Alumni strength reaches 20,000

Dear Alumni,

On the cover, the Alumni Association welcomed over 1,000 new graduates at Spring '93 convocation. This is a milestone as there are now over 20,000 alumni worldwide. In just 10 years, Saint Mary's Alumni Association has almost doubled in size, showing the incredible growth of the University. Not just in numbers, this growth is evident through the success and diversity of our graduates. From our Science program to our Executive MBA and our Continuing Education grads, Saint Mary's is front and centre around the world.

Celebrate this milestone with us over Alumni Weekend, October 15, 16 & 17, (see pages 6 & 7).

In this issue, lots of news – two new Deans, a new branch in Vancouver, another successful Annual Meeting, career profiles, and our 1993-94 alumni executive which will plot its course for the next year at its annual one day summer retreat.

By the way, we love to publish photos, so send them in with your snippets!

Vancouver branch up and running

Thanks to the enthusiasm and efforts of Geraldine Dunningan, BA '88, the Vancouver Branch is off to a great start. In March, a small but keen group got together for a pub night. In June, many more Vancouver area Santamarians attended a reception at Harbour Centre hosted by Dr. Ken Ozmon, President of Saint Mary's and Anne Mussett, Director of Alumni. And more fun was had by all afterwards at a popular Irish Pub, the Blarney Stone in Gastown. Geraldine Dunningan and Don Haliburton, BComm '82 have lots of great ideas for future events so watch for your invitations! And let us know if you find any lost Santamarians in the Vancouver area - Dean Durnford, BA '89, was spotted on the beach!

Alumnus takes case to Veterans Appeal Board

IT IS A SUNNY THURSDAY morning in Charlottetown Prince Edward Island. In a small hearing room on the main floor of the D.J. MacDonald Building - national headquarters of Veterans Affairs Canada - Pensions Advocate Mary Ann Burke-Matheson, LL.B, BA '71 is preparing to argue the first of six cases before the Veterans Appeal Board.

At stake: the entitlement of a World War II artilleryman to a disability pension for hearing loss.

Nearly 50 years have passed since the 73-year-old man saw overseas service. During two punishing years in Europe, he was immersed in the constant din of artillery fire. Although there seemed to be no immediate effect, his hearing is now all but gone.

The issue before the Veterans Appeal Board: after all these years, can a sufficiently strong link be established between the man's hearing loss and his military service to warrant a disability pension?

As a lawyer in the Bureau of Pensions Advocates, Mary Ann Burke-Matheson has argued hundreds of similar cases.

"A request for a disability pension may be made at any time," Mrs. Burke-Matheson says. "for WWII veterans, we must establish that the disability is related to service to receive pension entitlement. These cases rest heavily on the veteran's service record and on independent medical evidence - usually the opinion of a specialist who can relate the disability to the veteran's military service.

More than 10,000 Canadians — veterans or their dependents, peacetime service personnel, members of the RCMP, persons who have served in Special Duty Areas, and members of the wartime Merchant Marine — apply for these benefits each year. Lawyers with the Bureau of Pensions Advocates successfully represent a significant number of the claimants.

The Bureau is a separate agency within the Veterans Affairs portfolio. The lawyers work as independent representatives of individual clients. As with legal matters in the private sector, the Bureau's clients enjoy a solicitor-client privilege in their dealings with the Bureau's lawyers.

Mary Ann Burke-Matheson is one of 37 lawyers currently employed by the Bureau. A graduate of Saint Mary's University (BA) and of Dalhousie University (LL.B), Mary Ann worked several years in private practice before joining the Bureau of Pensions Advocates in 1984. After an 18-month posting in Regina, Saskatchewan, Mary Ann was transferred to the Charlottetown office in her native Maritimes.

"I love the job because it gives me an excellent opportunity to use the full range of skills I developed in law school and in private practice — particularly my advocacy skills. I work with clients from across the country, many of them extraordinary people who are highly appreciative and deserving of our efforts.

Dedicated law professor earns teaching award

AS A YOUNGER MAN, David Townsend, BA '75 had his professional sights swinging between two choices - teaching or law. In 1979, he resolved the dilemma by combining the two in a teaching position with the faculty of law at the University of New Brunswick. On Thursday, May 27, the good judgement David Townsend showed in making that decision was confirmed at the university's 164th Encaenia in Fredericton.

At its graduation exercises, UNB acknowledged the outstanding achievement David Townsend has made in teaching law with an Allan P. Stuart Award for Excellence in Teaching.

The awards, which were established in 1972, recognize outstanding teaching on the basis of nominations from students and faculty. They are named in honor of the late Allan P. Stuart, a respected professor of chemistry from 1946 to 1973 and one of the first recipients of an excellence in teaching award.

Prof. Townsend regards receiving this teaching award as the "honor" of his life. "I think when you put so much into your teaching and then receive an award that's student-led, it's the greatest tribute you could ask for."

The students, for their part, in their nominating tributes expressed as much appreciation of David Townsend. One nomination described him as the "the epitome of what a good university professor is." Another said, "His ability to motivate is among the best. His presentation and his preparation are incredible." Still others said "excellent presentations, enthusiastic, concerned, very approachable" and described him as "an

I regard this as a very important service — the legal representation of those who have rendered an invaluable service to their country."

On that sunny Thursday morning, the artilleryman certainly had cause to be appreciative. The decision based on Mary Ann's thorough, well-presented arguments: full pension entitlement for his hearing loss.

David Townsend

active mentor of first-year students."

Working with first-year students is an especial source of pleasure for David Townsend. "Their freshness, their excitement, their nervousness, their earnestness — everything about them is fun," he explains. "They try so hard; they work so hard. I think if someone said I couldn't teach first-year students anymore, I'd leave the job. It's that important to me."

With the exception of a two-year industrial exchange as senior policy analyst with the federal Department of Communications in Ottawa, Prof. Townsend has been teaching courses in administrative law, administrative law problems, law and society, property law, real estate transactions, and trade regulation since joining UNB 14 years ago. The rewards, he says, come in facing the tasks of his profession. "It's the challenge of teaching. I find I'm all the more challenged by the more difficult courses. It's the fun of interacting with students."

A believer in being prepared to teach his classes, David Townsend estimates he spends from three to six hours in preparation for each hour spent in front of the class. His reputation for presentation includes using props to get points across. For example, he has come to class dressed as the Lord High Chancellor of England, replete with flowing robes and the Great Seal of England — made from the lid of a container of car-body compound.

Whether in flowing robes or not, the law professor requires similar preparation from students. "I say to the students, 'Look, our obligation is equal. You and I both must prepare in advance.' Once I do that, their observations about the material can be as valid as mine," David Townsend explains. The obvious result of this collective preparation is the motivation for which this exceptional teacher is noted. "If I can communicate a sense of excitement about the material and the challenge of making sense of what we both had to read in preparation, then the classes will be very stimulating."

A magna-cum-laude graduate with a bachelor of arts degree from Saint Mary's University, David Townsend obtained his LL.B from Dalhousie. "While I received an excellent articling opportunity following my first law degree, I decided to pursue an offer of graduate study at Osgoode Hall Law School at York University in Toronto. The offer came with a scholarship, a fellowship and an assistantship," he relates. Following his LL.M from Osgoode, David Townsend went to UNB and says he hasn't looked back since.

Two new deans appointed

Dr. Terry Piper, Education

Since the last edition of the Maroon & White, Saint Mary's has appointed two new deans, including the first woman to hold such a high academic post. Dr. Terry Piper, who came to Saint Mary's in 1990 as a professor of education and director of the English as a Second Language Centre, was appointed Dean of Education in January 1993. At the time, she said, "I am honored to be Saint Mary's first woman dean, although I must say it is about time. After all, an overwhelming majority of students in the Faculty of Education are women and Saint Mary's has some very impressive women among its faculty."

Dr. Piper received a BA in English and an MA in linguistics from the University of New Hampshire and has a PhD from the University of Alberta. After working as a high school teacher, she began to teach English as a second language during her post-graduate years, becoming deeply interested in second language acquisition in the process. From 1977 to 79, she was an assistant professor of elementary education at the University of Alberta. In 1979, she became assistant professor of language education at the University of British Columbia, with a side appointment as visiting professor in linguistics at the University of Calgary. From 1985 to 1990, she was associate professor of curriculum and instruction at the University of Calgary. She is the author of Language for All Our Children, a textbook on language acquisition which grew in part from her experience of working with immigrant children in Prince Rupert, B.C.

Dr. Scott Carson, Commerce

The new dean of the Frank H. Sobey Faculty of Commerce comes to his post with a background in which university teaching and business have been inextricably mixed. As a student of economics and accounting at Mount Allison University in the late 60s, he spent summers working in accounting and engineering. He then moved to Toronto to work for the accounting firm Ernst & Young (then Clarkson Gordon). Bitten by the academic bug, however, he returned to his studies, first to Dalhousie for a BE and MA, then on to the University of London for a PhD in education and philosophy.

Dr. Terry Piper

Dr. Scott Carson

In 1981, Dr. Carson joined the Mercantile Bank of Canada as an account manager, leaving to teach at Queen's University between 1982 and 1984, then returning to the bank. In 1985, he joined the Chemical Bank of Canada as Assistant Vice-President, and in 1987 moved to the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce (CIBC) as a general manager, and then vice-president in corporate banking. In 1991, he became head of the bank's Corporate Finance Division. Recently, he has taught part-time in the MBA program at the University of Toronto.

Speaking at the annual Commerce Society dinner in March, Holger Kluge, president of CIBC said, "Dr. Carson has moved from the academic world to the private sector, and is now going back to academia...Dr. Carson brought his university skills to CIBC and now he brings private sector skills to the University. Everyone benefits."

Women's work is never done

Iris Niemi

Iris Niemi, a senior researcher with Statistics Finland, recently spent three months working with Dr. Andrew Harvey of the Economics Department, who runs the International Time Research Group. Her subject is measuring time-use, particularly the time-use of women.

Why measure women's work? "Because men's work is mostly visible, but the work women do for the most part is invisible," says Ms. Niemi. "In Canada, as well as the entire world, there are strong demands to make women's work visible. To be visible means to be measured." More and more women are entering the workforce, but they remain responsible for domestic work. Although in 1990, 40 per cent of the Canadian labor force were women, women still do 67 per cent of the domestic work.

Ms. Niemi's research is not just statistics for statistics sake. In Finland, she says, "we made some recommendations on how to make people's lives more human, not so over-burdened." As a result, working hours were reduced from 40 to 38 hours per week.

Bulgarian represents international students

Second-year science student Boris Mirchev was recently elected to represent the almost 300 foreign students who study at Saint Mary's. Boris is from Bulgaria. He is fulfilling his ambition to study in North America by doing a double major in biology and chemistry as part of the University's pre-medicine program and hopes eventually to return to Bulgaria to start a social health clinic.

Research grants soar

For the second year running, the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council (SSHRC) grants to members of the faculties of arts and commerce have risen sharply. The 17 grants totalling $345,898 represent an increase of 72 per cent over last year—and this in a year when SSHRC funding is frozen! Six Saint Mary's sociologists received grants, three of them in the field of crime and punishment. Researchers in the departments of English, geography, history and management also received grants.

Science grads receive major research awards

Three 1993 science graduates will pursue careers as research scientists with the help of major scholarships from the Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council of Canada (NSERC). Two received the council's top NSERC 67, of which only 55 are awarded each year.

Mathematics graduate Raelene Driscoll will use her NSERC 67 award of $21,300 a year to acquire an MSc from Waterloo University. Biology graduate Dawn Gordon, also an NSERC 67 recipient, will earn a PhD at the University of New Brunswick. Claire Brown, whose major is chemistry, received a scholarship worth $15,600 a year which will allow her to pursue her PhD in bio-physical chemistry.

Order of Canada for Irish Studies co-ordinator

Dr. Cyril Byrne was named a Member of the Order of Canada in January, one of four Nova Scotians among the 75 Canadians appointed to the order. Dr. Byrne is honored for his contribution to education, especially for his part in establishing the D'arcy McGee Chair of Irish Studies. He also helped establish the Atlantic Canada Institute and summer schools in the 1970s and was one of the instigators of the Atlantic Canada Studies program at Saint Mary's.

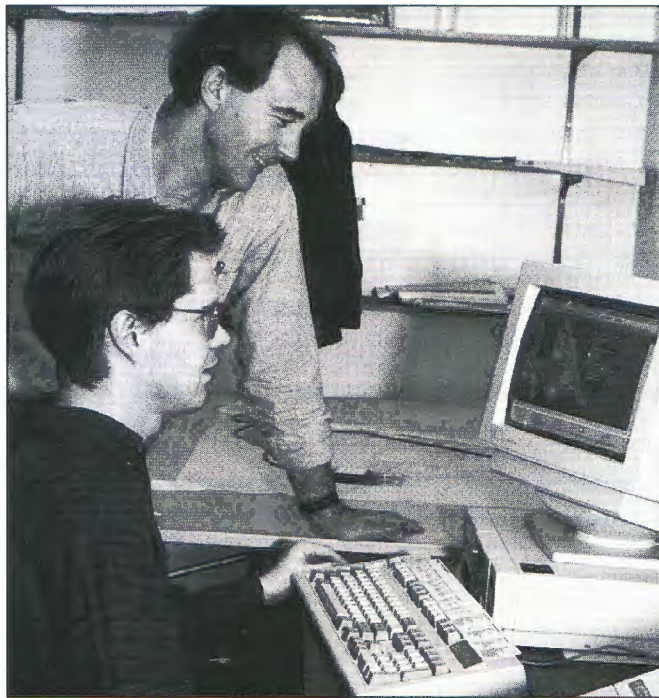

Dr. Cyril Byrne

Reacting to oil spills

An oil tanker is steaming into Halifax Harbour. Something happens, the hull cracks and oil starts leaking out. The wind blows the oil slick towards Cole Harbour. How should emergency services respond?

Dr. Peter Ricketts of the Geography

Department and honors student Derek Fenton are working on a computer-based map which could eventually help protect Canada's 244,000 km coastline by guiding emergency response planners who must decide what to do in such a nightmare situation.

Dr. Peter Ricketts, top, and Derek Fenton

The prototype environmental sensitivity map, which covers the Cole Harbour to Lawrence-town Beach area, indicates which parts of the coast are most sensitive to oil spills. "We take into account how coastal sediments retain oil," says Dr. Ricketts. "If you have a rock coast, the oil usually stays on the surface and gets washed away fairly quickly. If you have mud, oil gets into all the little grains...and could stay many years." Is the area used by birds? Is it a shellfish habitat? Is it a recreational area? Explains Dr. Ricketts, "You could have a rock ledge which is not sensitive in a physical sense, but if it is a haul-out area for seals, it would be more sensitive."

Diploma in Management Accounting offered

September sees the start of a post-graduate diploma in management accounting offered by Saint Mary's in conjunction with the Society of Management Accountants of Canada (SMAC). The DMA consists of 20 workshops held on alternating Saturdays between September and June. The program is designed to bridge the gap between the basic accounting training contained in traditional BComm or MBA programs and the advanced knowledge needed by professional accountants. Those who graduate from the program will be ready to sit the entrance examinations of the SMAC, the first step towards attaining the designation Certified Management Accountant.

For information contact Lois Wasteneys by phone at 420-5527, or fax, 420-5455.

Commerce students visit Asia

Ten Saint Mary's international marketing students had a chance to practice what they learned in class when they visited South Korea and Taiwan in February. The students represented Nova Scotia companies on a trade mission sponsored by the International Trade Centre of Industry Science and Technology Canada, the Asia-Pacific foundation, local companies and Saint Mary's.

The students, who were accompanied by MBA Director Dr. T.S. Chan and EMBA Manager Bonnie Kirby, evaluated market possibilities for the companies they represented and reported their findings when they returned.

MEDICINE IS about helping people lead better lives and one area in which this can be done with dramatic results is by replacing hips which have degenerated through arthritis or for some other reason. The victims of these conditions suffer acute pain and often become immobile but, through the skill of the orthopaedic surgeon, diseased hips can be replaced with artificial ones made of metal and plastic and normal life can be resumed.

Ten thousand Nova Scotians have received this wonderful gift and four members of the Saint Mary's family are involved in the program that has helped them. Alumnus Dr. Gerald Reardon is an orthopaedic surgeon who performs over 100 of the operations a year; long-time Huskies' physician Dr. David Petrie is also an orthopaedic surgeon at the Victoria General Hospital and alumnus Gregg Curwin, a former football Huskie, works for a company that manufactures the hips. Dr. Basil Gorgono, a retired orthopaedic surgeon, has the sometimes doubtful pleasure of being a close neighbour of the University. The author is assistant director of public affairs at the University. She had a total hip replacement in May and is slowly convalescing, with hopes of returning to many pursuits previously made difficult or impossible by her arthritic hip.

GERALD REARDON SAYS He has been reading the Maroon & White since he was five years old.

This is because the Reardon family is part of the strong Roman Catholic tradition of Saint Mary's. Gerald's brother Peter ('73) attended Saint Mary's and, "My father was a member of the Commerce class of '43 and I have uncles and cousins too numerous to count who went there," he says. The University medical centre is named for his uncle Henry who was the University doctor for many years.

Although Saint Mary's became a non-denominational institution in 1970, the Reardons have remained faithful to it and many family members have served their alma mater. Gerald's uncle Donald was president of the Alumni Association executive from 1984 to 1985 while Gerald himself is finishing a year as chair person of the Annual Fund and has just been appointed an alumni member of the Board of Governors.

Why does he do this? "I feel I should give something back to the place. It has had a lot of input into what has happened to various members of my family." He adds, "I am proud of the fact that I went to Saint Mary's, and have become more so over the years because I think the University has really become a major player in the University scene in the Maritimes. I have been very impressed by the growth of Saint Mary's."

Gerald Reardon— orthopaedic surgeon

Gerald went through medical school with the idea of going into general practice. He says, "In my day and earlier, Dalhousie Medical School had a very strong leaning to internal medicine. The training was oriented to that rather than surgery." It was not until his internship that he saw orthopaedic surgery for the first time. "Instantly it displaced general practice in my mind as what I wanted to do. It was the most exciting thing I had ever been exposed to."

After two years in general practice in Sydney, where "I finally got to see and treat real people," he did a residency in the orthopaedic training program at Dalhousie, then in 1981 moved to the University of Toronto to do a fellowship. In the summer of 1982, he returned to Halifax and joined the staff of the Halifax Infirmary and the Camp Hill Medical Centre, to which he is still attached, although this also makes him part of the orthopaedic program at Dalhousie University.

Gerald Reardon has never regretted his choice. His practice includes both trauma, which is dealing with the results of accidents, and reconstructive surgery (new hips, knees, shoulders). He performs between 75 and 100 hip and knee replacements each year. "Joint replacement is a major part of what I do in my practice," he says. "I feel that there are very few, if any, surgical techniques devised in this century that have provided such an improved quality of life for patients." Of hip replacement, he says, "It is a tremendous operation, with 90 to 95 per cent excellent results. It has changed the lifestyles of so many recipients...made them active members of the community again."

Joint replacement makes financial sense too, explains Gerald. "In Canada and other industrialized countries governments are looking at what should be funded for the future in an attempt to put the health care dollar where it will do most good. There are some treatments that are performed where the outcome will not stand up to critiquing, but joint replacement studies already done in Scandinavia show they are immensely cost-effective." He explains, "If older people cannot walk because of severe pain, they end up in a nursing home or need expensive home care. If you can return them to mobility and independence, pain-free, that has tremendous economic implications."

His work brings Gerald great personal satisfaction. "You really have the feeling at the end of the day that you have accomplished something for the good of your patients," he says.

2. Dr. David Petrie— mending the Huskies

BACK IN 1972, DR. DAVID Petrie received a call from Al Keith, coach of the Football Huskies, asking him to see a football player called Angelo Santucci. He operated on Angelo's knee, and the following year the Huskies won the Vanier Cup "I subsequently operated on a number of fellows from that team," he says.

Dr. Petrie's connection with Saint Mary's grew from this. "I felt they needed an orthopaedic specialist because of the number of bone, joint and ligament injuries and once I started looking after the football team, all the other players started to arrive," he says. Today he is orthopaedic specialist to all the teams and runs a Monday night sports medicine clinic at the Tower.

Dr. Petrie replaces around 150 hips and knees a year as part of his busy orthopaedic practice, and says "I have done over 2,000 since I got here in 1970." He certainly doesn't need extra work, so why the Huskies? "I guess I am interested in sports myself. I played basketball at the university level and I played football. I find it very exciting to work with young people who have made a major commitment to sport."

Dr. Petrie has never missed a Vanier Cup and remembers 1988, when Saint Mary's star quarterback suffered a hairline skull fracture two days before the game. "The hardest thing I ever had to do was to tell Chris Flynn he could not play."

David Petrie— surgeon

Extracts from an interview with Dr. David Petrie published courtesy of The Chronicle-Herald and The Mail-Star. The interview was by Clare Mellor.

Research has vastly improved artificial joints in the last 20 years, but scientists haven't been able to build a joint as durable and finely tuned as that created by mother nature. "Nature designed our joints to be lubricated with joint fluid so there is very little friction," said Dr. Petrie. "One of the problems is we've never been able to duplicate that with our materials—to get the coefficient of friction as low as it is in nature."

"We've made great advances...but there are still problems with the perfect design of components. As our instrumentation gets better and our materials get better, we will do a better job," he said.

The hip joint is one of the easiest to replace. The artificial joint is comprised of a metal stem with a stainless steel ball attached on the end. The ball snaps into a socket lined with durable plastic. During a hip joint replacement, the surgeon reams out part of the patient's upper thigh bone, or femur and fixes the metal stem inside, where it is usually secured with orthopaedic cement. In some cases, the procedure is performed without cement, the bone then grows round the metal, holding it in place. The socket is fixed to the pelvic bone with screws. Sometime the patient's pelvis is carefully machined to hold the socket in place.

3. Gregg Curwin— Former Husky, now medical salesman, is part of the team

GREGG CURWIN ('90) SEES himself as part of the orthopaedic team, albeit a humble one. He is a sales rep for Howmedica, a division of the American giant, Pfizer Hospital Products. As he says, he supplies the hardware used by the surgeons. "We provide equipment for both trauma surgery and reconstructive surgery." He explains, "Reconstructive surgery entails hips, knees and shoulders and trauma is when you fracture a bone. They use hardware to fix it; screws, rods, plates." Although he works with nurses, to explain the products to them, his real job is "to convince the orthopaedic surgeon that I have a product which will suit his needs, right from the type of material, whether it should be titanium or cobalt chrome."

He explains that the hardware for a total hip replacement costs between $2,000 and $2,500 depending on what type it is, and that each hip comes with the trays of tools required to perform the operation.

How did Gregg join the orthopaedic team? He came to Saint Mary's in 1985 and played with the football Huskies for five years, including the 1988 Vanier Cup near miss. Summers he spent working in bars, "My Apartment" and the "Thirsty Duck" among them, and as a summer student with IGA Bolands, for which he thanks IGA president Fred MacGillivray.

In 1990, with his football days over and his BComm in his pocket, Gregg says, "I worked full time as a junior financial analyst with Bolands IGA, and then I went with an industrial company as a sales rep. I found that extremely boring and I said 'If I am going to stay in sales I must get into something challenging, interesting and rewarding, both professionally and financially'."

His interest in orthopaedics began while he was being treated by Huskies' long-time team physician, Dr. David Petrie. "When Dr. Petrie operated on me I stayed awake and watched on the monitor," remembers Gregg. "I thought, 'This is neat' and it did not bother me." In 1991, he saw an advertisement for the job with Howmedica and applied, although he did not have the required medical background. "But my mother is a nurse," he laughs, "and Dr. Petrie was wonderful. He told the company I had the capability."

Once accepted, he had to learn the trade. "They sent me to the company's North American headquarters in New Jersey for three weeks. This combined an intensive sales course with product knowledge. We did actual surgery, using plastic bones." However, his real training began when he went to work in Newfoundland in October

Gregg Curwin

1991. "I practically lived in the operating room at the St. John's Hospital," he says. "The surgeons there treated me wonderfully; they used all our products. I learned a tremendous amount. They said, 'Ask anything, any time.'" Despite his toughness, he admits, "The first actual hip replacement that I watched, I was quite queasy." He is still learning and says, "I like going down to the medical library and getting into the journals, it is a whole new language."

Gregg loves his job, but how long will it keep him challenged? "I see my colleagues, the other sales reps, who have been with the same company for as much as 20 years, and they all say they love it and would not change a thing. It is such an evolving segment of medicine. Everything changes every year and there is always something new, including new developments in joint replacement." He adds, "I hope I do not get bored. Right now I view myself as an apprentice. It is an industry with a very long learning curve and I still feel I only know the tip of the iceberg."

4. Basil Grogono— Friend and neighbor of Saint Mary's University

DR. BASIL GROGONO AND his wife Sonia became neighbors of the University when they moved to Gorsebrook Avenue in 1987, but Basil's association with Saint Mary's goes back longer than that. He chaired the Pan-Am Wheelchair Games in 1982, an event which brought the blue running track to campus and which "Was important in establishing the philosophy of sports for the handicapped," he says.

In 1992 and 1993 Saint Mary's was the site of the Halifax section of "Hip-Hip-Hooray", a nationwide walk to raise awareness of joint replacements and funds for research. Basil chaired the walk both years. In 1992, over $1 million was raised across Canada and this year the the Halifax walk alone raised $20,000.

Basil Grogono

Basil Grogono— orthopaedic surgeon

Orthopaedic surgery chose Basil Grogono, rather than the other way around. After qualifying in London in 1945, he became involved in the aftermath of war, working in a special unit for war casualties. Then he was posted to Benghazi, North Africa, where at the age of 25 he found himself in charge of surgery in a civilian hospital attached to the British military administration. The war was over, but, "There were a lot of injuries from people picking up bombs and that sort of thing."

"Then I came back and did my proper training in England for 10 years," he says. It was in the 1950s that he assisted with his first hip replacement operation, a technique started shortly before in France. "They were good for about six months to a year," he says, "then they broke up." Subsequently, he became more interested in spinal injuries and in arthroscopy of the knee, which was being pioneered in the 1960s. In this procedure, the joint is examined using an arthroscope (a miniature telescope) inserted into a small incision. Now many operations are performed through another small incision, with the surgeon watching his work on a TV monitor via the arthroscope. This technique has spread to other areas of surgery and Basil says, "It is becoming the biggest breakthrough in general surgery."

In 1959, the Grogonos came to Canada; Winnipeg to be precise. Why? "It was a land of great opportunity and I was frustrated with the English system. We had four children and prospects were slow," says Basil. In 1969, he moved to Halifax to be the orthopaedic surgeon in the fledgling program at the Halifax Infirmary, where he remained until 1982. While there, he tried to establish arthroscopic surgery and eventually, the hospital became one of the leading centres for this procedure.

He describes his subsequent career as "peripatetic." In 1983, he moved to the North West Territories because, "They needed somebody up there and I wanted to do something different." His work included, "travelling to clinics in the Arctic from Spence Bay to Hay River, that is 3,000 miles." Before returning to Halifax in 1987, he also worked in Bermuda, where orthopaedic surgery and motor bikes go together. "There were 2,000 motor cycle injuries a year, including 200 serious ones and several deaths," he recalls. Although Basil has done over 100 hip replacements in his life, he describes himself as "a general orthopaedic surgeon interested in trauma injuries rather than joint replacements."

Retirement certainly hasn't dulled Basil's enthusiasm for his profession, and he follows orthopaedic research keenly. He believes that early diagnosis and treatment with drugs could eventually make joint replacements obsolete, although, "as a temporary measure, it has provided tremendous benefit to thousands of people."

FATHER WILLIAM A. STEWART TEACHING MEDAL

Mission: make them love learning

DR. JANET BAKER HAS BEEN crusading the hallowed halls of Saint Mary's for over twenty years. The mission of this dynamic powerhouse of an instructor is simple in nature: bringing the love of learning to each and every one of her students.

Dr. Baker debuted at SMU in 1967 in the department of English and quickly became known for her personalized style of teaching, as well as her concern for students.

"My approach to teaching has been influenced by the work of teachers who have made a lasting impression on me," says Dr. Baker. "All of them possessed a zeal for the subject matter and a real concern for students as individuals, even when the classroom had more than a hundred students in it."

This idealism is highly apparent in Dr. Baker's own classes. In order to make her classes more interesting, she uses a number of different techniques: her classes may be treated to tape recordings of music from relevant time periods or hustled off to a local theatre to see performances of class-related texts - like the 200 level class outing to see Mel Gibson play Hamlet, two years ago. Nothing special you might think. But how many other professors would go so far as to sing verses from the Canterbury Tales for her students? Or herd them all out in the dead of December for rousing renditions of everybody's favourite Christmas carols? She may not be a Karaoke queen, but this zany way of teaching is what endears her to the many students who have passed under her wing.

Dr. Baker's ongoing emphasis on cultural enrichment stems from her belief that it will help students bridge the gap between the literature they study and themselves.

"The perennial appeal of Hamlet's dilemma or Chaucer's comments on the nature of life never change in their immediacy for generations of students." She feels that by bringing them as close to that particular time period - through looking at the way of life, the political ramifications, the governing morality and social mores, "...they can better understand the nature of the piece."

Dr. Baker's philosophy of teaching is extremely personal; she strives to ensure that her students find themselves through literature.

"If the students take the readings seriously, then despite their age or generation, they will reconsider their own lives in connection with the matters that are at the heart of living a full and rich life."

In 1976, Dr. Baker left SMU to complete her Ph.D at Dalhousie, and was awarded her doctorate on May 12, 1977. She returned in 1978 as an assistant professor.

In her first two years at SMU, Dr. Baker served on the now defunct Student Life Committee, an organization formed to oversee matters pertaining to the quality of residence life. She also served on the Committee on Academic Standing, the Student

"...especially the students. I don't feel there is any place for inappropriate or unfair behaviour in the classroom and we must have this [committee] in order to see that justice is served."

Outside the classroom, Dr. Baker maintains a warm, nurturing presence. No matter what time of day, there are always students lined up outside her door to get some career counselling, letters of recommendation or plain old good advice. No problem is too small or too big, and Dr. Baker often rises beyond the call of duty to help out her students.

In the late '70's, two sisters with advanced cases of muscular dystrophy enrolled at Saint Mary's, and one of them went on

"The greatest strength of this course is the instructor's interest. Dr. Baker has an incredible amount of energy; she is always digging up things related to the course. She must truly love the Renaissance, because with her twisted sense of humour, she could make ten times the money writing sit-coms or Far Side Cartoons."

Another Bakerite EGL 406.0, 1993

Discipline Committee, and the University Senate.

Because of Dr. Baker's sympathetic nature, she has often had to field complaints about other professors - putting her in a rather awkward position. Dr. Baker chose not to ignore the problems, but help create an effective venue for their resolution. Along with a few colleagues, Dr. Baker helped to establish the English Department Equity Committee - the first of its kind at the university - which tackles grievances of unfair treatment and questionable classroom ethics from students.

"Everyone should be treated with dignity and respect," Dr. Baker emphasizes.

to major in English. On bad weather days, when the young woman was unable to get to the university, Dr. Baker often went to her home armed with films for discussion to provide her with the same creative learning environment that all of her other students had. When the student died, some years ago, Dr. Baker played a vital role in establishing a scholarship in her honour.

Dr. Baker is not just a professor or an educator or an instructor. She is a teacher, par excellence, who in her students' own words, "...has been a source of inspiration for literally thousands of students." Hence the name "Guru Baker."

1992/93 Annual Fund exceeds its goal

The 1992/93 Annual Fund Campaign was an overwhelming success with the support of 1301 alumni and friends, 105 spring graduates and 430 parents of Saint Mary's students, who we listed in the spring issue of the President's In Touch newsletter. As of July 2, 1993 $242,015.53 was raised from all our donors averaging $114.66 per gift. We acknowledge and thank the following contributors who helped to bring us 46 per cent over our goal.

BUILDING ON STRENGTH CAMPAIGN

Campaign approaches $7 million mark

by Colin MacMillan

Only nine months into the appeal, the Building on Strength Campaign has already reached over half of its $12 million private sector objective and continues to grow! The campaign is an attempt to meet the needs resulting from years of growth in student numbers while physical resources have remained static.

The campaign is also helping to find private sector partners to fund innovative programs undertaken by the university. A recent gift by the Toronto-based Max Bell Foundation to the Saint Mary's Vietnam Linkages Program will help to foster greater understanding between Canada and the long-isolated nation of Vietnam.

In addition to appealing to Canada's foundation community, other segments of the Building on Strength Campaign have made significant progress. Approaches to the nation's businesses have brought their combined contribution to $2,306,000, and the appeal is continuing under a full head of steam.

One of Saint Mary's long-time supporters, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, recently pledged $90,000 to the Campaign. Bank President, Holger Kluge, who addressed the annual Commerce Society Dinner in March as guest speaker, and Vice-President, Craig Burrows, visited Saint Mary's to present the cheque and were enthusiastic about their latest contribution to education in the region. "During the last thirty years," Mr. Burrows said, "CIBC has donated in excess of $235,000 to Saint Mary's various campaigns. Through its donations program, CIBC tries to support local community needs."

The desire to contribute to Saint Mary's seems to be catching. After a visit to the Atlantic Centre of Research, Access, and Support for Disabled Students by two executive members of Nestlé Canada, the corporation pledged $45,000 to the Centre. The Atlantic Centre helps disabled students adapt to university life and provides special services when the students require them. The Centre uses state-of-the-art technology to overcome previously insurmountable disabilities.

Two major fundraising areas, launched in June, are the appeals to the University family - specifically the University's Faculty and Staff. Only a month into the program, the faculty and staff of Saint Mary's have responded with almost a third of their $220,000 goal!

The next major event in the Building on Strength Campaign will be the approach to Saint Mary's 15,000 alumni. This phase is scheduled to begin in October after alumni receive an information brochure regarding the Campaign. This initial contact will be followed up by phone contact from a current student. The Campaign has targeted alumni for more than $1 million in total gifts which, according to the Director of University Advancement, Don Keleher, is a realistic and attainable goal.

"Over the last 15 years endowment funds have increased thirty fold, thanks largely to the generosity of our alumni," Mr. Keleher says. "Saint Mary's grads know the importance of supporting their alma mater."

Infinity plan— a new way to contribute to Saint Mary's

SAINT MARY'S UNIVERSITY provides several ways for donors to contribute to the ongoing strength of the University and to support its deserving students — capital campaign, alumni annual giving, scholarship and bursary funds, life insurance gifts, and bequests by will, among others. Each method helps the University and students. Each responds in a particular way to donor preferences and requirements.

Saint Mary's is now introducing two additional vehicles - - - a first-in-Canada plan without the usual insurance applications or medical reports, and an arrangement by which donors receive life income from their gifts through annuities issued and guaranteed by registered life insurance companies designated by the donor.

All the plans qualify for charitable contribution credits against income tax.

Under the new Infinity Plan, donors provide Saint Mary's with a simple pledge form authorizing the University to purchase, with part of the donor's contribution, a specially-designed policy up to $100,000 on the donor's life, from Great-West Life Assurance. The donor names Saint Mary's as owner and beneficiary. No insurance applications or medical examinations are required from donors, who can use their own or other names as a permanent memorial and designate general or specific purposes of the University for their gifts.

The new gift annuity program involves transfer of a donor's gift to Saint Mary's by way of a deed of agreement, authorizing the University to work with a life insurance agent designated by the donor to arrange a commercial annuity for the amount stipulated by the donor. The insurance company issues and guarantees the annuity, and the University, as owner of the contract, becomes entitled to any amount remaining after the donor's death.

down, "the plastic part of an artificial joint will eventually wear away," said Dr. Petrie.

Most joint replacements are done on weight bearing joints such as the knee and hip, although surgeons are now giving people artificial shoulders, elbows and fingers. Research will make artificial joints even more sophisticated, but other options like human joint transplants are also being looked at in Canada.

"Ultimately, we should be able to transplant joints from someone who dies like we do a heart or liver transplant," said Dr. Petrie. "I foresee we'll be able to do knee and hip transplants within the next generation. Technically, we can do it now—the problem is immunological reaction," he explained.

About 700 hip and 700 knee replacements are done on Nova Scotians every year—usually because of severe arthritis, which destroys the surface of the bone. Most joint replacement patients are above age 60, but younger people whose joints have been destroyed by tumours, disease or accidents, receive a small percentage of joint replacements.

"I say to my patients: 'Look, I cannot make an Olympic runner out of you, but I can give you a normal gait so you can perform activities of daily living'," Dr. Petrie said. "I have many patients with hip replacements who play golf and can walk 18 holes. I have one chap who played singles tennis, which is very demanding and many patients who cross-country ski."

Advanced Accounting Program for Commerce Degree Holders

The Society of Management Accountants has created a ten-month intensive program of study to prepare recent commerce/business graduates for the Society's Entrance Examination. Beginning in September, Saint Mary's University will conduct Saturday workshops in Halifax, led by highly qualified instructors, that will take candidates through those syllabus areas that go beyond a Bachelor of Commerce degree. Using integrative learning materials designed for this program, candidates will be well prepared to challenge the Society's national Entrance Examination. Saint Mary's University will award a Diploma in Management Accounting upon successful completion of the program.

Candidates who pass the Society's Entrance Examination will then undertake an additional two year program of professional studies addressing topics such as strategic management, decision-making, problem solving, cost strategies, leadership, managing change, ethics and performance management. The prestigious CMA designation is granted to those individuals who successfully complete three rigorous academic studies with appropriate accounting and managerial work experience.

New coach wants to revive winning tradition

by Claudine Laforce

UPON ENTERING the small, temporary office being used by Paul Boutilier in the Department of Athletics and Recreation, you can't help but notice the memorabilia of past Saint Mary's teams plastered on the walls. And then the words are heard "We are here to compete and bring back the old winning tradition of Saint Mary's hockey."

This year's team will have a new face, and not just behind the bench according to Hockey Huskies new Head Coach, Paul Boutilier. "I want to change the image of our hockey program. The team will be run as a professional team. We'll have heat in the rink. Past championship banners will be hung from the rafters and photos of past winning teams will be hung in the dressing rooms."

From one look at his desk, you know he's serious about the mission. On the top right corner of his desk are a stack of New York Islander training schedules and directly in front of him are kit folders which he is stuffing. When questioned about them, Boutilier says, "I want to ensure that every player coming to try out for the team is in top physical condition when he arrives. I also want these players to know that I'll keep them up-to-date with what is happening, so I'm including a set of clippings on the team. We are here to win and compete with the elite in the league."

'We are here to win and compete with the elite in the league'

Paul Boutilier

BUT BOUTILIER MAKES NO bones about placing academics over the team's win record. "The hockey program will incorporate the goal of competing at a high level of excellence, while most importantly maintaining a high degree of academic achievement during the university experience."

Boutilier is a fine model for the team in this aspect. While playing professional hockey with teams including the Stanley Cup winning New York Islanders, he took university courses to keep up his academics because he wanted to ensure there was life after hockey. He came to Saint Mary's two years ago to finish his commerce degree and he will continue with his courses this year. "As a coach, it's always good to keep a hand in the academic side; be familiar with the courses. I want to be there to support my team members on the academic side as much as possible." To this end, Boutilier has made Monday an off day from training. "After practising and playing on road trips during the week and weekend, the players really need that day off physically and mentally to keep up with their academics."

The game atmosphere will also be quite different from previous years. "We plan to make attending a hockey game at Saint Mary's a real event. We've just installed a new heating system for the rink and we plan to add music and reserved seating for the fans. On opening night we'll be having members of past teams in attendance showing their support for our program. We want everyone to know they are welcome including Saint Mary's employees."
