President's Message

May 25, 1972

Dear Santamarians:

It is my pleasure to be President of this potentially powerful group of people fortunate enough to have had some benefits of a so called higher education.

The New Saint Mary's University Act specifies the University's objectives as follows:

- 4.0 To aid in the improvement of society in all ways consistent with these objectives.

I support these objectives and plan to question how successfully they are being carried out.

The Alumni Objectives for 1972-73 include the following:

1. To continue and to improve our present social plans e.g. Annual Dinner in December and the New Year's Eve Dance.
2. To improve our communications with the Alumni, the University and the community.
3. To strengthen the Alumni position in regard to the policies and practices of Saint Mary's University.

One of the important responsibilities of the Alumni Association is the nomination and election of 6 members of the Board of Governors of Saint Mary's. Any nominations that you may have should be brought to any member of the Alumni

New Program in West European Studies

Saint Mary's University will launch a West European Studies Program in September 1972 designed to prepare young Canadians for the political, business and cultural challenges of an expanded European Economic Community, Dr. D. Owen Carrigan announced.

Through involvement in the program, believed among the first of its kind in Canada, students will be able to relate their own disciplines to the contemporary affairs of Western Europe, he said.

The President believes that in the next 10 years there will be increasing demands in business, the professions and public life for graduates whose university training has given them sound understandings of the economics, political systems and cultures of Western Europe.

According to Professor C.J. Terry, chairman of the West European Studies Committee responsible for the program, the rapidly developing EEC "is assuming great significance for Canada as her most important market after the United States."

This is particularly true since the EEC is now being enlarged by the admission of Britain, The Republic of Ireland and Norway.

"The federal government is endeavouring to encourage the expansion of commercial links with the EEC, especially since the internal and external trade of that grouping will soon represent 40 percent of the world total", said Professor Terry.

In the program to be presented by Saint Mary's, students will choose electives from history, language, economics, theology, political science and English courses which deal to a large extent with Western Europe. "This will insure the program retains its academic integrity while remaining relevant to current affairs," Professor Terry said.

The above courses are already available at Saint Mary's and can be grouped in ways which will provide quite comprehensive introductions to this important field of area studies, said Professor Terry.

In later years it is hoped that these offerings will be supplemented by the addition of new courses such as geography and fine arts.

Professor Terry said the program will be open to students whose major concentrations are in Classics, English, French, German, History, Economics, Political Science or Spanish.

Within each major concentration at least three courses concerning Western Europe will have to be taken.

Students whose areas of major concentration will not permit this, or whose special areas are not listed above, will select courses in consultation with the West European Studies Committee, comprising faculty members participating in this program.

Those entering university at Grade 12 with five credits and pursuing the minimum requirements for a Bachelor of Arts degree will have three electives to choose outside their major concentration once they have satisfied the language requirements of the program.

Languages will be an important part of the program since French is the official language of the Common Market and German is its most important secondary language.

According to the West European Studies Committee the program will be integrated through a West European Studies Seminar - a non-credit discussion group which will meet four times each academic year to hear eight papers by students from participating departments under the advice of their respective professors.

Further integration of each student's academic experience will be achieved by requiring the presentation, at the end of the final year, of a 5,000 word paper on a topic selected by the West European Studies Committee.

Students will have a fairly wide choice in courses offered for this program "but these allow numerous coherent patterns of study which should give a sense of orientation and of participation in a community enterprise."

Professor Terry said all students participating will be advised in selecting their courses by the West European Studies Committee "which will encourage them to profit from the inter-disciplinary nature of the program, and to develop a more specific awareness of the background to their major areas of concentration."

Prior to receiving university Senate approval for the new program, the committee sought information and advice from a number of federal government departments and American and European universities.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Father O'Donnell:

It is a long time since our paths have crossed and I doubt if you will remember me, but time passes and we can't do much about it.

I am passing the following information along to you to use in your "Snippets" column if so desired.

Today I received a letter from an old friend of mine, a member of the staff of the old Saint Mary's College on Windsor St. I haven't seen him for forty years but have been in touch with him by letter several times in the last five years. That man is Brother Lynam. He is now 89 years of age.

In his letter he states the location of other members of that staff, known to the boys of that time. They are as follows, (the only ones alive) Brother Loftus, Rome. Brother Keef (I think Iona College). Brother Cooke (California). He passes along his best wishes to all the boys of the old building, with the blessing of God on them. In the event of anyone wanting to write to him his address is as follows, Brother C.A. Lynam, Iona Prep. New Rochelle, N.Y. 10804. U.S.A.

Hoping that this may be of some use to you.

Thanks
Edward J. Feetham,
P. Engr., Class of 1932.

NEW DEGREE OFFERED

A Bachelor of Science in Engineering Management is a new degree to be offered by Saint Mary's University in September, Dr. D. Owen Carrigan announced recently.

The purpose of such a degree-granting program is to provide students with sufficient engineering and management background to enable them to find employment in engineering managerial positions, he said.

The recommendation for its establishment came from the university senate's curriculum committee following lengthy discussions and approval by both the engineering and commerce faculties.

"We find that industry and business often require an employee to have not only an engineering background but managerial skills for certain positions.

"At the moment, these positions are being filled by

DR. BRIDGEO APPOINTED CHAIRMAN

Dr. W.A. Bridgeo, dean of science at Saint Mary's University, has been elected chairman of the Atlantic Provinces Inter-University Committee on the Sciences (APICS).

His three-year term of office begins July 1. APICS is the science committee of the Association of Atlantic Universities and is comprised of representatives of 17 colleges, universities and government research stations in the four Atlantic provinces.

Dr. Bridgeo succeeds Dr. J.J. MacDonald, academic vice-president of St. Francis Xavier University.

PRESIDENT VISITS UNIVERSITIES IN ENGLAND

Dr. D. Owen Carrigan, president of Saint Mary's University, will spend the next few weeks in England touring a number of universities at the invitation of the British Council.

Much of the time will be devoted to universities offering extensive business administration and education programs similar to those taught at Saint Mary's.

However, of special interest to Dr. Carrigan will be visits to the University of Birmingham which offers a program in Latin American Studies and to the Centre for Contemporary European Studies at the University of Sussex.

Saint Mary's recently announced it will introduce a West European Studies Program and open a Centre for Education on International Development (Latin America) next fall.

"Visits to these two universities will provide a great deal of information which we may find useful," said Dr. Carrigan.

Saint Mary's is also interested in the "Open University" concept now in use in England and some parts of the United States. Research into its local application has been underway at Saint Mary's for some time.

Dr. Carrigan wants some firsthand knowledge about this multimedia to provide university education to a wider segment of the population and will hold talks with a number of officials involved.

Visits to the Institute of Education at the University of London and the Television Centre of the Inter-London Education Authority, plus a number of the country's newest universities, have also been arranged by the British Council.

Dr. Carrigan will be accompanied by his wife on the trip.

Honorary Degrees Conferred

Internationally-known Canadian contralto Maureen Forrester and two Nova Scotia university educators James L. Ryan and Harold G. Beazley received honorary doctorates at the May 8 Convocation of Saint Mary's University.

Each received the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters.

Both Dean Ryan, of the engineering faculty, and Dean Beazley, of the commerce faculty, are graduates of Saint Mary's and together have devoted a total of 66 years to teaching at their old university.

Miss Forrester is well-known to Halifax audiences having made several concert appearances locally during the past ten years, one only recently.

Often called Canada's Musical Ambassador, Miss Forrester began study of the piano at the age of five in her native Montreal, but it was not until her voice had fully matured in her late teens that she decided on a singing career.

Under the careful tutelage of Bernard Diamant, a prominent Dutch baritone, Miss Forrester found her natural voice placement and began to build a concert repertory.

After gaining experience through local engagements in churches, before clubs and social organizations, as well as radio, she made her formal recital debut in Montreal in 1953. This led to orchestral engagements under Sir Ernest Macmillan, Otto Klemperer and Josef Krips, and to recital tours of Canada.

She began her conquest of Europe in 1955; the following year the United States succumbed. The years since have seen her rise to the heights until today she is considered one of the greatest vocal artists in the world.

Last summer Miss Forrester was the Dido in two performances of Purcell's Dido and Aeneas at the Caramoor Festival, Katonah, N.Y. At Tanglewood she appeared with the Boston Symphony and Seiji Ozawa in Brahms' Alto Rhapsody and with Leonard Bernstein she performed as guest artist in Beethoven's Missa Solemnis.

During that same period, she travelled to Aspen, Colorado, for a series of her now famous master classes. She also gave several concerts.

In the months ahead Miss Forrester will be appearing in concert in New York, Minneapolis, Ann Arbor and Edmonton, and will be guest artist with a score of leading North American orchestras with concerts in Los Angeles, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Denver, Montreal and Toronto.

Miss Forrester has sung with virtually every leading conductor and orchestra on six continents including the great Pablo Casals at the famous Puerto Rico Festival.

Dean Ryan, a native of Halifax, graduated from the Nova Scotia Technical College in 1935 after receiving his undergraduate engineering training at Saint Mary's. He later received his Bachelor of Science degree.

Prior to beginning his teaching career in 1942 at Saint Mary's, however, Dean Ryan put in some lecturing time at Memorial University and worked for both the transport and national defence departments.

When he first started there were only 45 engineering students in Saint Mary's three-year diploma program. Today, there are almost 200 registered. And during the intervening years, Dean Ryan has seen at least 400 of his students become professional engineers with many of them living in the United States.

Because of the rapid advances in technology, changes in the university's engineering curriculum have been phenomenal "so much so, that today the courses offered bear little resemblance to the courses taught 30 years ago".

"When I began at Saint Mary's we were graduating only a few engineers each year — now we are among the top suppliers of students to the Nova Scotia Technical College. This year we expect to send them 30," said Dean Ryan.

It's a long way from the small second-floor room in the university's old Windsor Street structure. Today, Saint Mary's engineering students have five times the floor space with proper engineering labs and classrooms and modern equipment.

According to Dean Ryan, students haven't changed too much over the past 30 years. However, they do seem much more knowledgeable today and enquire a great deal more. But the choices offered to engineering students have widened considerably since the early days. There are more opportunities for individual interests".

Dean Ryan expects to take a well-earned sabbatical in the coming year during which time he plans to continue his research on the Hampton Court Palace, outside London.

Originally built by Cardinal Wolsley, the palace was acquired by Henry VIII and was the principal residence of British sovereigns until the death of George II. Dean Ryan has been carrying out research on the delineation between the original structure and the additions made by Sir Christopher Wren for King William and Queen Mary.

During his years at Saint Mary's, Dean Ryan was also the officer commanding the university's C.O.T.C. contingent.

A native of Dartmouth, Dean Beazley began his teaching career at Saint Mary's immediately after graduating with a Bachelor of Commerce degree in 1936.

At that time, he was the only full-time professor on the Commerce staff and shared a small, third-floor office with two other professors in the old Windsor Street building where the Saint Vincent Guest House now stands.

Today, the Commerce Faculty has a staff of 30 full-time professors plus additional part-time faculty, and an impressive home in the university's new multi-million dollar Ignatius Loyola Building on the Robie Street campus in southend Halifax.

In 1937, Saint Mary's graduated three Commerce students. This May, out of a 1972 graduating class of 450, 106 received their Bachelor of Commerce degrees.

Dean Beazley has witnessed enrolment in his four-year Commerce program grow from 40 in 1936 to 720 full-time, and 225 part-time students in 1971-72.

"We have grown, and rather rapidly during the past five or six years, to become the largest Commerce Faculty in Atlantic Canada and in the process we have picked up a national reputation for excellence in the quality of undergraduate program we offer," said Dean Beazley.

He said the university had been able to attract many "able and dedicated" scholars to the Commerce faculty and because of their hard work more and more students were being attracted to the program they offered.

Over the years, there have been some "far-reaching" changes in the Commerce curriculum. "The classroom discussion approach is also more in use now rather than the traditional lecture method of instruction," according to Dean Beazley.

Like Dean Ryan, Dean Beazley doesn't find anything "basically different about today's students". He feels, however, that the "explosion of technology has expanded their interests and I find they have more knowledge about world events than those much earlier students".

Dean Beazley has taught accounting, economics and business administration courses during his 36 years at Saint Mary's.

New Academic Vice-president

Nova Scotia native Dr. D. Hugh Gillis has been appointed academic vice-president of Saint Mary's University effective August 1.

In making the announcement Dr. D. Owen Carrigan, president of Saint Mary's University, said Dr. Gillis had been selected from many applications received from academics in Canada and the United States.

Dr. Gillis, who is director of the Coady International Institute, will replace Dr. Gerald W. Tait, S.J., who has been appointed president of Regis College, Toronto.

"Dr. Gillis comes to Saint Mary's highly qualified not only in academic achievements but in administrative and professional experience acquired as a teacher, staff officer and regimental commander, as an advisor in public affairs broadcasting and educational television, and as a community development organizer," said Dr. Carrigan.

Born at Glen Alpine, Antigonish County, Dr. Gillis graduated from Saint Francis Xavier University in 1939. He served with the Canadian Army in Europe from 1941-45.

In 1948 he received his doctorate from the London School of Economics and Political Science. During his undergraduate years he majored in history and philosophy. In London he concentrated on political science and communications.

Dr. Gillis returned to Nova Scotia and taught at Saint Francis Xavier University from 1948 to 1950. He then left for a two-year tour of duty in Korea with the Canadian Army. He holds the rank of Lieutenant Colonel in the reserve.

In 1952, Dr. Gillis was appointed to the faculty of Marymount College, New York. He returned to Canada two years later to become program supervisor and later assistant national supervisor of public affairs for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, Toronto.

Five years later, in 1959, Dr. Gillis was appointed to the faculty of Boston University. He remained there for 11 years. During this period he also served as chairman of the broadcasting and film division of the university's School of Public Communication and co-ordinated its graduate-training program.

In 1968, he took leave of ab-

RECORD CONVOCATION

A record of 522 degrees and diplomas were conferred at the May 8 Convocation of Saint Mary's University — the largest graduating class in its 170-year-old history.

An all-male institution until only a few years ago, almost 20 percent of this year's graduates are women.

Men dominated the awards, however, with commerce graduate (magna cum laude) Allan P. Boudreau, Halifax, receiving the 1972 Governor General's Medal plus the Birks Gold Medal for great distinction in Commerce.

Gold medals were also presented to arts graduate Mark F. Teehan (magna cum laude), Dorchester, Mass.; science graduate Philippe J. Doucet (magna cum laude), Wedgeport, N.S.; engineering and science graduate Brian L. Russell, West Lawrencetown, N.S.; and education graduate Michael G. Jeffrey (summa cum laude), Halifax.

Included in the degrees conferred by the Most Rev. James M. Hayes, chancellor of the university, were 201 (B.A.); 135 (B. Comm); 53 (Bsc); 95 (B Ed); five (B Sc and Dip. Eng.); 23 (Dip. Eng.); seven Master of Arts in Education and three Master of Arts in History.

Of the 522 graduates, 130 of them earned their degrees late in 1971 but did not have them conferred because Saint Mary's held no fall convocation.

While the only summa cum laude (highest distinction) went to Mr. Jeffrey, seven others received their degrees magna cum laude (with great distinction) and 15 cum laude (with distinction).

Those graduating magna cum laude, were: Mark F. Teehan, Dorchester, Mass.; Mary Ann Boudreau, Meteghan, N.S.; Philippe J. Doucet, Wedgeport, N.S.; Allan P. Boudreau, Halifax; Vernon A. Alward, Salisbury, N.B.; Valerie Louise Scranton, Dartmouth; and Michael H. Shields, Cornwall, Ontario.

Those graduating cum laude were: T.C. Broadbent, Halifax; Paul P. Giroux, Dartmouth; Michael J. Joyce, Portland, Maine; M. Susan Hay, Bathurst, N.B.; Dr. Charles P. McFadden, Halifax; John M. Bury, Halifax; Patricia Ann Coolen, Halifax.

Cyril R. Coughlan, Halifax; Eva June Landry, St. Peters, N.S.; Michael R. Legere, Rinkney's Point, N.S.; Marie Estelle Theriault, Halifax; Andrew G. Carras, Halifax; Richard J. Neveu, Halifax; Donald A. Bayer, Dartmouth; and Robert C. Fowler, Halifax.

Saint Mary's also conferred three honorary doctorates at convocation. Internationally known Canadian contralto Maureen Forrester and Nova Scotia educators James L. Ryan and Harold G. Beazley each received the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters.

Miss Forrester gave the graduation address while commerce graduate Maurice G. McGillivray, Halifax delivered the valedictory on behalf of his classmates.

NEW DEGREE OFFERED

professional engineers who are no longer required to use the full potential of their engineering training," said J.L. Ryan, dean of the fourth year, they can do so by taking two more engineering courses in place of their electives. They may then, if they wish, proceed to the Nova Scotia major areas already taught at Saint Mary's."

Commerce Faculty Dean, H.G. Beazley, said that it's quite common for a student to complete a course in professional engineering and follow it up with a Master's Degree in Business Administration.

"The purpose of the new degree program at Saint Mary's is a modified version of this arrangement."

"It will also release professional engineers for the work their five-year educational program has equipped them to undertake," said Dean Beazley.

The program being offered is broad in scope and offers the student a balanced diet of courses in engineering, business administration, physical sciences and the humanities.

It is designed principally for admission for Grade XII but provision is also made to enable a student to enter from Grade XI and complete the program in the normal three-year period.

Plans are also included to permit a transfer to Commerce or to any other faculty with a minimum of dislocation and loss of credits should students change their minds after the first year.

Dean Ryan said the program will conform, as far as possible, with the requirements for a sense, and under contract with the Canadian International Development Agency, spent two years as Director of the School of Adult Learning at the University of Botswana, Lesotho and Swaziland in South Africa.

Never really far from home, Dr. Gillis made two successful attempts to represent the Antigonish riding in the House of Commons by running in both the Diploma in Engineering. If students wish to qualify for their engineering Diploma in Engineering during the fourth year, they can do so by taking two more engineering courses in place of their electives. They may then, if they wish, proceed to the Nova Scotia major areas already taught at Saint Mary's."

As with other degrees, 20 credits will be needed for the Bachelor of Science in Engineering Management degree. Six of these will involve engineering courses and five courses in management. Others will be drawn from the natural sciences (two), humanities (three), mathematics (three), and there will be one elective.

Dean Ryan said students entering the program from Grade XI will be required to take Math 110 in the first year and Physics 110 and Math 210 during the following summer. With these extra credits they will have the same status as students entering from Grade XII.

Dean Beazley said that during the student's third and fourth years in the program, they will be required to take courses in economics, accounting and business administration including those involving organizational behaviour, marketing, production, finance, control and business policy.

During this same period they will be required to take courses in computer programming, graphics, surveying, fluid mechanics, thermodynamics, electric circuits and mechanics.

He returned to his native province in a more permanent way in 1970 following his appointment as director of the Coady International Institute at his old university.

Dr. Gillis, who has a number of publications to his credit, is married to the former Celia Hamilton of London, England. They have three children.
