Spence took him at his word when he invited students to contact him. TecKnowledge and Maritime Medical Care recently teamed up to further develop the firm's telemedicine products.

Weaver explains how telemedicine successfully addresses the problem of accessible healthcare. "It gives medical personnel the ability to transfer crucial patient information instantaneously over telephone lines. Using video conferencing with computers, doctors miles away or continents apart can consult and compare x-rays, ultrasound test results and photo images of patient injuries in virtual reality."

In a time of healthcare reform and cost cutting measures, the applications for this technology are numerous and wide ranging. While telemedicine is already popular in the United States, Nova Scotia is the first Canadian province to use it on a widespread basis. The system allows specialists to diagnose patients in rural or remote communities, eliminating unnecessary travel time and expenses for patients and their families.

Maritime Medical Care's President and CEO, Jim Moir, explains his company's involvement in TecKnowledge. "The TecKnowledge partnership is an ideal fit for us. We are committed to the development of healthcare technology and all its emerging applications for the benefit of the region. The talent and vision Weaver and Spence bring will be a real asset to Maritime Medical Care as we work together to further develop the technology and market it nationally and internationally."

Spence, who handles marketing for TecKnowledge, explains "Our company has grown incredibly fast, and response from the market indicates that we have to grow even faster. It's an ideal business problem, but how do you solve it?"

TecKnowledge needed growth infrastructure, the ability to access resources as required to handle large contracts but were not in a position to have these resources continuously on payroll. "Maritime Medical Care's Information Systems professionals are experienced in physician billings and the use of online processing technology. As we go forward in developing telemedicine applications, we will have access to these human resources skills, as well as access to capital and more traditional business support," Spence says.

Weaver and Spence are definitely entrepreneurs on the rise. As they advance telemedicine's applications in the healthcare industry, their prominence in the Atlantic business community will be assured.

WE'RE GROWING

There is a national concern about University enrolments. Increased competition from specialty, a greater role for community and technical schools, aggressive recruiting by other universities and a smaller pool of prospective students, have seen enrolments decline at many post-secondary universities. Students have become far more selective and smarter in choosing their university.

Saint Mary's is running counter to the national trend. New student enrolment this academic year has increased, particularly in The Frank H Sobey Faculty of Commerce, Atlantic Canada's leading business school. New student enrolment in the Faculty of Arts, the largest in Nova Scotia and larger than our Commerce faculty, is also above last year's levels, and course registration in the Faculty of Science has increased. As students continue to "vote with their feet," for Saint Mary's, it is a further indication of the reputation of Saint Mary's which lead to Maclean's reporting of Saint Mary's in the 1995 national ranking of our University as BEST OVERALL, LEADER OF TOMORROW, HIGHEST QUALITY and MOST INNOVATIVE.

Alumni Golf TOURNAMENT

Huskies Alumni Scramble for Scholarships and Fun!

Dan Stone, Director of Personnel at Saint Mary's with the prize for a hole in one on the fifth hole, a Ford Explorer, he didn't win!

The 1996 Saint Mary's University Alumni Golf Tournament enjoyed its first sell-out in its 20 year history. More than 170 alumni and guests enjoyed the hospitality of Oakfield golf professional Gordie Smith on August 29th at the Oakfield Golf and Country Club. The Tournament saw a few great golf shots, a well dressed team and an incredibly honest team in addition to a wonderful opportunity for former classmates to reminisce and strike the ball at one of the best golf courses in Nova Scotia. The mid-day rain drops gave way to a sunny and hot summer's day with osprey and airliners overhead in a clear blue sky.

The 1996 Kelly Brothers Championship Trophy will rest on the mantle of Don Sollows and his team for the next year. The net 53 score gave Sollows (BComm'87), Mike MacLean (BComm'85), Bill Ryan (BComm'85), John Martin (BSc'85) and Al Forsey (BComm'89), the coveted Trophy.

While a scramble golf tournament can challenge some people, for others such as the strongly maroon and white golf corps, it was the chance to catch up on Saint Mary's University and particularly the endorsement by the Government of Nova Scotia of the Consortium model for Halifax universities. The Consortium, which will see more flexibility and choices for students as well as a streamlining of administrative and some academic functions and departments, grew out of President Kenneth L. Ozmon's NEW BEGINNINGS proposal in November 1994. The result has been a nationally heralded model of post secondary education and a leadership role for The Frank H. Sobey Faculty of Commerce at Saint Mary's and the construction of a new $18 million dollar business school. (Sod turning ceremonies are planned for October 16, 1996). The province has committed $6 million of the total cost and the Building on Strength Capital Campaign, chaired by David Sobey has raised another substantial portion of the cost of the high tech, state-of-the-art business school.

The Alumni Golf Tournament also gave varsity coaches time to talk about their plans for the coming seasons. All teams recruited well to bolster an already impressive group of student-athletes. The varsity baseball team won considerable support from the Alumni at the Tournament as they raised funds to support the team which plays in the Canadian University baseball league. It is a new sport for the University but it has already attracted national attention. A special draw, spearheaded by Alumni Association President John Sullivan (BComm'83) was instrumental in raising money for team uniforms.

The Women's basketball team challenged golfers and their accuracy at the putting green near the #1 hole. The basketball team walked away the winner thanks to the generous support of the 170 plus golfers. Nearly $1500 was raised specifically for the student-athletes at Saint Mary's.

The Pre-Tournament reception at The Tower, saw Annalie Vandenberg (BComm'85) win a set of PING graphite clubs and the next day win a closest-to-the-pin contest. She nearly won the women's longest drive but missed the "hat trick" when a drive by Tracy Clinch (BA' 94, BEd'95) rolled by Annelie's shot.

The 1997 Saint Mary's Alumni golf tournament which will be held next August 28th at Oakfield will feature a shotgun start. "The success of this Tournament means a change in the format and so we'll have everyone begin at the same time," says Alumni Association President Sullivan. "We will also be able to provide direct shuttle service between the golf course and Saint Mary's University."

Golf is a game of integrity. The epitome of integrity could be the team of Ellen Farrell (MBA'88), Amy Boutilier (MEd'95), Allison Edwards (MBA'90), Wendy Ellacott (BComm'96) and Brent Locke (a last minute substitute for Virginia Jackson (Assc'96), which won the Most Honest Team Award for the second consecutive year. There is already talk of a "three-peat."

(by Chuck Bridges (MBA'92), Director, Public Affairs, Saint Mary's University, who according to Gordie Smith, shows "potential" in scramble formats.)

Homecoming '96

Letters of Thanks from Class '46

Dear Barry,

As a member of the Class of '46, I want to thank Saint Mary's for the most pleasant luncheon they arranged for us on Friday last.

Because of Dr. Ozmon's understandable time constraint it was not possible for him to meet all the members in attendance which I personally regret, however I particularly enjoyed his most interesting remarks on the status of the University, its graduates and most importantly the inadequacy of the existing government funding vis-a-vis other Nova Scotia universities.

To you and your Alumni Office associates, I also extend thanks for your contribution to a very pleasant event - my wife also joins me in this expression. I would be remiss if I did not note how much my wife and I enjoyed our "table conversations".

Our warmest regards,

Sincerely,
Bill Phillips, DipEng'46

Dear Mr. Gallant,

I'd like to take this opportunity to thank you and your committee by inviting me to the Homecoming '96 celebrations held last weekend. The luncheon hosted by President Dr. Kenneth Ozmon and Mrs. Ozmon was a particular enjoyable occasion which enabled us to renew some old acquaintances from other times. The reception and the University Hall of Fame Induction Ceremony among other events were also very enjoyable. I would appreciate if you would extend my appreciation and thanks to all who might have participated in some way in making this weekend a most memorable and pleasant experience.

Yours truly,

Sydney R. Vaughan, BComm'46

ITS: A new kind of Information Technology Program

by Susan Corning, Division of Continuing Education

For alumni and others who are searching for the latest and challenging edge in information technology, the Division of Continuing Education has a new program.

The certificate in Information Technology Solutions (ITS), offered at Saint Mary's University allows people in non-computer industry jobs to gain an edge in today's job market. In contrast to other programs that offer information technology training for a career change, ITS is aimed at people who simply want to take charge of the computer technology around them to make their own work more efficient, and often more interesting.

Jobs where computer technology is becoming more prominent don't belong to any one sector, says ITS curriculum advisor Carol Horner. "You're just as likely to find computer terminals at a nursing station as in a research lab or business office."

The first ITS classes started this past September with students whose backgrounds range from science and research to business. Some have years of work experience, others have very little. But they share a common tie of having an interest in computer technology and a desire to add that interest to their work.

Scott Kaiser (BComm '96) is one alumnus in the program. Scott graduated with a major in Finance this spring. Breaking into the finance field is tough, he says, especially if you want to stay around here. He saw the ITS program as a way to gain a new set of skills to help him be more employable.

"I did want to do something with computers," he says, "but I really wanted to stick with finance. Other courses have been expensive and they take a long time. ITS is only four months."

In addition to extensive computer training, ITS challenges students with a "problem-based learning" (PBL) approach. The PBL approach develops the student's ability to analyse problems, to think critically and effectively search for and utilize the knowledge to solve those problems.

"It's all about analysing the situation, and finding and using the appropriate resources to come to a defensible solution," says Horner.

Besides extensive computer training and problem solving, ITS contains a component which considers ethical and legal issues related to the use of this technology.

Issues such as data security and confidentiality, piracy and plagiarism are some of the areas covered during the course modules. Students learn about their responsibility to act in an ethical and legal manner when working with computer and information technology.

The ITS program consists of a 42-hour foundation course and eight 20-hour modules covering Troubleshooting, Operating Systems, Introduction to Local Area Networks & Computer Security, Internet Technologies, Managing Information Systems, Database Management Systems, Introduction to Programming and Desktop Publishing.

The next ITS program starts in mid-January. The program runs for 14 weeks during the day, with some evening classes for those interested in taking the program part-time.

Anyone interested in the ITS program can contact the Division of Continuing Education at 883 Robie Street, or by calling 420-5492.

Thank You Alumni

"Alumni support is a financial way of showing love - the greatest motivation for giving."

The 1995/96 Annual Fund raised over $427,000. $171,000 of this was realized through a new initiative, the U96 House lottery. The lottery was for a very worthy project, supporting students with disabilities and athletic leadership awards. The support from the SMU community was overwhelming - thank you alumni and friends of the University. Your donations make a difference.

We would like to thank Dr. Kenneth L. Ozmon for once again chairing the Parents' Appeal. Special thanks to Dr. Michael J. Larsen, Dean of Arts and Acting Dean of Education, Dr. David Richardson, Dean of Science, and Dr. Scott Carson, Former Dean of Commerce for chairing their respective Faculty solicitations.

The donor report for the Building on Strength Campaign will be published at the conclusion of the campaign.

Saint Mary's University would like to thank the following alumni, parents, and friends for their support to the 1995/96 Annual Fund.

Note: Capital Campaign donors are not included in this report.

Sport Hall of Fame 1996 Inductees

Robert (Bob) Lahey

A native of Portland, Maine, Bob Lahey came to Saint Mary's in the fall of 1958 to begin a student/athletic career that would establish him as one of the most productive people in the history of the University. A fine student and keen athletic competitor, Bob went on to accomplish national recognition by virtually re-writing the CIAU basketball records standing at the time. One of his most memorable achievements was setting a single game scoring record of 60 points. His consummate skills and surpassing dedication earned him the honor of being named top basketball player in the country by the Canadian Intercollegiate news. After a distinguished career as athletic director at Old Town Main High School from 1972 until his death in 1994, Bob Lahey left a legacy of performance in life that will remain deeply rooted at Saint Mary's University.

Father Michael O'Donnell, S.J.

The great athletic successes of Saint Mary's University athletes and teams over the last 30 years can be directly traced to the early inspirations and dedication of Father Michael (Buck) O'Donnell, the legendary padre of many hats within the school structure. Father O'Donnell served as Professor of English, Latin and Theology, Dean of Men, Alumni Moderator, and closest perhaps to his heart as Director of Athletics. He presided over what was initially a mostly intramural program and directed its growth into one of the strongest university athletic powers in the nation. He believed implicitly in the correlation of fine athletes and good students which has become the hallmark of Saint Mary's successes in both areas of life. Under Father O'Donnell's direction, the athletic program developed correspondingly with the growth and development of the University.

1973 Saint Mary's Basketball Huskies

Saint Mary's can boast of many athletic successes over the last quarter century, but none more historic, exciting or dramatic as that of the 1972-73 national basketball championship Huskies. That's because this team, under young coach Brian Heaney, wasn't regarded as a factor in the CIAU pre-season estimates, but rather a collection of eager but inexperienced players destined for development status.

But the Huskies broke from the gate quickly that season, compiled a 7-1 record by Xmas break, then won 15 of their last 17 games for a season total of 22 wins. In their final 11 games, the Huskies averaged an incredible 86.3 points a game. During that stretch, they upset Acadia Axemen as AUAA conference champions, hocked off Windsor Lancers 91-84 in CIAU semi-final overtime, then defeated Lakehead U of Thunder Bay 79-67 to give Saint Mary's its first-ever national men's basketball crown.

An incredible accomplishment for coach Heaney, players Mickey Fox, Don Gallagher, John Gallinaugh, Peter Halpin, Bob Taboski, Lee Thomas, Brian Burgess, Art Waters, Otha Johnson, Fred Perry, Greig Redding, and manager John Landry.

Sports Trivia

(compliments of Wayne D. O'Brien, BA'67)

Did you know that in 1964 the Huskies lost to St. Francis Xavier at Saint Mary's for our only loss. The Huskies won 9-8 in Antigonish to break "X's" 47 game winning streak. The league voted the Huskies into the 1964 Atlantic Bowl (protested heavily by X) where Saint Mary's beat McMaster 15-1.

A Level Playing Field

Sailing the perfect sport for Haligonian Tingley

by Andrea Nemetz, Herald Sports
(courtesy: Halifax Herald & Mail Star)

Sailing is taking on Mother Nature, says Paul Tingley, BComm'93.

"The playing field is always changing you have to be sensitive to changes in the environment and it requires constant attention. It tests both your mind and your body."

And it's a perfect sport for people with disabilities, explained Tingley, a paraplegic.

"It levels the playing field in single-handed sailing, if the controls are set up properly before he was paralyzed in a skiing accident in Vancouver in December 1994.

In June 1995, he went out on the water with SailAble, the disabled sailing association in Nova Scotia.

Once or twice a week he and someone from the organization would head out to Shearwater Yacht Club and take out the Freedom Independence, a 21-foot boat designed for people with disabilities.

Usually sailed by two, the boat's cleats and other essential equipment are easily accessible and counterweight seats allow the skipper and crew to move from side to side.

"It's also designed not to capsize and to be self-righting," Tingley said.

Last season was an introduction. This season the Saint Mary's commerce grad is the teacher showing friends the ropes.

His racing career began in May of 1996 when skipper Darlene Jackman and Judy Simms asked him to be the jib-setter on the province's entry to the Paralympic Trials.

"It was a new experience for all of us . . . as a team we learned the whole time we were there. And it was fun to race competitively and see how the different parts of the team meshed."

From there it was on to the Mobility Cup at the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club in late June.

Thirty-two competitors from across North America raced in Sunbirds and Martin 16s single-handed sailboats designed for people with disabilities.

"It was a good environment, great weather, superb sailing. And there was an opportunity to compete with others at the same level. Because the Mobility Cup is designed to increase participation there are lots of beginners."

Tingley, who had never sailed single-handedly before, enjoyed skippering.

"I liked being responsible for the boat. I'd done a lot of reading, but had no experience skippering myself. I got to apply some of the principles of racing and I finished 17th of 32."

Though he was content with the finish he said his placing isn't all that important.

"To be sailing, racing competitively, as long as I put my personal best in the race, that's what's important. I can't control the rest of the field."

And the sport allows him to travel and meet people.

One of the people he met in Vancouver was Dave Whalen of New York, who invited Tingley to sail with him at the 10th annual Shake-A-Leg Regatta in Newport, R.I. which Tingley described as his most rewarding regatta to date.

"It was more competitive with better sailors and I had to rise to the occasion."

Sailing with one partner for the first two days in a Freedom Independence, he finished last. Then teaming up with Whalen he finished one-two, for fifth overall out of 10.

And he rode out his first hurricane.

"We were on a downwind leg to the leeward mark. As all the boats rounded the mark, the wind picked up to 80 miles an hour and blew the boats over."

Though his boat didn't tip other racers around him were in the water and his jib ripped in two.

That didn't shake the novice racer.

"We just took it down and booted it back to the dock."

The racing season was one of non-stop learning.

"With sailing there's so much to learn you never learn it all. It's a humbling sport, no two races are the same."

And he said the more knowledge he gains, the more he likes the sport.

Tingley is already planning on entering the Freedom Independence U.S. nationals in Florida in February and next year's Mobility Cup in Victoria.

Eventually he'd like to own his own boat, as well as increase the participation in disabled sailing, and raise funds for more boats and high-level instruction.

"I plan to continue to race on the international disabled scene for a long time," he concluded with a grin.

Ottawa Branch Alumni Golf Tournament

Irish Hills, Carp, Ontario, was again the scene for the annual Golf Tournament on September 4th. The weather was hot and sunny (a first) and the attitudes were optimistic. Several groups of golfers got away at ten o'clock and reunited after at a near by English pub, The Cheshire Cat. After a round of curried chicken, bangers-n-mash, sandwiches and local draught, prizes were presented as follows: Michael Lahey - low gross (recipient of a putter donated by Solutions Corp and a sports bag from Canada Post Priority Courier). Jim Lovett (Branch President) and Ted Hoganson (Past President 1992) - tied for second (each received a dozen golf balls compliments of Canada Post Direct Marketing), and Lawrence Lahey - most honest golfer (golf balls from Canada Post Redirection Services).

Our winners and some others all received golf shirts provided by the Saint Mary's Alumni office, these were very well received and appreciated. The day was a great success as Paul Lynch, Tournament Chairman, wound up the gathering acknowledging the contributors for their prizes and encouraging the golfers to join the Alumni Branch at the next gathering prior to Christmas. Reverend Ross Peter Legere, BA'69, died unexpectedly in Toronto after a brief illness, on September 8, 1996. At the time of his death, he was on staff at St. Patrick's Secondary School in Toronto, serving as chaplain and teaching English and Religion. He ministered on weekends in two local Toronto parishes, Corpus Christi and Holy Name. He was on leave from the Archdiocese of Halifax.

Ordained in 1973 at St. Joseph's Church in Halifax by Most Reverend James M. Hayes, Father Legere served as assistant at St. Peter's and St. Thomas More in Dartmouth, and at St. Michael's, St. Catherine's and St. Agnes, Halifax. He was pastor at St. John the Evangelist in Windsor and St. Andrew's, Eastern Passage. He graduated from St. Patrick's High School and Saint Mary's University in Halifax. He began his divinity studies at Holy Heart Seminary and graduated with a Master of Divinity from Atlantic School of Theology. Ex-Huskie White dies at age 52

David Wayne White, BA'74, died on October 4, 1996 in the QE II Health Sciences Centre, Infirmary Site after a long and courageous battle. He had a 21-year career with the Justice Department Correctional Services Division. Dave was a member of the 1973 Saint Mary's Hall of Fame football team and a member of the Colby Village Slow Pitch League.

Dave was a defensive tackle and captain on the 1973 Saint Mary's Huskies national championship football team and was known as "Big Daddy" in his playing days. Joe Simatovic, a teammate of White's on the 1973 team, said White may have been short and stocky by the standards of his position, but he made up for any physical deficiencies with fast feet and a big heart.

"He was a great leader", said Simatovic. "You wouldn't believe the quickness he had. He was an instrumental part of our winning the 1973 championship. He was our whole defensive line, really."

Dave remained a fixture around Saint Mary's football after his playing career, seldom missing a game at Huskies Stadium.

He recovered a fumble in the final seconds of the Saint Mary's 19-17 win over Wilfrid Laurier in the 1973 Atlantic Bowl at Saint Mary's.

"He recovered that ball on the 30-yard line, which won it for us" said Simatovic. "There was 30 seconds left and they would have kicked the field goal. They had a real good field goal kicker and they would have beat us by a point."
